Final Meeting Of The Board Of Education

Regrets Expressed at the Departure From the Board of Mr. B. F. Ackerman]— Photographs of Retiring Chairmen Will Be Hung in the Board Room

The final meeting of the Board of Education for the past year was held last evening with Mr. B. F. Ackerman, the retiring member in the chair. At the close of the evening Mr. W. H. Hill expressed his regret at the retirement of Mr. Ackerman and also suggested that a suitably framed photograph of Mr. Ackerman as well as each succeeding chairman of the Board be secured and hung in the Board room. A resolution to this effect was adopted by the Board. "No man has given more faithful service to the Board in the past twelve years than Mr. Ackerman," said Mr. Hill.

THE BALLOT BOX.

"The ballot box is a strange thing and produces strange results," observed Mr. Eastwood. Mr. Ackerman's departure from the Board will be a distinct loss to the city. He was thorough and conscientious in all his relations to the Board.

Mr. W. H. Miller said that Mr. Ackerman's retirement from the Board was brought about by men who had failed to appreciate the service rendered by Mr. Ackerman. "In retiring from the Board he may feel proud of the fact that he did his work well and that his services were appreciated by those who knew him. Similar sentiments were expressed by Mr. John Crane.

In reply Mr. Ackerman voiced his regret in severing his connection with the Board. His twelve years of service with the Board were full of pleasant recollections. He had endeavored to serve the city to the best of his ability, but at the same time, felt that a younger man would fill the position just as well.

Peterboro' Boy Got Word of Quaker Oats Fire Being Sent To Ships at Sea By Wireless

The military school of radio telegraphy conducted by Sergt. Instructor Lorne L. Hicks, of Peterborough, is nobly accomplishing successful work, but has had many interesting experiences. The students are mastering the intricacies of electricity, wireless instruments and code messages. Towards the end of their course they take out a wireless apparatus, instal it somewhere in the country and communicate with the school. Some of the men desire to obtain certificates as a "commercial wireless operator," and having obtained them are qualified for a good position after the war.

A lieutenant of the last class is now taking up aviation in England and will soon be flying. At the same time he will be able to talk by wireless to the field posts.

The radio class is privileged to receive messages from wireless stations all over the continent, including Key West, Miami, Fla., Cape Cod, ships at sea and others. Sergt. Hicks received the news of the Quaker Oats disaster the day it happened, from one of the Atlantic stations which was giving the war and other news to ships at sea.

The S. O. S. alarm calls saved eighty ships' passengers and crew during the past year, thereby affording an example of the ability of science to thwart or lessen the dangers of the sea. On the battle front the same service is rendered. The French army has thousands of small wireless sets along its front. Sergt. Hicks speaks of the interesting feature of the war news flashing through the air to America from European stations. About 10 a. m. Canadian time, Hanover, Ger., opens up with its tale of victories; England reviews the situation next, then France and Russia follow with accounts of the actions on all fronts. This is how some of the war news is received, including the "via Sayville" versions.

A Wireless Trick.

A ship is always supposed to call the shore station and the shore not to call the ship. A ship which had left a U.S. port for Europe was called by a U.S. coast station and asked if they had seen the sub. The boat said it had not. Whereupon hearing this, an unknown answer came from somewhere near, saying, "The U53 was sighted (in a certain place) the day before."

"Who are you and what is your nationality?" the operator queried.

The operator too quickly supplied the information, and asked, "Who are you?" The answer was prompt, "German sub. U53, good-bye."

Interested in Electricity.

Sergt. Hicks has been interested in electricity since his early school days and had an extensive practical and theoretical knowledge of its many branches before the war broke out. He had applied himself to wireless experiments and readily qualified for the instructorship at Kingston.

Women Teachers of the City Want Increased Remuneration

Matter Will Be Dealt With By the Board of Education in Time For the Re-appointment of Teachers For the Year 1917-18—Leave of Absence Granted to Mr. W. H. Walkey—Reports Received.

The women teachers of the city are among the latest aspirants for higher salaries, claiming that the present salaries are inadequate, and that unskilled women are receiving wages equal to the teachers. A communication to this effect was received by the Board of Education at a meeting held last evening. It was signed by Miss Clara Adams, President of the Women Teachers' Guild of this city, and represents the view of the members. The communication pointed out that the value of the Canadian dollar had depreciated to sixty-seven cents, so that the maximum salary of $700 paid to the teachers of this city is in effect,only worth $469. The teachers suggest that the maximum salary be raised from $700 to $900, with a graduated scale of increases.

Existing Contracts.

Mr. W. H. Hill did not see how an increase could be financed at the present time, as there was nothing in the appropriation to meet such a demand. In view of the fact that the existing contracts with the teachers do not expire until mid-summer, it was decided to refer the matter to a committee who will deal with it in time for the re-appointment of teachers which takes places about June ot this year.

Mr. Gordon said that the matter should be dealt with as early as possiule and an adequate amount provided in the appropriation.

It was generally agreed by the Board that a salary increase was inevitable. In the meantime steps will be taken to secure information relative to the scale of salaries paid in other cities. If the present plans of the Board are carried out the increases will take effect next September.

Leave of Absence.

The leave of absence granted some time ago to Miss Ross of the Public school teaching staff, has been extended as Miss Ross at present is not in condition to resume her duties. Leave of absence was granted Miss Dorothy Sage to facilitate an operation.

Mr. W. H. Walkey, who has served on the Public school teaching staff for twenty-nine years, was granted leave of absence for six months, five of which will be without pay. Inspector Mowat was given authority to secure necessary supply teachers.

No Objection.

Mr. H. M. Bishop wrote to the Board asking for permission to send his daughter Muriel to the Convent school. The Board will reply to Mr. Bishop stating that no objection will be taken to Mr. Bishop sending his daughter to the Convent school.

Appointments.

Miss Ruth Bristol of Madoc, was appointed to the Public school teaching staff.

Mr. J. D. W. Magee was re-elected to the Public Library Board.

Night Classes.

Mr. V. Eastwood reported that good progress had been made by the industrial classes during the winter. The future prospects for this branch of educational work were excellent, said Mr Eastwood.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Gonnocon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise 'his Ointment enough.'"

CARD OF THANKS

I desire to thank the citizens of Peterborough for their kindness in contributing to the fund for the Children's Shelter that was undertaken by myself. CARD OF THANKS

I wish to take this opportunity of thanking all those, who assisted in any way and voted to secure my election to Reeve of North Monaghan. As Reeve I will endeavour to work to the best interests of the whole township. Wishing all the compliments of the season, I remain.

Yours faithfully,
HAROLD B. RYE.

"THE MESSIAH"

The Peterborough Choral Society under the direction of Mr. John Allan, gave an excellent rendition of "The Messiah" at St. Paul's Church last night. Seldom has the Society appeared to better advantage than in this presentation of Handel's grand old oratorio which, in spite of its age, sustains its appeal through the glories of its rich setting to the simple narrative of the first Christmas. And the Choral Society has a particularly fine record of achievement, but in their latest effort they scored a triumph they will doubtless find it difficult to surpass. The chorus appeared as it were, rejuvenated, moved by a new interest, power and effectiveness that inspired the members with enthusiasm and stamped their performance with a finish it is a pleasure to mention. They sang with a manifest enjoyment of their work and in many little ways exhibited their surrender to its sentiment.

The message of "The Messiah" is appropriate and timely to the present season in a double sense. It provides an eloquent expression of the spirit of Christmas, is deeply religious in its tone and conception and perpetuates the story of Bethlehem. On the other hand its lines seem directly applied to the present in "Why do the nations so furiously rage" and the parting benediction that was the very purpose of Christ's life and sacrifice as conveyed in the reassuring passage. "Peace on earth, good will toward men." "The Messiah" therefore, is almost traditional to the observance of Christmas, probably since its first presentation in Dublin in 1741. Handel caught up the angelic message, and in sublime measures resounded it through the years, even the centuries, as perfect a reminder as man could endow it that the Messiah had truly come.

The chorus of eighty voices or there abouts excelled itself in this production. Its volume, precision and tonal qualities were displayed at the outset in the lines beginning "and the glory of the Lord."

There was a delicacy of expression of the lines "For unto us a child is born." Then came the stirring "Glory to God" vigorously sung, and with nice balance and finess. Particularly notable, however, was the mighty "Hallelujah" chorus and the impressive "Amen." In these the singing was most effective and was naturally the triumph of the performance. The clean cut attack, the exceeding finish, and withal the maintenance of tonal balance and smoothness marked the Society in its present form for a high place in the records of local singing. Mr. John Allan handled the choir with a sureness and confidence that educed the desired effects in all the passages. It was practically a flawless performance within the limits of the fixed resources of vocal and accompaniment powers.

Very satisfying, too, were the soloists. Mr. Albert Downing left little to be desired in the tenor parts. His best passages were "Behold and see if there be any sorrow" sung with befitting delicacy and the contrasting spirited "Thou Shalt break them." In the chorus, too, in which he accepted many an opportunity for effective work his voice was comparatively conspicious.

Mr. Marley R. Sherris made a good impression as bass soloist. While not especially robust it is of pleasing tone accentuated by fine control and enunciation. Miss Pearl Steinhoff, contralto and Miss Dorothy Allan really shared the honours of the evening. Miss Steinhoff possesses a rich voice which at times seemed to assimilate the beautiful "woody" quality of the oboe or flute accompaniment of certain organ stops. There was a delicate spiritual effect in her singing of "Behold a virgin shall conceive," and a depth of expression in the lament." "He was despised and rejected."

Miss Allan was in splendid form in the soprano solos. The aria "Come unto Him" she sang with exquisite tenderness, and the exacting "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion." was admirably rendered. Miss Allan was at her best in the divinely beautiful aria "I know that my Redeemer liveth." Her voice was resonant and richly coloured, and ranged through the soprano passages with nice shades of expression. The accompaniment by Mr. T. J. Palmer, A.R.C.O., at the organ was a fine example of appreciation of Handel's score. His use of the resources of the instrument was noticeably extensive and exact. Miss Flowers as assisting pianiste accentuated the richness of the melody in various parts and otherwise strengthened the background to the chorus.

Altogether it was a highly praiseworthy production deserving of a much larger audience than the faithful few hundred that enjoyed it.

Red Cross Address By Mrs. Roger-Collins

Mrs. Alice-Roger Collins, will address a meeting of the Red Cross Society of Peterborough in the Assembly Hall of the Public Library at 4 p.m. to-morrow—Thursday. Mrs. Collins is a well known musician; but her interest and activities are not confined to that specialty. She has a large concern in patriotic objects and is well qualified to speak interestingly upon the work in whose interest she is to give an address to-morrow.

"Mother Love"

A New Play By a New Author Opens in New York Soon

A new play by a new author is always interesting for the reason one never knows when another Pinero, Ibsen, Thomas Fitch, or other talented dramatist may be discovered. Therefore, there is an unusual amount of interest attached to the engagement of "Mother Love" at the Grand on Tuesday next, January 9th.

Robert Lawrence, the author, is well known as a stage director and has revised many manuscripts for other dramatists, but "Mother Love" is really his maiden effort as a playwright. The theme has been used before in several different plays perhaps the most notable being "The Greatest Thing in the World," as played by Mrs. Le Moyne several years ago, "Madame X," a play produced by Wm. A. Brady with considerable success, and this season by Hartley Manner in "The Harp of Life," in which Laurette Taylor is appearing in New York.

However, the theme is big enough for any number of playwrights, for, after all is said and done, "Mother Love" is, without doubt, the most beautiful, sublime, self-sacrificing love of which the heart and soul is capable.

Mr. Lawrence's play "Mother Love," portrays the wonderful love and self-sacrifice of a mother for a nameless son, her love for her only daughter and the terrible ordeal of having to choose between the two. It is a big play for big people, based on a big theme, but treated so delicately as not to offend the most sensitive.

"Mother Love" is playing this week in Toronto, and after a week of "one nighters," including Hamilton, Peterborough, Kingston and Ottawa, and a week at "His Majesty's Theatre," Montreal, opens for a run in New York. The production is beautifully staged, everything being new.

Montreal Papers Out of Business

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Jan. 3.—The Morning Daily Mail and Evening News, managed and edited by M. E. Nichols and S. A. Macnab, to-day give notice that they will not issue again under the present control. The statement by the publishers said that an unexplained and unexpected action by one of the shareholders precipitated the crisis. The members of the staff have been discharged and given intimation that they would be paid in full as soon as possible. These papers have recently been vigorously assailing the tramways deal.

Omemee Carried New Hydro By-law

Considerable interest in the elections at Omemee village centered in the Hydro-Electric by-law, the ratepayers exercising their franchise in favour of the taking over of the municipal plant by the Hydro-Electric Co. This by-law carried by 111 for and 15 against.

Mr. T. J. Parsons was elected Reeve of the Village by acclamation. Councillors being elected as follows: Robt. Boyd, H. Lamb, Dr. Howden, D. Graham.

Voice of the People

Dear Sir,—I am glad some one thinks like myself, that it is not the men and family of same that are getting rich. What we soldiers' wives had to live on at the start of the war, with the cost of living up 50 to 100 per cent. higher we have, as your letter shows, no increase in our wages. If my husband had not answered his country's call he too, could have been earning at least $4 to $5 a day instead of $1.10. How does the government think a mother and eight children, the eldest just fourteen years old, can live on $40 dollars a month? It is about time the war finished in our favour or else the government should see that we are kept up to the needs of the time.

WEDDING BELLS

PATTERSON—EVANS.

In the presence of numerous friends this morning at George Street Methodist Church, Miss Ella Margaret Evans of Manvers Township, was united in marriage to Rev. Richard M. Patterson of Murray Township, Brighton. The bride was a former worshipper at George Street Church, and Rev. Mr. Patterson is one of the promising young men of the Bay of Quinte Conference, into which he was received in full connection last year. Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., officiated. After luncheon at the Empress Mr. and Mrs. Patterson left for points west.

Article 2—Lovely Shrines and Holy Places

(By the Queen of Roumania)

"It is the old convents and monasteries of Rumania that have, above all, guarded the treasures of the past. From the very first they attracted me. The Rumanian monks and nuns knew how to select the most enchanting places for their homes of peace. I have wandered from one to another, discovering many a hidden treasure, visiting the richest and the poorest, those easy of access, and those hidden away in mountain valleys.

Often, at dusk, after a whole day's riding over the mountains, I came quite suddenly upon a monastery, white washed and half-hidden amongst pines and venerable beeches. On my approach bells began to ring; their clear and strident voice proclaiming their joy. Before I could dismount I was surrounded by a dark swarm of nuns, making humble gestures of greeting, dressing themselves, falling to their knees, and pressing their foreheads against the stones on the ground, catching hold of my hands or part of my garment, which they kissed whilst they cried and murmured, mumbling many a prayer. The Mother Abbess, a venerable, tottering old woman, whose face was scared by age, conducted me towards the open Church door. From time to time she would furtively kiss my shoulder in a sort of lowly ecstacy. The other nuns trooped after us like a flock of black-plumed birds, their dark veils waving in the wind. Within the sanctuary the lighted tapers were as swarms of fireflies in a dusk-filled forest. The nuns grouped themselves along the walls, their dark dresses becoming one with the shadow, so that their faces were rendered almost ethereal by the wavering candlelight.

More pompous were the receptions I received in the larger monasteries. One of these has for me an irresistible charm: White and lonely, it is hidden away in wooded regions, greener and sweeter than any other. Perfect is the form of its church; pure white, the colonnades that surround its tranquil court; sober are its sculptures. Wherever I go there the nuns receive me with touching delight. The building forms a quadrangle round the church, three sides of which are composed of a double colonnade, built one above the other the upper one forming an open gallery running round the whole. Behind these colonnades are the nuns' small cells—little domed chambers—white-washed, humble and still. The church, large, noble of line, rich of sculpture, is fronted by a large covered porch supported by richly carved stone pillars and decorated all over with frescoes, artless and archaic.

The fourth side of the quadrangle is shut in by a high wall, with a door opening upon a path that leads towards a second smaller temple, as perfect in shape. Here the nuns are buried, the strangely shaped wooden crosses that mark the graves stand amidst high waving grass and venerable apple trees. All around the beech forests upon low, undulating hills, and, as a background, mountains, blue, hazy, unreachable, form a barrier against the outside world.

Hidden within the mouth of a cavern lost in the wildest mountain region, there lies a tiny church, so small that one must bend one's head to step over the threshold; it appears to be a toy, dropped there by some giant hand. Only a few hoary old monks guard it. No road leads to it, it lies like a secret waiting to be found out. Behind the church the hollow stretches, dark, and tortuous, into the heart of the earth. When the end is reached a gurgling of water is heard, and a spring, ice-cold, bubbles out. I have known of passionate lovers come to be married in this church, defying the hardships of the road and nature's frowning barriers.

Once I was riding through the melting snow, the road, like all Rumanian roads, dwindling away in the colourless distance, when I heard a sound that I had never heard before.

A procession, like a dream, was coming towards me from out the mist. Wading through the melting snow advanced two small boys, carrying between them a round tin platter, on which lay a flat cake; behind them came an old priest, carrying a cross in his hand, gaudily attired in faded finery—red, gold and blue. His heavy vestment was splashed and soiled, his hair long, and his beard unkempt. Close behind his heels followed a rough wooden cart, drawn by oxen. From this cart the strange sound was rising. At once I understood. A plain dead coffin was in the middle of the cart; seated around it were old women, wailing and weeping, raising their voices in a dismal lament. Behind the cart wailed four old gypsies playing doleful tunes upon their squeaky violins. Behind them came a knot of bareheaded relatives, holding lighted tapers. Through the gloomy mist they appeared to be so many ghosts.

Nothing is more touching than the village cemeteries; the humbler they are the more do they delight the artist's eye. Often they are placed round the village church, but sometimes they lie quite far apart. They are not tended and cared for as in richer lands.

On a Good Friday morning I was roaming through one of these village church yards. Each grave was lighted with a tiny thin taper. The living had come to do honour to the dead. An old woman stood quite still beside one of these tapers. But I could perceive no grave at all. All that once had been a tomb had long since been trodden into the ground. "Who is buried there?" I asked. "One of my own," was her answer. "She was my daughter's little daughter; now she is at rest." "Why is the grave no more to be seen?" was my next inquiry. "What," was the resigned reply, "is the use of keeping a grave tidy if the priest of the village allows his oxen to graze about amidst the tombs?"

There are some wonderful old churches in the country, stately buildings, rich and venerable. I have visited all, inquiring into their history, admiring their perfect proportions, examining their costly embroideries, carvings, silver lamps, enamelled crosses and Bibles bound in gold. But none of the greater buildings attract me so strongly as the little village churches in far-away corners. They lie scattered about in quite unlikely places, perched on steep hilltops, hidden in wooded valleys, often reflecting their silhouettes in rivers flowing at their base.

Tall fir trees, planted before their porches, mark where they stand. Some are all in wood, warm in colour, like newly-baked brown bread. Their steep roofs give them the appearance of giant mushrooms.

Well do I remember one evening, after having climbed an endless way, how I reached the open door of a sanctuary at the moment when the sun was going down. The villagers had sent an old peasant to open the church; a bell tolled its greeting. The last rays of the sun were lying golden on the building as I reached the door. Like dancing flames they had penetrated inside, spreading their glorious light over the humble interior, surrounding the saints' painted effigies with luminous halos. On the threshold stood an old peasant, all in white, his hand full of flowering cherry branches which he offered me as he bent down to kiss the hem of my gown. Within, the old man's loving fingers had lit many lights and blossoms had been piously laid round the holiest of the icons. When I came out the sun had disappeared and the little lights stood out sharp points of brightness against the invading dusk. Hard it was indeed to tear myself away."

TAKE NOTICE

I, the mother of an only son who has been in France in the firing line for nearly two years, but now wounded, am in need of help, as my husband has been ill and not able to work. I reported this to some one whom I really thought would look into it, four weeks ago, but nothing has been done. When my son put on the King's uniform it was to go and do his duty and this is the way his poor mother is treated. Believe me, if I had another son I would buy him a gold headed cane and tell him to wear the uniform and travel on his shape, or drop from one unit into another and then he sure would be getting a large salary. Would some kind hearted lawyer answer this through the Examiner, as I have no money, and tell me if those people cannot be made to stick to their promise that they will look after mothers of boys that they raised so tenderly. Trusting I am not taking too much of your paper.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

SOLDIERS OFF TO A FLYING START
BEAT LINDSAY IN HOLLOW FASHION

Midgets Never Had a Look-in in Last Night's Opening O. H. A. Game at Brock St. Rink the 247th Winning 14 to 2—Soldiers Look Like Crack Team.

WERE NEVER IN TROUBLE

The 247th Battalion team got away to a flying start last night when they defeated the Lindsay "Midgets" in a runaway battle by 14 goals to 2. The size of the score was a surprise to the most ardent local fan. Lindsay had tucked away Cobourg to the lopsided tune of 20 to 4, and with the 247th more or less of an unknown quantity thte dopesters had it figured that it would be a battle royal. Instead, the Soldiers romped home with the bacon on an ice surface that was more like a country road than a hockey cushion, and the Lindsay crew were never in tthe hunt. By periods, the 247th led 6 to 1, 10 to 2 and 14 to 2, and were all over the better team.

Lindsay were weakened by the absence of Chuck Carew from the forward line and Norton from the defence, while they lost the services of Art Carew after the first period, But with all three on the boys from the Arsenal town could not have averted the disaster that hit them. They showed little last night, and although the bad ice undoubtedly affected McElroy, the clever little centre man, and several of the others, it did not help the Soldiers any, and so the conditions were fifty-fifty on that score.

It was not good hockey—it could not be under the circumstances, with the puck rolling and bouncing around like a crazy thing, but the 247th showed a brand of hockey ware that makes them look like a crack team, and the fans will not be satisfied until they see them go on hard ice. In spite of the heavy going, which caused the rubber to be overskated repeatedly, they uncovered plenty of speed and stick-handling ability and even tried to play combination which, while impossible under the conditions, is promising for the future. The Soldiers have speed, weight and cleverness and should go far.

Legros, last year's junior goal keeper, did excellent work in the nets. Although the 247th defence kept the Lindsay line well out, Legros had a lot of tricky, bouncing, long-distance shots to handle, and he turned them off nicely. In front of him, Halpin and Thornton did great work on the defence and were equally clever on the attack, contributing half of the Soldiers' counters. Thornton beat O'Loughlin four times, while Halpin notched three.

The lion's share of the work on the forward line fell on Adams and Armstrong. Flanagan was only out a few minutes when he retired for the night with Read, who was sick, while Evans was dropped when Art Carew had to quit at the end of the first period with a bad gash in the ankle. Both did good work while they were on. The other pair caught the eye of the crowd. Armstrong showed clever stick-handling and speed and was always on top of the pets, while Adams tore off some beautiful rushes and did some fine shooting. The stocky right wing man of the Soldiers is a big help to the team and he and Armstrong promise to be popular with the fans.

For Lindsay, Carew was prominent while he was on. He rushed in his usual style, but found it a rocky road down the rink, as the Soldiers bodied him hard whenever there was an opening. Just before the end of the first period he received a deep gash in his foot from a skate and was off for the rest of the night. Read had retired previously, so that the last two periods were played with the teams five men aside. Haugh tried hard all the way, as did Griffis and McElroy, although the latter was lost in the slush. Richmond, who took Norton's place on the defence, was a rough and ready performer who was willing to take a bump any time to get a chance to hand one. O'Loughlin, the good little goalkeeper of the junior Midgets of two seasons ago, was one of the busiest men on the ice and in spite of the fourteen chalked up against him, played a good game in the nets.

Stan Burgoyne of Toronto, handled the game satisfactorily. The teams were as follows:

Lindsay		247th
	Goal.
O'Loughlin		Legros
	Right Defence.
Richmond		Thornton
	Left Defence
A. Carew		Halpin
	Rover
Read		Flanagan
	Centre
McElroy		Armstrong
	Right Wing
Griffis		Adams
	Left Wing
Haugh		Evans

In spite of the heavy going the pace for the first few minutes was fast and furious. Armstrong and Flanagan were penalized, but the two man advantage did not benefit Lindsay any. Then Richmond of Lindsay, drew a penalty, and while he was off Jack Adams took a pass and dodged inside to beat O'Loughlin with a neat shot for the first goal of the 1917 season. A minute later Adams made it 2 to 0 on an easy side shot. Evans missed a rebound a moment later on a shot from Adams. Read, of Lindsay, retired for the balance of the night, the Soldiers dropping Flanagan. The score board was altered again when Armstrong took O'Loughlin's measure on a neat shot. That left it 3 to 0, and Grover Halpin made it 4 to 0 when he stopped "Moose" Carew with a body check and taking the rubber away sailed down the rink for a close-in counter. Another nice shot from Armstrong sent the score up to 5, and Evans boosted it to 6 with a lone-handed rush. Then Lindsay took a hand and Carew, getting away nicely, shot from outside the defence, his side-shot bouncing into the nets. Just as the period was ended Carew had to retire and the teams were only five aside when they squared away for the second round.

Adams and Armstrong combined for the Soldiers' first goal in this period. Armstrong took a pass close in, but his shot was wide. He recovered quickly, however, and passed out to Adams, who scored neatly. Thornton added two more on pretty individual rushes. McElroy made it 9 to 2 when he took a pass from Haugh, and then Halpin tore in for the Soldiers' tenth goal, leaving it 10 to 2 at the end of the period.

Thornton made the figures 11 to 2 by a nice rush at the beginning of the third period, and then added another on a side shot. Halpin followed with another fine rush for a goal, and Armstrong wound up the scoring when he batted in a rebound off his own shot. The summary:

First Period.

1 247th Batt., Adams.
2 247th Batt., Adams.
3 247th Batt., Armstrong.
4 247th Batt., Halpin.
5 247th Batt., Armstrong.
6 247th Batt., Evans.
7 Lindsay, Carew.

Second Period.

8 247th Batt., Adams.
9 247th Batt., Thornton.
10 247th Batt., Thornton.
11 Lindsay, McElroy.
12 247th Batt., Halpin.

Third Period.

13 247th Batt., Thornton.
14 247th Batt., Thornton.
15 247th Batt., Halpin.
16 247th Batt., Armstrong.

Penalties—

247th— Adams 3, Flanagan, Armstrong, Evans, Halpin, Thornton. Total, 8.

Lindsay—Richmond 5, Haugh 2, McElroy. Total, 8.

HOCKEY FANS HAVE JANUARY 9th MARKED

The Peterborough Juniors will make their bow to the public next Tuesday night, when the Bowmanville seven will visit here to open the Junior O.H.A. season. The fans have been looking forward to this engagement with a great deal of interest and a big crowd will see the battle. The Peterborough team are all well-known boys and local followers of the game who have been following their practices are anxious to see them in action. They have been practising hard for the last three weeks and, thanks to Jerry Loughlin' coaching, and the work of Jimmy McMartin, as trainer, should go on the ice in the pink of condition. Graham, who was on the All Star Eastern team last year, and Montgomery and Chenrett of last year's juniors, all three of whom did good work in the Intermediate series, as well, are available again this year, while the forward line has been strengthened by McKee, a big youngster from New Liskeard. Young Murray, the goaler of the Sacred Heart team, has been performing splendidly in the nets, and McIntyre of last year's Junior City League champions, is doing well on the defence. There is a great battle for the left wing position which is practically the only one in doubt now. The Peterborough Club have suggested Dr. Ladiamme or Lawson Whitehead as referee. Keep the date, Tuesday, Jan. 9th, open.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The 247th team play the return game in Lindsay on Friday night of this week, while on Monday night next they will play Cobourg here.

Both teams tired very badly in the heavy travelling last night, but the Soldiers showed thee effect of Sergt. Bill Lane's training, and had more left on end than the visitors.

Cap. Simpson missed the disaster. A Lindsay hockey team unaccompanied by the Cap's fur coat and genial smile doesn't look natural. He was in Montreal and expected to get back in time for the battle, but missed connections somewhere.

The Soldiers will be a hard seven to beat when they get working together.

The fans were glad to see Grover Halpin in a Peterborough uniform again after an absence of a year in Barrie. The little Captain is playing on the defence this year.

The Peterborough Juniors will practice to-night at 7 o'clock. In view of next Tuesday's game with Bowmanville every junior player is expected out to-night and at Friday's practice.

The Oshawa Juniors with whom the Peterborough Juniors are grouped, have new players this winter in Rowden and Sleeman, Port Hope; Wilson of Cobourg, and Tumelty of Belleville. The balance of the team are home brews. Riordan, who played with Bowmanville last winter, has returned to his home in Oshawa, where he will play this winter. Joseph Jocque, the Bracebridge player, and Chilton Childs, the Union Jack and Woodstock net-guardian, have also signed with the Oshawa Intermediates.

There will be a meeting of the Church Hockey League to-night at the Y.M.C.A. at 7:30 o'clock. All churches who wish to enter teams are requested to have representatives present.

Britain's Revenue.

Great Britains' revenue for t' year ending March 31 was $1,67 875,750, against an aggregate of $. 103,206,750 for the preceding fiscal twelvemonth.

BOWLING

G. F. Cairns won the Bowling Ball for the month of December with the high score of 280. A. H. Fielder won last weeks' prise in three games with score 690. W. Henderson's score of 593 of this week for a pair bowling shoes was beaten last night by G. Cairns who run up a fine score in three games—237, 236, 191. Total 654.

Arrangements have been completed for games to be played in Toronto. There will be a practice game at the Water Street Alleys to-morrow night to pick out two 5-men teams for the journey to Toronto in the near future.

A WAR-TIME NOVELTY

"GRETNA" TAVERN A UNIQUE DEVICE IN BRITAIN.

Interesting Public House Which Has Been Fitted Up in Carlisle Was Formerly a Post-Office and is the Model Upon Which Other Supervised Drinking Houses Will Be Started—Tried Out on Navvies.

IN working its way through a maze of difficulty surrounding liquor evils in munition-manufacturing districts, the British Central Control Board has made many innovations. The board is the State Commission charged with the administration of the new liquor-selling regulations designed to prevent drunkenness among munition and shipyard workers. Already in the areas under its control the number of police court convictions has been reduced by about 40 per cent. The shortening of the hours of sale, the no-treating order, the drink-it-on-the-premises order, and the prohibition of credit have achieved a considerable reform. In some cases, to wipe out undesirable conditions, the board has had to close up public-houses, and in others to insist upon radical changes. Its reforming work has cleaned out many dives that were a most distinct menace to the workers who patronized them. But the latest innovation by the board is the creation of a State tavern in Carlisle, a model public-house. Carlisle is to be the site of some big munition plants. At present 12,000 navvies have been imported to do the building, and in course of time the factory operatives will follow. It will be easier to alter the customs of the operatives, when they begin to establish themselves in their new quarters, than it is to change the habits of the old-timers of Carlisle district, and now that the "Gretna" tavern has been opened, two others are projected. Some years ago Mr. Joseph Chamberlain tried to bring State taverns into operation, and Earl Grey worked on the same scheme, but it was left to a war commission to undertake real State business in them.

Much interest is shown in Britain in the scheme, for if successful, it may pave the way for an extended Government system, thus controlling the liquor evil as it can be controlled in no other way. The Gretna tavern is a converted post-office, and in both interior and exterior presents a new type of public-house. It is as far removed from a Gothenburg Bolag tavern or a German Bier Halle as from a British public-house of the old sort. It is neither dingy, like the pothouse, nor garish, like the new, nor "quaint," like the still newer fancy imitations of antique architecture. It is a solid stone building of dignified aspect, occupying a commanding position in a dignified street. Inside the two principal rooms are a long open bar, formed out of the old selling counter, and a large hall behind which was the sorting room. The latter serves the purpose admirably. There is a counter at which various things will be sold, tables for meals and minor refreshments, a stand for newspapers, a piano, a gramophone, and sundry conveniences. Adjoining is a well-equipped kitchen where all kinds of meals can be cooked. There are rooms for attendants and a manageress, but no sleeping accommodation. No one will sleep on the premises. The only alcoholic liquor served will be beer. Customers must drink standing at the bar. In the hall, beer will be brought to them at the table. The idea is to encourage people to stop for rational recreation by making them comfortable, but not for mere drinking. In the great majority of the 94,000 public-houses in England, Wales, and Scotland, everything has been subordinate to doing "business," selling as much liquor of high alcoholic content as was possible.

The post office was converted to its new state in three weeks, and is a new stage in liquor control in the district. The munitions factory being erected near Carlisle was begun last autumn. The preparation of the ground, the making of roads and railroads, and the erection of hundreds of buildings over an area nine miles in length brought many thousands of workmen to the spot. They flowed over the neighboring villages and into Carlisle itself, where some five thousand are accommodated in lodgings about the town. It was foreseen that the influx of so large a body of workmen, most of whom have been gathered from Scotland, Ireland, and England, would cause difficulties. They have nothing to do in the evenings, and nowhere to go but to the public-house. The local public-houses are equipped for a quiet, rural trade, and quite unfit to cope with a flood of laborers. So the board began to buy them all out, in number about 40. A few have been closed, the others are managed for the board. The "Gretna" experiment is therefore something new. It is a question yet unsolved as to how the conservative British workman will take the new style. British workmen are very slow to move from established tastes. The change from the navvies to factory workers will mean a distinct difference in the class of customer, and the new system has not yet been tried on the factory operative. A distinct increase in the court convictions for drunkenness in the Carlisle district is not due to any failure of the Government-operated tavern system, but to the influx of the construction navvies.

Prizes for Hyphen War Babies.

According to the latest newspapers, the German Commandant at Libau has announced that the German Government will give a bounty of $4.75 for a boy and $3.00 for a girl born of a Lettish mother and a German soldier father.

PARISH REGISTERS.

Records of Births, Marriages, and Deaths Are Very Precious.

How valuable old parish registers, hidden away, maybe in the vaults of a village church, are, is illustrated by the recent offer of £1,000 for the recovery of the parish registers of Cawdor, Nairnshire, for the years 1779-1783, which are wanted in connection with the settlement of an estate.

Through carelessness or ignorance of their value as records, parish registers have gone through some strange vicissitudes. A former clerk of Plungar, Leicestershire, for instance, who combined the sale of groceries with his parish duties, made the registers serve him in a business capacity by employing them to wrap up his wares. Another parish clerk cut the registers up to serve as patterns for the lacemaking of his daughters.

It has been proved that in many cases the vicar only wrote up his record at the end of the year from the clerk's note-book, and that worthy, thinking more of his fees than the instruction of posterity, was content to book only such as owed him money. One painstaking vicar who superintended the souls of Seasalter, however, was wont to append pen portraits of those whom he married, and one wonders if he took advantage of his clergyman's privilege of kissing the bride when he joined "John Housden, a gape-mouthed, lasy fellow, to Hannah Matthews, an old toothless, wriggling hag," to quote his description of them in the registers of his parish.

The origin of parish registers dates back to 1538, when Cromwell, Henry VIII.'s general, issued an injunction to the clergy to keep a record of births, marriages, and deaths. And the explanation of the gaps in ancient parish registers lies in the fact that during William III.'s war with France they were used to assist in the collection of a tax on births and marriages, which was frustrated by the parish clerks, for, as one of them naively notes in his register, "No entries were made for some years to avoid the tax."

Persia's Poet Laureate.

Persia appears to be the only country besides England where a poet laureate has been maintained of recent years. Until Musaffar-ed-Din abolished the post in 1896, the Court of Tabreez had the constantly possessed a laureate, whose duties were far more numerous than those of his British confrere.

According to Narcisse Perain, who spent some years in Persia at the beginning of the nineteenth century, court etiquette prescribed that whenever the Shah traveled outside the capital, his suite must include a dwarf, a giant, a jester, a historiographer, and a poet laureate.

The last two were kept busy, for, while the historiographer had to record for posterity all the doings and sayings of the Shah, the laureate was called upon to celebrate a large proportion of these in verse. M. Persin highly commends this custom, which he found rigidly followed, "for the Shah, knowing that many of his utterances and deeds would be crystallized in an ode, felt bound, on these royal progresses, to speak and behave majestically."

Paper Rolls in Movie Machines.

The substitution of paper rolls for celluloid films in moving picture machines, made possible by the new "cold" light discovered by the French engineer, Dussaud, which is described to the Academy of Science by Professor Branley, with whom Dausseud studied the new light, is obtained by automatic separation of heat rays from luminous rays, which occur together in all sources of light hitherto known to science.

The quest of an absolutely pure light, devoid of all heat, has long been one of the great problems of modern physics. The electric light is the nearest approach to this ideal, but far from it, as it gives off a certain amount of heat.

M. Dussaud has been working on this problem for many years. The light obtained by his method is so intense that it is possible to throw images from newspaper illustrations, picture postcards, and photographic prints on a screen, even in a lighted room, as clearly and sharply as if they were glass lantern slides.

Battleship Schools.

It is a striking testimony to the efficiency of the British Navy that school-work for the boys on board has been carried on far more assiduously since the start of the war than ever it was before. It would be excusable, even natural, to jump at the conclusion that all such studies would be dropped in these strenuous days, that every minute would be devoted to the immediate purpose of preparing for the ever-present chance of battle.

The opposite of this is the case; and the reason is, partly, that the navy is kept always in such a state of readiness and efficiency that it would not dream of allowing a thing like a war to disturb it from its calm routine; and partly that a wise forethought shows how necessary it is to prepare now the men and the officers for the navy that shall be in being when the present magnificent fleet shall be relegated to the scrap-heap.

The Value of Brains

Business success is the result of a careful and proper combination of CAPITAL and BRAINS and the lives of such men are a valuable asset to every Company, and as such should be adequately insured.

In proof of above Elbert Hubbard consulted a New York Financier who agreed to take a Bond issue for $100,000 at par, provided he held a Life Insurance Policy on Mr. Hubbard's life for a like amount. Why? Because Mr. Hubbard's brains were the CHIEF ASSET of the "Roycrofters." His mind was the THINK FACTORY, and the product of the business was the direct result of Mr. Hubbard's ideas. With Hubbard alive success was reasonably assured, but with Hubbard gone his loan would not be considered for a moment.

TO INCREASE FOOD PRODUCTION.

In a speech made before the reconstruction of the British Government Col. Churchill said that there must be a national organization of agriculture. "As we had already in the making of munitions, we should have a great organization for producing the munitions of life, just as we had a great organization for the purposes of death. All these things and more would come in the desperate resolution of the British nation not to be baulked in their object. But we must do these things now whilst there was time."

This organization of agriculture will probably be one of the tasks of the new Government. It has been contended that the soil of Great Britain, rightly used, could furnish enough food to supply its people. At least it could be made to produce far more than it does, and the country made more nearly self-supporting in regard to food. For a long time it was argued that the decline of agriculture was due to free trade, and that it could be restored by the old-fashioned clumsy device of a protective tariff. But under the new government, even if a protective tariff be established, we may expect that agriculture will be promoted in the true way—by the application of science, and by devoting pleasure parks to the production of food.—Toronto Star.

GERMANY WILL SEND ANOTHER PEACE NOTE

German People Now Frankly Informed That Victory Is Impossible

Prof. Meinecke of Freiburg University Contributed to the Frankfurter Zeitung, the Most Remarkable Article on the History of the War That Has Yet Appeared in Any German Newspaper—German Plans Collapsed at the Gates of Paris—Verdun Now Only an "Heroic Episode."

THE GERMAN PEACE OVERTURES

LONDON, January 4.—Prof. Meinecke, of Freiburg University, a distinguished historian, contributed to the Frankfurter Zeitung on New Year's Eve, the most remarkable article on the history of the war that has yet appeared in any German newspaper. Being compelled to lie about the origin of the war plans which Germany began, German writers generally have had to lie on all inconvenient events during the war. Professor Meinecke, on the other hand, adopts the convenient formula that it was only "in a political sense" that Germany "began the war as a defensive war," while in a military sense it was distinctly a knock-out war (niederwerfungskrieg).

Thus, happier than other German writers, he is able to tell the truth about the battle of the Marne, and admits that the battle of Verdun was a failure.

COLLAPSED AT THE GATES OF PARIS.

Professor Meinecke had the courage to describe the first phase of the war as follows:

"Our first object was to overthrow France rapidly and compel her to make peace. If that succeeded, we would then turn quickly and carry out the same military idea against Russia. The best prospect of success was then to conclude a final peace with England, who would be disarmed on the continent. This peace would have assumed the character of a compromise since we could not hope to overthrow England's naval supremacy.

"This whole programme, brilliantly begun, collapsed at the gates of Paris in the battle of the Marne. This battle was not a tactical victory, but a great strategical success for the French. Perhaps our programme would not have collapsed through our original strategical idea with perfect strictness, keeping the Marne forces firmly together and for the time abandoning East Prussia."

He sketches subsequent events much as follows:—That Germans took to trench warfare, the enemy did likewise. The Germans tried and failed to break through at both the Yser and Ypres Davis, while the French tried and failed to break through in Champagne. The people of Germany began to argue that the war had become a war of attrition when the Germans succeeded in breaking through in Galicia, but ultimately had to settle again in defensive positions. The British and French then tried and failed again to break through on the west in the battles of Loos and Champagne.

VERDUN NOW ONLY AN "HEROIC EPISODE."

The professor then gives the following account of the battles of Verdun and the Somme:—

"The argument used a year ago was that a decision must be sought not in the intangible distant east, but in the concentrated west, the nerve centre of the enemy's force. The decision, however, must not be a decision in the old sense. We should break through particularly at a critical position and destroy one of the most important French fortresses to prove to the French that they could no longer win. That was the origin of the undertaking against Verdun.

"This time the new politico-military idea led only to an heroic episode, but meanwhile our enemies pulled themselves together for still more gigantic achievements. England learned universal military service and the conversion of industry for the production of a mighty supply of arms and ammunition. At the same time she leaned upon the industrial strength of America. So, while Japan helped, she was able to equip new Russian formations with apparatus which we had smashed to year before. Thus in June and July, 1916, there came a great double offensive of the enemies on the east and west. The result was we had to interrupt our operations at Verdun. The enemy offensive also achieved partial successes, especially in the east, although their real object to break through and roll up our lines could not be achieved. This was due to the fact that we in the interval had still further developed our possibilities for trench warfare."

AND SO THE IDEA OF PEACE.

The professor says the battle of the Somme led to the conviction that Germany could no longer possibly arrive at a military decision in the full peace-compelling sense. So he describes the German peace overture arising naturally from the idea that the sacrifices which demanded continuation no longer bore any relation to military results, though they could be extended, and that it would be statesmanlike, intelligent, and wise to abandon the intention of destruction and seek a reasonable compromise.

As regards the real guarantees which Germany professes to require, he makes two final observations. One is that Germany has taught all the small powers of Europe they are risking their lives if they "touch the electric wire which protects Central Europe." The other is that the war has proved there are limits to the possibilities of a "knock-out strategy war between the great powers," consequently that a knock-out policy aimed at producing fundamental revolutions in European relations and power does not pay. Thus, according to the professor, the motto for the future must be "Not to overthrow but to balance."

Although no other writers have been allowed, like Meinecke, to confess German failures, his account of the peace manoeuvres is confirmed from other quarters. There is now little or no talk of German benevolence and German dislike of bloodshed. It is simply argued that the enemy ought to be persuaded to agree with Germany that a compromise is inevitable and then discuss with Germany a peace based upon the war map.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

Survey of the Live Stock And Farming Situation

Sun's Live Stock Reporter Reviews the Situation and Gives His Opinions Based on An Experience Gained by Being Every Day on the Greatest Live Stock Market in All Canada and Studying Conditions Closely.

LABOUR CURTAILS DEVELOPMENT

Canada's exports of animal produce totalled over two million dollars for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1916. The total for the year was $108,919,190, which is an increase of close to thirty millions over last year's aggregate of $76,986,032. Since the beginning of the war, Canadian exports of animals and animal produce have more than doubled.

That the export of agricultural produce is still much greater than manufactures, including munitions, is shown by a comparison of the figures for the period ending March 31 last. Agricultural exports totalled approximately $372,000,000, and manufactures totalled about $260,000,000.

While the great increase in the export of manufactured goods is due to the large munition contracts placed in Canada, which will terminate with the end of the war, on the other hand, live stock exports should increase with the coming of peace. There is the possibility of a very large permanent export beef trade after the war. The exports of cheese, butter and eggs have increased phenomenally in the last sixteen months. Figures showing the export of cheese for the year ending March 31, 1916, show an increase of 8 per cent. over the preceding twelve months. The export of bacon leaped ahead considerably over 100 per cent. in the same period, and exports of fresh beef went ahead to the extent of 200 per cent.

The likelihood of the establishment of more favourable trade connections with Great Britain, and the other Allied nations as well, should be a great inducement for the live stock breeder to increase production. It is well known that there is a world-wide shortage of meat products, and particularly of cattle.

The export cattle sent from Canada have not been able to compete with those of Argentina so far as either quality or finish are concerned. Canada was known as a beef-producing country long before Argentina sprang into prominence. The latter country's large export trade has been built up within the last decade and a half. But Argentina's large herds will be inadequate to supply the post-war demand. The depleted herds of Belgium and France must be replenished, and practically every country in Europe will need immense supplies of beef during the period of reconstruction.

WHEAT'S GOLDEN REIGN THREATENED?

Canada has the advantage of being situated closer to Europe than any of the present meat-exporting countries. Both Argentina and Australisia are much farther removed from the markets than is Canada. The release of the immense quantity of Russian wheat at the conclusion of the war will exercise a tremendous influence in bringing down feed prices. Western Canada's wheat will not find as profitable a market as it found in the closing months of 1916.

Mixed farming is coming more and more into vogue in the Prairie Provinces, and the great need after the war will be for more beef, rather than for more wheat. To take advantage of the situation which will undoubtedly arise, the grazing areas of Western Canada will be extended. In normal years, millions of bushels of coarse feeds and fodder have gone to waste on the prairies. While this has not been the case in 1916, it is certain that there will be a great economic loss in the future if there is not more live stock to enable the farmer to turn what would otherwise be waste to productive account.

The scheme of rural credits which has been evolving in the West in the last few months is a sign of the times. The news that Manitoba has adopted a rural credits scheme comes with great satisfaction to both the rural and urban populations of that province. Financial and agricultural interests have gotten together more and more in the last year, and they have found themselves on common ground in a number of matters.

The advancing of funds to farmers to foster the livestock industry is practically assured in the West. Lessons taught by the war have been organization, conservation and mobilization. Western Canada has not been slow to bear fruit. While many details remain to be arranged, the principle that is being worked out cannot fail to achieve results. The prosperity which will come to farmers as a result of financial assistance in times of pinch is certain to react on the industrial world.

Improvement in transportation facilities is also urgently needed to help farmers face the problem of supplying Europe with a supply of fresh beef. The railway problem in the closing months of 1916 proved to be very acute, and an immediate improvement in conditions does not look probable in the early part of 1917. However, railway authorities have announced their willingness to co-operate with farmers in carrying farm products to the seaboard, and present scarcity of ocean tonnage cannot prevail permanently. Car shortage and embargoes may place temporary hindrance in the paths of producers, but this cannot but be short-lived. With the Government, producers, financiers, and railways working in concert, Canada's greater live stock industry of the future looks to be easily capable of realization.

THE OPPORTUNITY IN CATTLE.

Notwithstanding the higher cost of feed, there is still as much profit in the live stock industry as ever. The advancing prices of beef cattle have fully kept pace with the increased cost of feeding. The tendency to sell unfinished cattle (for others to finish at a good profit) has been too prevalent during the past year.

Prices far exceeding those of previous years were established on the Toronto live stock markets during 1916, and these figures go to prove that this industry has not lost its money-making possibilities. On the contrary, an export demand that is practically unlimited, and an avenue for export that should be open to Canadian live stock breeders for many years, have pointed the way to profits which should be taken advantage of. Canada will produce more cattle, and will improve the quality of the beef that is to be placed on the world's marts in competition with the best that Argentina can export. The call for increased production has been sounded by Live Stock Commissioner John Bright, who has urged that the extermination of European cattle has made Canada's opportunity all the greater.

"An adequate intelligence system is needed which will collect data on the condition and quality of cattle," declared that official to the Dominion Royal Commission recently, "as well as the number. There is also need of a forecast of market conditions, so that the farmer may have the cattle ready that will be demanded at a certain time, in order to have a greater share of price."

Whereas in the past experience has taught that surplus production results in lower prices and a consequent loss to the producer, this condition

KEEP LIVE STOCK EVEN AT LOSS

In consequence of the shortage of course grain and the high cost of concentrated feeds, farmers in some sections of Ontario have been disposing of their breeding stock.

A communication sent out by the Department of Agriculture says: "It is felt that a shortage of live stock in this Province would be a very serious problem if something is not done to encourage the farmers keeping their breeding stock, even though it may appear to be at a loss at the present time. With this in mind the Ontario Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Dominion Live Stock Branch is making arrangements for a special speaker to accompany the better farming special' which will run over Grand Trunk lines for twelve weeks, beginning early in January.

A NATIONAL QUESTION.

"He will take up the question from a national standpoint, and special attention will be given to the swine industry, as it has probably suffered more than any other. A special bulletin is being distributed by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, which takes up the whole problem, and will serve as a guide to those taking part in the campaign."

WHAT THE NEW YORK PAPERS ARE SAYING.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of glass of water before breakfast each Jad Salts; take one tablespoonful in a morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralise the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

"Mother-Made, Quick Acting Cough Syrup

Should be Kept Handy in Every Home—Easily Prepared and Costs Little.

Mothers, you'll never know what you are missing until you make up this inexpensive, quick acting cough syrup and try it. Children love its pleasant taste and nothing else will loosen a cough or chest cold and heal the inflamed or swollen throat membranes with such ease and promptness. It's equally as good for grown-ups as for children.

This splendid cough syrup is made by pouring 2½ ounces of Pinex 150 cents worth) into a 16-ounce bottle and filling the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50—a clear saving of $2.

The moment it touches the inflamed, cold-congested membranes that line the throat and air passages, the healing begins, the phlegm loosens, soreness leaves, cough spasms lessen and soon disappear altogether, thus ending a cough quicker than you ever thought possible. Hoarseness and ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Excellent for bronchitis, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its quick healing effect on the membranes.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

One gray and penetrating afternoon laid its depressing fingers on Paul Burton's heart with a heavier touch than usual. Even Hamilton was wearing a frowning and unsympathetic brow these days, and when the musician saw Mary, despite the inflexible courage of her eyes, there was something in them that hurt him to the quick. He knew and shared his mother's grief, but could not bear the trace of unshed tears in her voice. So, seeking asylum from the anxious ghosts that stalked between the walls of the house, he made his way down-town and rang the bell on Marcia Terroll's door. There are women men go to in triumph and women they go to when hurt. Often they are not the same women. It was a raw, bleak afternoon of disheartened drizzle and a reek of fog which veiled the tops of the taller buildings. As he waited for an answer to his ring, he could hear the fog-horn voice groaning over river and bay as though some huge monster were troubled in its sleep.

Then Marcia opened the door and as he made his way along the four-foot hall to the small living-room he discovered that she, too, was pale and distraite.

"What is it?" he demanded with that sympathy which always lay close to the surface of his nature. To his astonishment, the girl whose courage and composure had become the reliance of his own weakness dropped on the disguised cot and buried her face in her hands while her slim figure shook to her sobbing, among the sucsions.

Paul stood embarrassed and perplexed. Then, moved by impulse, he crossed to the lounge and his hand fell with a gentle caressing touch upon her arm. "Why, little girl," he remonstrated softly, "where is your gay bravery—what has happened?"

She sat up then and almost impatiently shook his hand away. After that she rose to her feet.

"That's just it," she declared, and for the first time in their acquaintanceship her eyes shone with an angry gleam, which quickly faded again into distress. Her tear-stained face confronted him accusingly "Everybody talks about my intelligence—and my courage. That's not what I want. I'm just human and I want a human chance."

"What sort of chance?" he asked in that vague distress which confuses a man and makes him stupid, at sight of a woman's tears.

She lifted her head defiantly. "A chance to work and live and be happy," she told him vehemently. "A chance to support my child and myself. They all praise me, but no one will hire me. I'm tired of fighting—unspeakably tired." Once more her face went into the support of the two small hands and her body shook.

"But your part in the new piece—don't you get it?" he questioned.

"They gave it to another woman," she told him faintly between her fingers. "A woman who—who is the friend of the author."

Heretofore Paul had always felt a half-submerged diffidence with Marcia such a practical acknowledged deference as one accords to another who has drunk deeper of life and more extensively built wisdom from experience. With her his easy pose of acknowledged genius that passed current in the drawing-rooms lost its assurance, and with her he was at his best because most natural. But this was a new Marcia, a Marcia whose delicate, childlike face was stamped with grief; a child in distress and a child who needed comforting. Just as once before when there was no escape, Paul had fought the Marquess kid and had been astonished at the ease of battle, so now an impulse seized him and he found himself acting without premeditation. He was the man looking on at the tears of a woman, and a woman whose laughter had often been his comfort. Instinctively he folded her in his arms and kissed the soft hair which was all that showed itself of the bowed head and hidden face.

Now when for the first time he held her close to him he felt a tremor of sobs run through the slender figure. His pulses heightened their tempo as he became conscious of the soft palpitation of her shoulder and bosom.

Sympathy, he thought, actuated him. He took the averted face between his hands and raised it gently, but with a strong pressure until the tear-stained eyes were looking into his own.

Her lips were very petal-like and her eyes were very dewy and on each cheek bloomed a spot of color heightened by the pallor of the moment.

Paul Burton at the instant forgot Loraine Haswell, the prize of his brother's grand larceny for his pleasure, forgot that this woman was no more than his Platonic friend and remembered only that her chin rested in his hand and that his arm encircled her, as he bent his head and pressed his lips against the mouth that trembled.

He did not think of the demonstration as necessarily lovelike. His nature was instinctive, not analytical, but suddenly there swept into the utterly lonely and battle-weary eyes of the woman, who was not a child, a smile of happiness and comfort which parted her lips, so that her face reminded him of sudden sunshine flashing into rainbow hope through an April shower. He could feel the heart fluttering wildly in her breast, and at once he knew that to her his kiss had meant an avowal of love—that in her code there was no place for light or unmeaning caresses.

He rose and his face paled. The indecisiveness which never dared to grasp the thistle firmly was troubling him with a new dilemma. Yet something in Marcia Terroll mad a call upon him which no other woman had yet made—the call to be honest at all cost.

With his averted face toward the window, in a forced and level voice, not daring to meet her eyes, he told her almost all there was to tell about Loraine Haswell. The new spark of manhood she had awakened in him made him silent on one point. He said nothing of his own doubts; his own wonder whether after all he loved or wanted Loraine. Just now he fancied he wanted Marcia Terroll.

When the recital reached its end he stood for a space gazing into the fog which seemed an emblem of his own life. He was waiting for her to speak, but the silence remained unbroken. At last he turned and saw her sitting there no longer tearful, only a little stunned.

"I couldn't lie to you," he protested in a hurried utterance as he came over and knelt on the floor at her side. "Not to you. . . . Of course, you know that I love you very dearly as a man loves his rarest friends. You know what our comradeship means to me—"

With an impulsive forward sweep of her hand she interrupted him and her voice was hardened with deep pain and heart-ache.

"Don't!" she pleaded, and the monosyllable was like a cry. "Oh don't!" Then after a little while she went on slowly: "You are a romanticist, Paul, and a dreamer. Some day you will wake up. We all do."

"It was better to tell you, dear, wasn't it? It would have been unfair—"

She bowed her head wearily as though realising the futility of expecting him to understand. "Yes, I suppose so, only—"

He waited a moment, then prompted:

"Only what?"

"Only perhaps a stronger man would have told me before he—kissed me."

"Did that—make so much difference?"

The green-gray eyes grew soft and the lips smiled wanly. "Yes—all the difference," she said. "It made me think for a moment that—that everything was different. Ordinarily people don't—I mean men don't—" She broke off and then explained a little laboriously. "To me that sort of kiss must mean a very great deal of excuse itself."

"But I did mean it," he fervently assured her. "Marcia, I have been horribly unhappy and you have been lonely. We have seen so much of each other because we wanted each other—needed each other."

The girl rose and went quietly over to a window. Outside the murk of the fog was raw and choking. The stertorous snore of the ferry whistle was uneasy, ominous: the spirit of the town's myriad anxieties. She began to speak with measured syllables and an averted face.

"Now, you don't need me, Paul I hadn't understood before, but I do now. I am this moment whim, that's all. I don't need you either. I don't need anyone." A trace of resolution was predominant. "I've depended on myself for years and I can go on. When you came to-day I wasn't myself. I was disappointed and miserable and my misery made its appeal to your sympathy. You were carried away because you're emotional, and it was all my fault. I'm supposed to be practical and I let you do it. We must forget about it now, that's all."

"Some things—" his voice mounted to a thrill of feeling—"can't be forgotten."

"They must be."

"I have made you angry," he said with deep contrition, "and it's the last thing in the world I wanted to do."

Marcia smiled again, as she might have smiled on a child who promises to be good all its life, and who will in a forgetful half-hour be again breaking all the laws and ordinances of the nursery.

"No, I'm not angry," she said thoughtfully. "One should not be angry with a person of your exact sort, Paul. In another man the same thing would have made me angry, but not in you. I am only sorry it happened. Let's pretend it didn't."

"Why," he inquired, puzzled as he gazed at the face still moist with its recent tears and now rather cryptic in its expression, "are your laws of judgment different for me than for other men?"

Marcia shook her head.

"Perhaps just because you are yourself—different from other men. Maybe in the artist there is something of the woman and something of the child, as well as something of the man. One doesn't grow angry with a child."

"Oh!" The monosyllable came with an undernote of chagrin. "I'm not exactly responsible. That's what you mean?"

She did not answer in words, but her eyes as she looked off through the drizzle with her fingers hanging limply motionless at her sides gave him the affirmative reply, and he went on in a low voice.

"Of course, that would make you hate me. It must make anyone hate me if it's true."

There was a moment's silence and he heard her laugh. It was a sound of a single note and it was neither a laugh of amusement nor of ridicule. If there was any betrayal of laughing at the expense of someone, the someone was evidently herself, and Paul was not sure it was a laugh after all. Possible it was a single sob or half-sob and half-laugh. But she went on in a voice flattened by weariness.

"Life deals in paradoxes. Possibly that very thing might make one love you."

Paul stood in the small room, feeling himself very small and contemptible. The face of Loraine rose before his memory, beautiful and petulant, appealing and regal, features of ivory with poppy-like lips, dominated by dusky eyes and night-black hair.

Suddenly she seemed responsible for all his uncertainties. He saw her just then as a Circe. He was a man, swung to an ebb and flow of mood by influences outwardly as nebulous as moon mists. Just now the influence of Loraine Haswell was at ebb-tide. To-morrow it might run again to flood, but Paul Burton obeyed the prompting of the present.

With a low exclamation that was wordless and a face tense and white, he was at the girl's side and his arms were again about her. She shook her head and tried to draw away, but he only held her the more closely until she raised her face and said patiently, "I'm very tired, don't make me fight both myself and you."

The musician shook his head and talked fast. "You said when I kissed you that you thought it meant something very different. You could have meant only that you thought I loved you. But that was not all. Thinking that I loved you would have meant nothing to you if you hadn't loved me—if you didn't love me now. You do. You have just said, 'Don't make me fight myself.' There would be no fight with yourself—if you didn't love me."

He paused and his arms held her very close, as he saw her turn away her face and make an effort to release herself, but in the eyes that she averted he read the cost of the effort.

"Please let me go." The words came faintly.

"Not until you answer me. I love you, Marcia. This time it means all that you thought it meant before. I love you."

Her eyes came around again and intently studied his own, then the voice spoke in low tone:

"I love you," he insisted, "and you love me. Your pupils confess it. Why deny it with your lips? You love me."

She gently disengaged herself and sat again on the lounge.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' AND SMALL WOMEN'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Any girl under twenty will be becomingly and appropriately dressed in a frock like the one illustrated, and in which the quality known as "style" is charmingly expressed. The overeffect is cleverly introduced, and altogether the design is quite original.

The one piece blouse body has the newest kind of collar and attractive full length sleeves with frill finish. The overbodice, in fancy outline, is prettily trimmed with covered buttons, and the gathered skirt joined to it under a silk sash is similarly favored. The trimming bands may be used or not as you prefer, and one or two materials may be employed in the making.

For the bi-weekly social affairs at college, in net and silk, or like combination, this would make a very pretty frock. Then for an afternoon dress, or one suitable for church wear, serge and satin, crepe and serge and the like are appropriate. The material used will decide the service of the garment. All serge, with band trimming, will give a serviceable little dress for a miss or a small woman that will be neat and stylish.

The dress pattern, No. 8,053, cuts in sizes 14-20 years. To make in size 16 requires 4¼ yards 36 inch material for skirt and over waist; 1⅝ yards for the blouse body, with 1⅝ yards 36 inch silk for a girdle, or 5⅝ yards all one material.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Stomach Was Very Bad Much Dizziness and Pain

The Liver Got Out of Order and the Whole System Was Poisoned

When the course of the food through the alimentary canal is impeded by sluggish action of the liver or bowels the food remains undigested and as a result it ferments.

This gives rise to poisonous gases which crowd about the heart, and cause dizziness and choking sensations as well as irregular action of the heart.

The liver struggles to remove the poisons from the blood, becomes enlarged, and finally fails, allowing the poisons to pass on to every part of the human system. Complications arise, and there is Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and apoplexy.

The earlier derangements of the digestive system are such as are described by this letter from Mr. Rochon. He also points the way to cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Louis Rochon, R. R. No. 11, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For about seven months my stomach was very bad. I was troubled with dizziness, and had gas on the stomach and awful pains in the right side. The liver seemed to be out of order so I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This treatment seemed to be just exactly what I needed and before the first box was all used I was cured, and feeling as well as ever. I also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when feeling weak and suffering from nervous headache, and was soon restored to good health. I am proud of Dr. Chase's medicines, and recommend them above any doctor's medicines."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, twenty-five cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

The New Year opened with declines in the prices of butter, eggs and poultry and advances in fall wheat, oats, live hogs and cattle. For the local market everything points to lower quotations in country produce as on Saturday's market. Hogs are up to 12 cents.

The holiday trade in poultry proved disastrous for not a few of the small dealers. The opening high prices were beyond the public's purse and the result was inevitable. The Sun explains the situation in Toronto as follows.

Last week's comment on the poultry market proved to be quite within the facts. It was written at a time when it was not just clear how the retail butchers would be fixed. "Fixed," accurately described it. Many of the smaller ones were stocked up with turkeys that they could not sell for anything like what they had paid for them. These were held over, and disposed of cheaply on Tuesday morning. Wholesale buyers were also caught with heavy supplies for which the people would not pay the necessarily high prices. Last spring's wet weather was hard on the young turkeys, and this, with the scarcity of feed later resulted in a short crop indeed. If these turkeys could have sold at 30c. they would have been cleaned up readily, as there was none too much for the demand, but housekeepers could not afford to pay the high prices which the trade demanded in order to pull out even.

The Massachusetts Board of Agriculture offers $360 in cash prices for the best yield for an acre or single trees of peach, pear and apple.

To prevent meat from spoiling in warm weather, take a quart of the best vinegar, two ounces of lump sugar and two ounces of salt. Boil all together for five minutes, and when cold bottle. When required brush the meat over with this, using a soft brush. The mixture will keep for some time and does not spoil the flavour of the meat.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT---STRETCHER CASES PASSING TO REAR AFTER BIG PUSH

(From the Sphere, London. Copyright in U. S. by N. [illegible])

The scene shows a portion of the road between the trenches on the western front. A few gaunt rafters cut the sky. Wounded are brought down from the regimental aid post in the trenches to a field ambulance collecting post, which is generally in a cellar or dugout toward the rear. The men who first retrieve the wounded from the trenches, or from "No Man's Land," are the regimental stretcher bearers, and not R. A. M. C. men proper. From the collecting posts the wounded walk or are carried by bearers, or are placed upon wheeled stretchers and are so brought to the advanced dressing station, which may be about a mile further toward the rear. Still further from the firing line by a mile or so is the dressing station, which is usually reached by motor ambulance.

Bright Future for Africa After the War, Says Explorer

Sir Henry H. Johnston, Authority on Affairs Relating to Dark Continent, Writes Interesting Article About Land Where Few White Men Have Travelled.

(Special Dispatch)

LONDON, Saturday.—Having travelled in and explored Africa since 1879, Sir Harry H. Johnston, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., ranks among the foremost authorities on the Dark Continent. Hence an article from his pen on "The Future of Africa," such as he has written for the Sphere, should be entertaining to any one interested in the subject. Sir Harry has held various official positions in the Cameroons, Nigeria and Mozambique. He has been Commissioner for British Central Africa, which he founded, and Special Commissioner of the Uganda Protectorate. He writes in the Sphere as follows:—

"I have several times written on this theme between 1884 and 1914, and it amuses me occasionally to recur to my old forecastings of events and effects and see how they coincide with actualities. Perhaps the most remarkable of these forecasts was an article published in the Times of August 27, 1898, but as it was instigated by the late Lord Salisbury as representing to a great extent his own views and intentions in regard to the shaping of British Africa, and as I was one of the agents appointed to further these schemes, I may be said to have assisted at times in carrying out my own prophecies. Of course, alternating with the ups of optimism and enthusiasm, I have had the downs of disillusionment—or what seemed to be disillusionment. There have been days and moments when I have asked myself whether my own little efforts and struggles to open up Africa were not wasted labor, or likely to be less provocative of good than of harm. Such a reversion of spirit came over me once when I had reached the furthest point on the Upper Congo attained by a white man since Stanley's rush down the river in 1879. Virtually the Northern Congo was then closed to the white man's enterprise.

"[illegible] a dim remembrance of the extraordinary phenomena of two white men with a number of partially clothed black followers paddling frantically past these [illegible] cannibal villages in a number of [illegible] canoes and sailing boats, and there was a [illegible] of another white man. This [illegible] coming came for a few days into the heart of Africa from the north-west [illegible] to all intents I was the first white man whom they had examined and [illegible] and I had come amongst them in a foreign boat manned by Zanzibaris. They and I could speak a little in the widespread Congo tongue, so that we could exchange ideas to a slight extent. Gazing around me from one of those then populous river bank towns, with its happy, noisy life, its abundance of good food, its sleek, well built men and women, its comparatively comfortable houses, I could not help asking myself—and, a little later, the readers of the Daily Telegraph—whether my advent might not be the signal for the opening of a long period of misery and suffering among these seemingly cafe free folk.

"But, of course, under all this laughter and repletion on bananas, plantains, fish, poultry, goats, sheep, ground nuts and manioc there was crime, there were tears, terrible diseases, degrading vice. In the marketplace slaves brought from afar were being sold for human food, children were loathsome with syphilitic sores, smallpox occasionally depopulated whole towns and districts. To my coming—a detail in Stanley's splendid six years' work—there succeeded the justly denounced Leopoldian system, which for a time bore heavily on the native population. Yet with it came British, French, American, Belgian and Swedish missionaries. Light was thrown on the dark places and dark deeds of the ivory and rubber raids and the forest labor. The Belgian nation took the business in hand, and the last state of the Congo is far better, far more productive of sound happiness and prosperity among the descendants of the primitive cannibals who received me with such hospitality than was their condition at the beginning of 1885.

"And as to its future. Rightly governed, I venture to predict that Africa will, if we are victorious, repay us and our allies the cost of our struggle with Germany and Austria. The war, deny it who may, was really fought over African questions. The Germans wished as the chief gain of victory to wrest rich Morocco from French control, to take the French Congo from France and the Portuguese Congo from Portugal, to secure from Belgium the richest and most extensive tract of alluvial goldfield as yet discovered. This is an auriferous region, which, properly developed, will, when the war is over, repay the hardest bit of our allies all that she has lost from the German devastation of her home lands."

PRUSSIANS HOPE PRESIDENT WILSON OR THE POPE WILL BE PEACE MAKER

Propaganda to End War Includes Paid Pacificists and Well Intentioned Persons Who Play Into Agents' Hands Unwittingly—Effort Is to Impress Neutrals, Says Swiss Correspondent in Describing Devious Methods Employed.

(Special Dispatch)

LONDON, Saturday.

During the last year Germany has issued numerous more or less discreetly veiled peace feelers, most frequently through neutral countries, writes a well informed Swiss correspondent. In other words, she has been endeavoring to sound public opinion in the allied countries whether there were any immediate prospect of it being possible to propose peace negotiations, and if so upon what basis.

"It is of course well known," he continues, "that she has attempted to seduce certain of the allied countries to conclude a separate peace with her and now that these attempts have failed one after another and the Allies individually and collectively have let it be known that they intend concluding no separate peace she is engaged in another plot.

"There are various methods resorted to by German agents in neutral countries for bringing public opinion to bear upon the governments to induce the latter to take action in favor of peace. Committees, for instance, are formed—no one quite knows how—composed, ostensibly, at any rate of neutrals and there is also the trick of inducing well known persons, who may or may not give their names, to insert articles in important neutral newspapers suggesting bases for peace negotiations, these articles being certain sooner or later to be quoted or summarized in the press of the belligerent countries.

Some Paid Pacificists.

"To take first the committees. These are composed partly of genuine pacificists from conviction long before the war, and who at least never have made anything out of pacificism—having much more probably lost by it—and partly of paid pacificists—that is to say, those who act as [illegible] and organizers. A fair [illegible] to Switzerland are [illegible] but far more [illegible] are [illegible] Some are neutral subjects whose money is wholly or largely invested in Germany or in German enterprises outside Germany. Others again who are perpetually crying out for peace do so because they have to pay twice or thrice as much for their potatoes as they did before the war and considerably more for other principal necessaries. Incapable of looking beyond their potatoes and their sugar and with a horizon bounded by the cellar and the store room, they are equally incapable of considering what would be the effect upon the world of a premature peace. It is upon these people that German agents and their peace propaganda chiefly work.

"Alexander Prince zu Hohenlohe, who has already distinguished himself by his peace propagandist articles on behalf of Germany, writes in the Neue Zuercher Zeitung an article entitled 'The Suicide of Europe,' in which he paints in lurid colors the distressful state of the world and the havoc wrought and waste entailed by the war, and suggests that there are two men capable of warding off the cataclysm which will inevitably ensue should the war be prolonged. One of these men, he says, is the Pope, and the other is President Wilson, who carries weight with practical and business people.

Swiss in Rejoinder.

"With great promptitude there has appeared an article in rejoinder to that by Prince zu Hohenlohe, and this not by a subject of any allied State, but by a Swiss, consequently by one of those very neutrals to whom the appeal is primarily directed. To this rejoinder the Neue Zuercher Zeitung gives much prominence, and as it obviously comes much more fitly from a Swiss than from any one belonging to an allied country, and as the views expressed represent those of all intelligent neutrals who understand German designs and who know what a parched up peace would entail for the world, it may be briefly summarized.

"As the writer points out, Prince Alexander zu Hohenlohe has once more insisted upon the favorite German doctrine that in the present war there will be neither victor nor vanquished. But, he asks, is this so certain? And what does the eternal German phrase 'an honorable peace' mean? Is not Germany, with her incessant bickerings about the objects of the war, the best proof of how difficult it is to define 'an honorable peace'? What might appear honorable to one belligerent would be the depth of disgrace to another.

"The writer then reminds his readers how the Germans scoffed at Lord Kitchener's declaration that the war would last three years, whence he infers that even in August, 1914, the British authorities were convinced that only by a long war would Germany be reduced. When England entered upon the war she did so with the iron determination to raise a mighty army and, when at length it was ready, to throw it into the balance. And now, just at the time when this enormous work of preparation is completed and England is full of arms and ammunition factories, is she to say that it is all in vain 'because a long war is leading Europe to suicide'?

Prussian Speed Failed.

"And the writer reminds his readers—many of whom it must never be forgotten are Germans—of Herr von Jagow's justification of the Germans' irruption into Belgium—that Germany's great triumph was speed—that is to say, a short war. Whence the obvious deduction is that England's trump card must be a long war. 'It is exceedingly satisfactory,' concludes this Swiss, 'that these lamentations should proceed primarily from that country in which the greatness and necessity of the war were proclaimed with positively religious pathos.' In other words, it is the Germans, who waxed ecstatic about the glory of war, who are now bemoaning its unfortunance."

Girl Would Give Her Eye to Restore Sight to Blind Soldier

"Only Means of Serving My Country," Is Her Plea to Oculist Who Believes He Could Perform Operation Successfully by Grafting Cornea.

(Special Dispatch)

LONDON, England.—A young girl in England is willing to be deprived of one of her eyes if it will be the means of restoring sight to a blind soldier.

Some time ago Dr. Rochon-Duvigneaud, noted oculist, expressed the opinion that it might be feasible to graft a tiny bit of human cornea on another human cornea and so restore sight to a blind person. Hearing of the physician's views on the subject, the young woman wrote to him as follows:

"Do you believe it possible to take the eye of one person and graft it on another? Do you believe it is possible to enable two persons to see with only two eyes between them instead of four? If you believe that there is one chance of success, even in a million, I am at your disposal.

"I will give you one of my eyes if you know of a soldier who has lost his sight while serving in France and to whom sight would be of great utility in the service of his country. I would prefer to give my eye to one to whom it would be especially useful—a savant, an inventor or an officer of great value.

"If one of these men wishes to try the experiment and you consider it possible, I shall be happy to give one of my eyes, and shall consider myself under an obligation to you, for you will have permitted me to be useful to my country, and it is the only means in my power of serving it."

PASSPORT ORDER BOON TO PHOTOGRAPHERS

(Special Dispatch)

DOVER, Saturday.—By orders recently issued by the local authorities citizens of Dover may leave the town at will, but, unless they are armed with a portrait passport, they may not return.

This order has resulted in a thriving business among the photographers. Many persons, [illegible] their lives have been averse to having their pictures taken hastened to the photographer's for a sitting.

If a resident of London or any other city wishes to visit Dover he must appear before the police in his district, who will supply him with the necessary papers, to which must be attached his latest portrait. Even then he must telegraph ahead to the Dover authorities for permission to enter the town.

It is the intention that Dover shall be practically a "sealed" town.

Rules for aliens are even more stringent than for the British subject.

HIS POTATO CROP MORE IMPORTANT THAN WAR

(Special Dispatch)

PARIS, Saturday.—A French soldier who took "French leave" so that he could dig the potatoes he planted on his farm last summer has been sentenced to two months' imprisonment.

Recently he saw visions of his potato crop rotting in the ground and asked leave of absence from the army so he could harvest it. When the leave was refused he suddenly disappeared from his post. Three days later he returned to the front, announcing he had finished his harvesting. He could not be made to understand that it was more important to remain at his post than to dig potatoes.

JACK OF BEANSTALK HAS A YOUNG RIVAL

(Special D[illegible])

LONDON, Saturday. [illegible] rivalling Jack Sheppard, ten years old, compares favorably with Jack of the beanstalk fame, but the former has been sent to an industrial school for six years as a sequel to some queer escapades on his part.

In recent months Jack has escaped from the Huddersfield Detention Home on three occasions. Twice he got out of the third story window and climbed down the water pipe at the side of the home. After he was captured the second time he was returned to the same room on the third floor without clothing. The following night he escaped, taking with him his "birthday suit."

Jack had climbed down the water pipe again and on reaching the ground had walked off, shivering for the want of wearing apparel. When he had gone a mile from the home he picked up a short coat and continued his journey. Two miles further he was arrested. He had been detained in the home on a theft charge.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

For Mrs. Tillinghast's Accommodation

By H. Faber Osterheld

Edyth was sitting in one of the comfortable chairs of a parlor car as the train pulled out of the New Haven station. She was regretting the short halt there when a newcomer, who had planted his traps on the floor near the large armchair facing her, bowed. Edyth thought it was an apology for having upset her valise with his golf sticks and returned the salutation.

The one second sufficed to show her it was the same jolly, broad shouldered chap she had seen on the platform with a crowd of Yale boys. They both bent to pick up her valise when she heard him say, while his eyes twinkled with suppressed fun:

"I'm going to talk to you until your station comes, so you'd better make believe you know me."

Edyth looked up indignantly, but she could detect no disrespect in his face, just pure rollicking college boy fun, ready for a lark.

"Suppose I don't want to talk to you?" she challenged.

"You needn't, just as long as you'll let me talk to you. I've worked like a nigger the whole term, and I can't waste a moment beginning to have a bully time."

"What would the people on the car think if they knew I've never seen you before?" she demanded.

"They won't know if you smile at me and go right on chatting," he assured her.

"But you know it isn't proper, and I promised Miss Stanton to be cautious if she let me go alone." She smiled bewitchingly and began to page in her book.

"That old lady opposite is growing suspicious on account of your book." He leaned forward in his armchair and contemplated her with joy.

"Who is Miss Stanton?"

"Our teacher of mathematics. She usually chaperones me, but I made her see there was no occasion"—

"Not the least in the world," he said fervently, setting his tie.

"I'm beginning to think she had better have come! I think I'd best whirl my chair around. I've misgivings!"

"You can't. It's stationary," he exulted.

"I might change my seat," she began.

"I might, too," he threatened.

"No room."

"The chair has comfortable arms," he said suggestively.

"The old lady," reminded Edyth.

"Better stay then," he advised.

"Now, Harry wouldn't have forced himself upon"—

"Who's Harry?" he interrupted.

"He is at Harvard," murmured Edyth.

"We beat Harvard badly last Thanksgiving," he mused.

"Were you at Yale last Thanksgiving?" she queried innocently.

"Senior!" He looked hurt.

"Ah! So is Harry," she replied.

"On the team?" he demanded.

"No," she admitted unwillingly.

"Shortstop," he announced and drew himself up proudly.

"Harry is in a senior society," she began.

He smiled in a superior fashion and touched the golden wolf's head on his waistcoat.

"Well, all the same, he wouldn't have talked to me," she said in a tone of reproof, "and," she added, "I like his name."

"Burton sounds less frivolous."

"Awfully long," she demurred.

"Burt for short," he volunteered.

"I like Burt, too," she admitted.

"Yale blue would be becoming to you." He pulled out a blue silk scarf.

"So's red," she protested.

"Too like your hair. Let's try blue." And he handed her the scarf. She glanced at the old lady and stealthily held the scarf near her face.

"It's enchanting—the only right color," he beamed upon her.

"To speak of my hair as red!" she began. "You're the only single man"—

"I know, but I'm willing to change."

"What, the hair?" She bent over the glass and patted her pompadour into shape.

"No," he too hastily contradicted.

"Harry says it's pretty."

"I'd like to put Harry off the earth," he said emphatically.

"Then I couldn't wear blue. It would have to be black." She gave a little sigh.

"Black for Harry? Absurd!" he scorned.

"As I said before, you're the only single man"—

"And I told you before," he interrupted, "I'm eager to have you alter that."

"I think I was just at that point in my story," she said thoughtfully, picking up her book.

"Don't read or I'll change my seat, with all my traps, and the people will think we've had a quarrel."

"Then I won't talk to you any more." Edyth leaned far back in her chair and looked out of the window.

"I'll keep right on, and people will soon see something is wrong," he threatened. He tied his shoestring, and Edyth saw the very sole of his boot chuckle.

"Naturally it isn't proper for a very young lady to speak to a total stranger."

"I was seventeen last February."

"But you don't know anything about me!" he censured severely.

"I know your name is Burt." Edyth lingered over the name and smiled up at him.

"Sign of knowing one pretty well."

"I confessed about one named Harry," she admitted coyly.

"Yes, about one." He nodded his head.

"About the only Harry," she put in as an afterthought.

The conductor had walked through the train, calling out the next station. Neither of them observed him. They were both engrossed in studying out the initials of her traveling bag. The train was pulling into the station when Edyth accidentally looked out and recognized Mrs. Tillinghast. She snatched her small satchel and rushed from the train. Mrs. Tillinghast was looking anxiously at the forward car when Edyth touched her arm.

"Mercy, child, I feared you had not come!" she exclaimed in a tone of relief. Suddenly she extended her hand to greet some one else. Edyth turned, and her face assumed a perfectly rigid expression.

"Edyth, let me present Mr. Burton Gilmore—Miss Edyth Lawton!"

Her sin had found her out. This young fellow probably lived near the Tillinghasts and would some time or other disclose her whole disgraceful proceeding. She bowed mutely and frigidly.

"Why, you must have come on the same train!" Mrs. Tillinghast exclaimed. Edyth's face burned.

"Why, yes; pity we didn't know," Gilmore remarked chivalrously.

"He looked too nice not to be a gentleman," thought Edyth.

"Now, look here, both of you," said Mrs. Tillinghast as she led the way to the carriage. "I have all the rest of my house party assembled, and I find three couples can't abide each other."

A light began to break in upon Edyth. Her face was dimpling—enchanting, Gilmore thought.

"I'm so upset about your brother Harry not being able to come. I have a girl here who is so interested in Harvard," Mrs. Tillinghast explained.

Gilmore winked furtively at Edyth. "I'm awfully sorry, too," he said, stowing in the luggage. "I've heard lots about him lately."

As they sped up the drive Mrs. Tillinghast went on with her troubles. "I'm reduced to a stage of idiocy almost by getting the wrong people together. If you two are going to make it hard for me by deciding to be uncongenial, there's nothing in the world left for me to do but to jump off a dock."

Gilmore looked beseechingly at the girl.

"I won't make it hard for you, dear Mrs. Tillinghast," said Edyth, rubbing her head caressingly against her hostess' shoulder. But she smiled at Gilmore.

And they didn't.

Savages and Their Teeth.

The common idea is that the diet and climatic conditions of the negroes are the cause of their having beautiful teeth, but some authorities dispute this. Thus, in some parts of Africa, when an infant has gone through the "teething period" his mouth is rinsed out with an infusion of leaves of a native tree possessing a constituent which causes the gums to shrink, so tightening the teeth.

The natives living near the source of the Nile employ the roots of a podbearing plant to relieve toothache, while another tribe farther west use an infusion of kasso seeds for the same purpose. The toothbrush as used in this country is, of course, unknown to the savages, but many of them have a most effective substitute. They use a piece of wood from certain trees which contain beneficial qualities. Further, this stick is free from the great objection to brushes. It can be renewed at very frequent intervals, and is thus always fresh and wholesome—a great advantage over the toothbrush of civilised races.

no longer obtains. Foreign requirements are so great that the cattle-producing countries of the world must augment their exportable surpluses to supply Europe with live stock to replenish depleted supplies.

Canada has less than one bullock for every two persons in the country, according to Government figures for the year ending June 30, 1916. One commendable feature of the report is that the number of cattle, other than milch cows, increased approximately 600,000 within twelve months, with 3,926,519 and 3,339,155 as the figures for 1915 and 1916 respectively.

LABOUR CURTAILS DAIRY DEVELOPMENT.

On the other hand, the number of milch cows in Canada decreased by 68,000 during the same period. The 1916 figures were 2,603,345, and those of the previous year were 2,666,946. If this state of affairs were to continue, Canada would be losing one of her very valuable assets. Prices for dairy products have soared to the highest levels in the history of the Canadian dairy-making industry, and export demand is becoming more and more insistent. Cheese factories and creameries had the busiest season they have ever experienced, and their capacity was only limited by the amount of milk and cream they were able to secure.

Authorities in close touch with the situation assert that the steadily improving quality of the herds is the most noteworthy feature of the dairy industry in 1916. The practice of using pure-bred sires of first quality is becoming more general.

One factor more than all others that has resulted in limiting the size of Ontario dairy herds has been the extreme shortage of labour, and it is probable that a material increase will not be noted until the labour market is again in a normal condition at the close of the war. The fact that there is only a small percentage of cows freshening within the next couple of months means that the making of butter will not be on a larger scale than at present until early spring. Higher quality of milch cows has also resulted in a greater margin of profit, on account of the possibility of greater production. Dairying is as profitable as ever, and the cessation of the war cannot bring anything but increased revenue to dairymen.

Prices for milch cows during the last year were higher than they have ever been in Canada. Pure-bred dairy cows of fine strain were sold at $185 to $200 during the year, and the only regrettable fact in connection with the transactions was that many of these were taken to the United States. Ordinary milkers old at $100 to $135 on the Toronto live stock market. It is noteworthy that there was not much demand for cows of medium quality. Buyers were generally more than willing to pay a higher price for a cow that would bring them more revenue.—L. J. M. in the "Farmer's Sun."

"Morgenroth."

"Morgenroth," the haunting death-song of the forlorn hopes of the German armies, is the song which was sung so often in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, and is being sung again to-day.

The words were written by Wilhelm Hauff, a patriotic German writer of the first half of the nineteenth century.

Morning bright; morning bright—
Light that leads me to the grave—
Soon shall dawn with summons brazen,
Call me to my death to hasten—
I and many a comrade brave.

RUSSIANS SUCCESSFUL IN ROUMANIA

A BIG ALLIED OFFENSIVE IS EXPECTED

THE RUSSIANS CAPTURE SIX HUNDRED PRISONERS IN FIGHT ON THE HEIGHTS

Petrograd Announces a Victory in Roumania With the Capture of Three Cannon From the Germans ---Definite Indications of a New Super-offensive on the Western Front---Reserves and Munitions Are Being Concentrated.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, January 4.—The capture of six hundred prisoners, three cannon, mine-throwers and bombing mortars from the Teutonic forces on the heights near Botoch, Roumania, was announced by the War Office to-day.

LONDON, January 4. — There are definite indications that Berlin's "war-to-the-knife" and "peace-on-the-sword-point talk will be met by a new super-offensive by the Allies which will eclipse in magnitude everything before attempted on the western front.

Behind the Allies' lines in Belgium, France and Alsace Lorraine, are being concentrated army reserves and munition stores unprecedented in quantity and quality, for the next great effort.

ROME, January 4.—Official statement has been made that while the Pope approves of any move toward shortening the war, he will not make any definite intervention as regards peace, until all warring powers ask for his assistance in the matter.

Urges Every Labor Man To Fill Cards

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, January 4.—In view of the antagonistic reception given by Winnipeg labour men to the National Service Registration Cards being distributed there, President Watters of the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress to-day issued a letter to affiliated unions arguing strongly for National Registration, which he described as a big Canadian movement in freedom's cause. "The present Canadian National Registration," points out President Watters, "leads away from conscription, whereas the scheme of registration operated in England led toward conscription." He again urges strongly every labour unionist to fill out his card.

Report of Court Has Stirred English Society

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, January 4. — English society and the public at large was stirred to-day over the scandal of feminine interference in army affairs bared in the report of the court of inquiry over treatment accorded Lieut. Patrick Barrett, by Mrs. Cornwallis-West. London newspapers expressed satisfaction to-day at the unsparing way in which the court of inquiry performed its duty, even though the scandal affected persons in the highest strata of British society.

Roosevelt Supporting Republicans in Senate

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, January 4.—The Republicans in the Senate are to have Colonel Roosevelt's support in their fight against the endorsement of Wilson's note to the belligerents.

Two months' silence have not resulted in any loss of Roosevelt's power of invective, nor has the result of November 7 changed his unyielding antagonism to the Wilson Administration, as shown by a vigorous statement by the Colonel to-day attacking Wilson's note and its handling.

"Fog of obscurity," "profoundly mischievous," "profoundly immoral," "wickedly false," "callous and immoral falsehood," "preposterous absurdity," and "nervously backing away," were some of the phraseological bombshells with which the former president embellished his attack of Wilson.

Lodge Against Any American Interference

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, January 4.—Senator Lodge, fairly "ripped into" Administration secretary in the Senate to-day. He declared against American interference in European affairs and excoriated the Administration for seeking "a blanket endorsement" to its entire negotiations. "I shall resist an attempt to bring the Senate into approving blindly any steps of which we are not informed," he said. "We do not ask what the President is doing, but if any approval of his acts is wanted we ought to know what we are approving. It seems to me that to venture into negotiations to which neither party has invited us is unwise. We do not want to find ourselves at the end of the war without a friend in the world. I think we should move with great caution. We are in a position of having made millions out of the war, which has cost Europe millions of lives and dollars."

Peace Terms In Hands of President

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

AMSTERDAM, January 4.—The Cologne Volks Zeitung to-day confirmed the statement credited to Count Andrassy yesterday that Germany's peace terms are now in the hands of President Wilson.

LONDON, January 4.—Latest information available here to-day, was that the Allies' reply to President Wilson would probably be sent to Washington some days before being released for publication in England, the Entente governments desiring to adhere to diplomatic etiquette, prescribing that the note must be received by the nation to which addressed before publication is given.

A Calm Night On the Western Front

COMPLETION OF TRENT CANAL IN COMING SUMMER

Only Finishing Touches Remain to Be Added at Several Points Between Trenton and Lake Simcoe

REST AFTER THE WAR

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The Railway and Canals Department announces that the finishing touches will be put on the eastern section of the Trent Canal during the next three or four months, and the waterway from Lake Simcoe to Trenton on the Bay of Quinte will be opened for through traffic early next summer. The Severn River end of the project, giving outlet to Georgian Bay, will not be completed until after the war.

Practically all that remains to be done on the Trenton end of the canal is to complete a few locks and the bridge over the Grand Trunk Railway at Campbellford.

A Recital In St. Paul's Church Friday Evening

Peterboro' Music Lovers Will Have Opportunity of Hearing Mrs. Davies-Sherry

The recital to be given in St. Paul's Church on Friday evening, by Mrs. Davies Sherry, assisted by Miss Lora Logan and Mr. John Allan, under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., promises to be one of the most enjoyable musical events of this season.

As Mrs. Davies Sherry is leaving for the West shortly every one should take advantage of this opportunity of hearing her.

The following critique from the Mail and Empire speaks for itself: "After an absence of several years, Mrs. Helen Davies Sherry reappeared at the Conservatory of Music Hall on Wednesday evening and was given a most gratifying reception. As Helen Davies, this artiste was held in high repute in local musical circles, when a member of the National Chorus. She sang "Hear Ye Israel," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with a deep appreciation of its dramatic values." Her other numbers were also sung with fine dramatic effect."

The proceeds of the recital will go towards Red Cross and Patriotic work.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER

Splendid response of the people last evening to the call of pulpit and press.

The mid-week services of the churches of Peterborough much more largely attended than usual.

A union service will be held in All Saints' Church to-night. Speaker—Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. Subject: "Problems of the community as a Challenge to Christian Heroism." Every citizen of Peterborough is invited to attend this meeting. Come in good time and join with us in earnest prayer for the betterment of our splendid city.

RECRUITING MEETINGS IN THE INTERESTS OF 247th ARE ARRANGED

Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., For Frontenac and Col. Ponton of Belleville, Will Be the Speakers on Sunday Night While Hon. Geo. P. Graham Will Visit Peterboro' on the Following Sunday---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Two big recruiting meetings in the interests of the 247th Battalion, have been arranged, the first to take place on Sunday evening, when Dr. J. W. Edwards, the eloquent member for Frontenac in the Dominion Parliament and Col. Ponton, of Belleville, will give addresses. Both are splendid speakers and the armouries should be crowded to hear these addresses. The band of the 247th Battalion, under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes, will furnish music. On the following Sunday, the Hon. Geo. P. Graham will be the speaker at a big rally.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 3.—An extraordinary week of recruiting was started here to-day by the ringing of the fire bell, which drew a crowd of people, at which an open air meeting was addressed by Lieut.-Col. Williams, chief recruiting officer, and other speakers. At a meeting of the St. Catharines Recruiting League, previously held, $200 each was offered by Dr. Jessop, M.P.P., and J. D. Chaplin to the first six recruits to respond. The offer was speedily snapped up. President James A. McEloy, of the Canada Hair Cloth Company, father-in-law of Capt. Decrespigny, and whose only son is at the front, vigorously assailed some officers of the Welland Canada protective force, including Lieut.-Col. Burleigh, commanding officer, for being permitted to hold these positions drawing fat salaries and at the same time conducting their private business. He declared they should go to the front or step out of khaki and allow those positions to be filled by returned and partially disabled officers. He characterised them as "church parade soldiers," and said they were stumbling-blocks to recruiting.

The canvass conducted by the 247th Battalion is proceeding rapidly and much useful information is being secured as a result. Some of the reasons for not enlisting as given by the men of military age who have been canvassed are: "Don't want to leave mother," "Am considered indispensable where I am employed," "Single men should be called out first," "Haven't considered it yet" etc.

His many friends will be glad to learn that Capt. E. D. O'Flynn, second in command of the 247th Battalion, has been promoted to Major. Major O'Flynn was at the front for a long period with the famous 22nd Battalion and his promotion has been richly earned.

Revival in Recruiting.

With the opening of the New Year recruiting in Peterborough shows some signs of a revival and so far this week nine recruits have been signed on, the 247th Battalion taking six while three were secured by the 74th Battery.

The 247th recruits were as follows:

Herbert Kelly, steward at the Peterborough Club, fifteen years' service in the British Navy.

Geo. Albert Pymer, Cordova Mines.

Herbert Peter Wires, R. R. No. 1, Peterborough.

James A. Freeman, Havelock.

Michael Monaghan, Coe Hill.

John J. Adams, Fort William.

The last two were sworn in on New Year's Day, and the rest later this week.

The 74th Battery has secured the following men since Monday:

Alfred G. Austin, Peterborough.

J. M. Brooks, Peterborough.

Robert C. Carney, Peterborough.

The first two have been attending the Royal School of Artillery at Kingston and have qualified as bombardiers, while the third, who was one of the junior hockey squad this year, has a brother in the 74th Battery.

MR. R. N. RUDDY K.C. MADE COUNTY JUDGE

The Examiner joins with the many friends and professional brethren of Mr. R. N. Ruddy, K.C., of the legal firm of Ruddy and Burnham, in congratulations upon his appointment to a county judgeship. It is learned upon the best of authority that the appointment has been made, though it is not yet gazetted, nor the district of duty designated. Mr. Ruddy was called to the bar in 1899, and made a King's Counsel in 1908. He has been practising the profession of law in Peterborough about six years, previously to which he practised in Millbrook. He has had the conduct of many important cases, among others of one which he conducted before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

ANNUAL MEETING OF LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

The annual meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance for the Province of Ontario will merge this year into a popular mass meeting in the interests of Sabbath preservation, under the direction of the Triennial meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, to be held in Massey Hall, Toronto, on Thursday evening, January 11th, at eight o'clock.

An Army Scandal Is Uncovered in England

Report of Court of Enquiry Involving the Exercise of Influence Over High Officers by Prominent Society Woman is Made Public

IS SEVERELY CENSURED

LONDON, Jan. 3.—An army scandal, involving the exercise of influence over high officers by a prominent society woman, is described in the report of a Court of Inquiry issued to-night, and Mrs. Cornwallis-West, wife of Col. William Cornwallis-West, and mother of the Princess of Pless and of the Duchess of Westminister, is officially severely censured.

The late Sir Arthur Basil Markham, Liberal member of Parliament for the Mansfield Division of Nottinghamshire, who died last August, demanded an inquiry in the House of Commons into this matter, and was seconded by Irish members, who declared that a young Irish officer's honour was involved: It has since developed that the officer was Lieutenant Patrick Barrett, of the Welsh Fusiliers.

Completely Exonerated.

According to a statement in the House of Commons before recess he was completely exonerated; his Commanding Officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Delme-Radcliffe, was removed from his command, and General Sir John Cowans was censured, but was retained because of his good work. General Owen Thomas who was also concerned was vindicated.

Barrett was a lieutenant in the Welsh Fusiliers, Colonel Delme-Radcliffe and other officers [illegible] him for an examination late in 1915, and his claims were supported by Colonel and Mrs. Cornwallis-West and several prominent civilians.

"Probably before this time, and certainly later," says the report, "Mrs. Cornwallis-West began to take more than an ordinary interest in Mr. Barrett, to which he consistently failed to respond. Eventually he wrote [illegible] in February last, a letter of remonstrance, which she placed in the hands of his commanding officers."

Gen. Cowans Censured.

Barrett was severely censured by his commander without [illegible] opportunity of stating his case. Soon after that he was transferred to another battalion on the demand of Mrs. Cornwallis-West. General Cowans, who aided Mrs. Cornwallis-West in securing Barrett's transfer, is censured for interfering with discipline. General W. H. Mackinnon, who was also connected with the correspondence, is criticized for interfering with the affairs of the western command after he relinquished his command, but is not disciplined because he has since retired.

The Court of Inquiry, which consisted of Field Marshal Sir William Nicholson, formerly Chief of General Staff; Major-General Lord Cheylmore, Justice Sir James Richard Atkin and the Right Hon. Donald MacLean, M.P. for Peebles and Selkirk, reports regarding Mrs. Cornwallis-West: "We have no doubt that her injudicious boasting of the power she wielded at the War Office—which was confirmed to an appreciable extent by the wording of some of Sir John Cowan's letters — was calculated a bring him and the administration at the War Office into disrepute. We feel obliged to record our opinion that this lady's knowledge as revealed in this case has been highly discreditable both in her behaviour towards Second-Lieut. Barrett before his letter of the 14th of February, in her vindictive attempts to injure him afterwards, and in the [illegible] evidence she gave before us."

"It appeared in the evidence that this lady holds [illegible] importance in the County of Denbighshire in various [illegible], a public character [illegible] war work. In our opinion it is to be regretted that she should hold such positions."

A NUMBER OF PASSENGER TRAINS TO BE CUT OFF

Railways Not Prepared, However to Make Any Definite Announcement Yet

RELIEVE CONGESTION

None of the railway companies are prepared to make an announcement of the trains that are to be dispensed with, following the declaration Tuesday that it has been decided to curtail the passenger service of the Dominion in order to relieve the congestion of traffic.

When the first announcement was made it was thought that Canada was following the example of Great Britain, where only a few days ago, it was decided to dispense with no less than 400 trains. There is a substantial difference, however, not only in the number of trains, but also in the object of the reduction. In Great Britain the main object was to relieve the transportation situation and allow an extra number of engineers and train crews to work on war transportation, mainly of them in France. Here the object of the reduction seems to be purely to relieve the freight congestion, which has been the subject of many complaints to the Dominion Railway Commission. So far as is known, there is no suggestion that the object in Canada is to enable railway engineers and crews to engage in similar work overseas.

Relieve Congestion.

The reduction in the number of trains is not expected to have any disturbing effect. It will mainly come into operation between points where the different railways have parallel systems. For instance, where two companies have three trains a day running on each line, in future there will be only two trains a day on each line, and so on. With the adoption of such a system, it is believed that the congestion will be relieved, because with the reduction in the passenger trains will come an increase in the freight trains.

It is not known whether the suggestion came from Sir Henry Drayton, the chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, or from the railway companies themselves, but it is a fact that Sir Henry Drayton authorized the reduction.

The different companies have discussed the matter through the medium of their officials, and there will be other conferences before the schedule of reduction is finally agreed upon.

It is emphasized that the movement of munitions is of the first importance, and the Dominion Railway Commission has instructed the railway companies to give first consideration to this class of freight.

One Train a Day.

At present, says a Toronto despatch, it looks as though both railways will possibly dispense with six or ten trains on the Toronto division, with a reduction of the through passenger train service between Toronto and Montreal. Trains will also be taken off the Hamilton and London divisions and the service will probably be reduced on the Teeswater and Lindsay-Peterborough lines. On the different branch lines where there is a double and triple service it is quite likely that only one train a day will be operated under the proposed change of service.

This matter of lessening the congestion and at the same time affording all possible accommodation for war material, has been in the mind of the management of our Canadian systems.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Sir Harry Drayton, Chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, stated to-day that while negotiations were proceeding satisfactorily in connection with the proposed curtailment of passenger traffic to facilitate the movement of freight, there would be no changes for some time.

WOMEN AND THE BALLOT.

The intimation is given that the women of the province interested in the franchise for their sex are contemplating the circulation of petitions, praying for legislative enactment giving women the right to vote. What will be the extent of the request embodied in the petition is not known but in the abstract the demand for equality of franchise should be met. Not only on the grounds of natural justice but on the higher grounds of ability and capacity for and facts of service. Since this war women have shown themselves in a new light. They have shown a capacity for organized and effective work; they have shown a public spirit and spirit of patriotism and sacrifice and given quiet, unostentatious and ygonian service, that have entitled them to the respect of the men of the country to whom they have set an example of sacrifice, and devotion to duty that might well appeal to thousands of men who have the privilege of the ballot, but have not appreciated the privilege of service in the cause of the Empire. In many respects woman's appeal for equal franchise rights does not consist, as compared with men — today men—in equality of capacity and fact of service, but in superiority of desert in these regards. If women take as they have taken, a prominent place in helping in their way to promote national interests by their help in war time, they have richly earned the right to a voice in the problems of readjustment—social and moral, economically—that will arise for solution at the end of the war.

OUR NATURAL RESOURCES.

As will be seen by reference to another part of this page, the Canadian Pacific Railway is undertaking a survey of the natural resources of Canada, in co-ordination with the work in this regard of many government departments, and to supplement data not thus covered. We cannot overestimate the value of this enterprise. The C.P.R. has followed us effectively to a partial realization of the immense and supreme interest in Canada—our agricultural resources. Some idea of their absolute and relative importance may be gained by the recorded fact that the value of the agricultural products of Canada for the year 1916, amounts to [illegible] billion dollars, while Canada's total mineral output, reached in the same year, only 190 millions. While these are late figures, they only tell a part of the story and represent only a small fraction of the resources of a country, where every square mile of the three millions of area probably contains wealth in some form, yet to be discovered and developed. The survey mentioned is a preliminary step, conjointly with what has been done and is being done by governmental agencies, to mobilize, so to speak, the resources of Canada. If the information to be gained, added to what we have got, will be used to form the basis of a policy of home development of natural resources, the commercial and industrial future of Canada will infinitely surpass anything we have heretofore accomplished in the way of development and progress. We are now in the throes of a great effort to mobilize the man power of Canada—taking a survey of its resources. This is being done in the interests of helping win this war. This accomplished, Canada will face new problems. The sacrifices we have made, and will yet make, will be well repaid by the knowledge that we have helped save Canada to herself and the Empire. But with that accomplished we shall only have made a beginning of the task before us. If it needs the concentration of every effort of the nation to win the war, it will need an equal if not greater concentration of effort and adaptation of resources to realize upon the victory we have won. As nations go, Canada is just at the beginning of her years of growth, and it depends upon the people, upon our leaders in governmental and material enterprise implying general cooperation and co-ordination of endeavour, to make this country one of the greatest of the imperial dominions and with no mean status in the family of nations. We have the natural resources, and a discovery and tabulation of their extent and variety will be the necessary preliminary in making them factors in our national growth.

NATIONAL SERVICE.

The benefits from the National Service campaign will only come from its effectiveness in bringing the Canadian people to a realisation of the seriousness of the situation in which this great war has placed us and finds us. We do not realise this yet as intensely as it does in the mother country or there would be a greater disposition to make sacrifices and more eagerness to respond to the universal duty of doing our bit individually and severally. We may come to realize the emergency and the need of meeting it as we study the facts in filling out the cards sent to all capable of doing military or home service in equally important capacities. The situation as it stands and the duties it demands are so admirably expressed in the words of President Falconer of Toronto University, that a reproduction of them, as printed yesterday, is justified both for their important bearing and in the hope that repetition will more forcibly impress them. He says:

"The people of Canada do not realise the gravity of the situation with which we are confronted in the present war. Those who know best tell us that if we are to in any such victory as will have abiding results we must put into it every ounce of strength and every dollar that we possess. We have gone on the assumption so common in peace times, that things will right themselves, but this is certainly not the case. A satisfactory issue will only come if we determine to use our energy for that end. There is a great deal of latent power in this Dominion. In few countries have the people more natural ability than Canadians have, but in few countries is there so little co-ordinated direction as here.

"The purpose of national registration is to discover what available people are for different kinds of work. We must know what we can count upon. There are thousands of people in this Dominion who are only waiting to be told what to do, but it is necessary to find out who these people are, and what they can do. The next step will be to use the right person for the right thing, and to see that as far as possible the round peg is fitted into the round hole, to avoid waste, not to have the energy of a person missed by having him put to do the wrong thing. National Registration, therefore, is a sensible undertaking at such a time as this. It is a patriotic undertaking. It is the kind of undertaking that an intelligent person like the Canadians will surely be ready to carry into effect at the earliest possible moment."

National service rightly understood is virtually personal service, for the issues at stake, the benefits of success and the perils of failure deeply and directly involve the interests, the welfare, the happiness and liberty of every man, woman and child in Canada. If all the men of Canada were as deeply interested, as responsive to the duty of action in their respective spheres, capacities and capabilities as are the women of the country from coast to coast, there would be universal and eager co-operation in meeting the duty that confronts us all.

Needed Work Of National Scope and Use

An important survey of the natural resources of Canada is being undertaken in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has for its purposes the co-ordination of the work which has been so well done by many government departments and with it other data which the government has not collected to those qualified to utilise the information as much data as possible relative to the natural resources of Canada. Great care will be taken not to do work that has already been well done, and the effort is one which distinctly calls for co-operation. Arthur D. Little, Limited, the Canadian branch of a Boston organization of analytical chemists, are the directors of the work and will do their part of the work with the same altruistic spirit they hope to find among those who assist. The information now available is to be collected on standard forms, is to be transferred to cards in a manner to make it possible to quickly separate the cards according to required classification at the moment. Thus if one desires to know all the places in Canada where deposits of iron are to be found in proximity with limestone, water power, or some other resource, the list of localities can be supplied very quickly. To accomplish this work, which is in the interest of the whole Dominion, it will be necessary to have part time assistance from a great many people who will be willing to devote a very small fraction of their spare time to the work because of self-interest, patriotism, local pride, and in some cases pecuniary remuneration. Those to whom the plan has been explained have evinced their cooperation, and have been enthusiastic over the possibilities of the work, and the advantage to the country at large in having such information thus brought together and classified for the free use of those interested. A bulletin is now being compiled setting forth in greater detail the plan and purposes of the survey, and this will be sent out especially to those whose cooperation is desired.

GOVERNMENT WAY OF DEALING WITH THE ROSS RIFLE CONTRACT

We consider it is about time that an expose of the Government's hunging with the Ross Rifle contract was made. The Government callously states that the past regime is responsible for the contract and admits prima facie its inaptitude to carry out its obligations.

At the outset of this unfortunate war, vast quantities of condemned and obsolete ammunition were issued to the troops at Valcartier and to the Princess Patricia Regiment; it was sent overseas, and what was the result? The ammunition did not and could not work in the rifles. The very fact of its previous condemnation betrays the argument of honesty. It is no secret to the boys of the first contingent, over 30,000 of them. A great many people here are also cognizant of it, and no one was more conversant with the scandal than the officials at Ottawa.

General Alderson pleaded to the Government for a most important improvement in the construction of the rifle; he was supported by British experts, but his entreaties were stubbornly refused and the Government continued the abuse. It is a fact also that the Ross rifle was selected for a political target. WHY?

The original contract was considered a fair and just one, and published broadcast by the Liberal Government. We ask the present Government to publish the contracts made under their auspices in order that the general public may judge their sincerity of purpose. Frankly, we do not think the Government will consent, knowing full well the dilemma that they are in and the fearful results of their misadministration.

It is futile to suggest that it is not the Government's duty to provide an up-to-date and satisfactory arm. If they failed, the onus must be placed on them. If the Government has a bad rifle no stretch of imagination can blame the contract, for the reason that the contract imposes upon the Government alone and in every respect the selection and decision of what it from time to time wants made. If the Government decides hastily it fails in spite of the contract, not because of the contract, and inflicts damage on its contractor as well as upon its troops.

Regardless altogether of the common cause contemptuous tactics have been employed to blacken the reputation of the Ross Factory, and, be it said, the Conservative Government has succeeded in inflaming racial prejudice which will not easily be soothed.—Quebec Telegraph.

PRESS COMMENT ON PEACE OVERTURES

Various Editorial Views are Expressed by the Newspapers of the Country.

"Distant and Impossible."

Philadelphia Press: "President Wilson's well meant intervention has only helped to disclose how distant and impossible is peace in the present temper of the warring nations toward each other."

"End may be in Sight."

Albany Argus: "As a matter of mere nutrition for Germany's brave soldiers the end may be in sight. But the scientific mind of Germany appreciates it."

"Greatest Neutral Not Indifferent."

Springfield (Mass) Republican: "It can never be said that the greatest of the neutrals was indifferent to peace when one of the belligerents definitely proposed peace, and when our national interests were unmistakeably on the side of peace."

"Kaiser and Friends Desperate."

Providence (R. I.) Journal: The meaning of Germany's attitude and that of the Entente Allies cannot be escaped. The Kaiser and his friends are desperate.

"Suspicious Eagerness."

Boston Globe: There is, on the one hand, a suspicious eagerness in the German reply. There is, on the other, a certain air of common sense about it.

"More Diplomatic Stratagem"

Washington Post: Her (Germany's) peace overtures are a mere diplomatic stratagem, preliminary to new and broader developments of the colossal struggle.

"Baiting the Allies."

Baltimore American: Evidently Germany is baiting the Allies on to make confession of a specific programme, and it will come back with its own counter programme. The game is one of finesse.

BELMONT COUNCIL.

In the Belmont Township election which took place New Year's Day, William Griffith was elected Reeve by a majority of 65 votes over Kitchen. The newly elected Councillors for Belmont are Wm. Anderson, Gilbert Steenburgh, Frank Breckenridge and Coleman Elliott.

The election caused considerable excitement, especially for the Reeveship Kitchen and Griffith being in the field the past three years, with majority being small on each occasion.

Griffith elected in 1915.
Kitchen elected in 1916.
Griffith again elected for 1917.

ECLIPSE OF MOON ON JANUARY 8

There will be a total eclipse of the moon on January 8th. It will occur about two o'clock in the morning. The moon will begin to enter the umbra or deep shadow of the earth at about ten minutes to one, and will emerge entirely out of it at about half past four. The total time of the eclipse will thus be about four hours, during which at least part of the moon will be visible, except during the time given above for the total eclipse. If you wish to see the earth's shadow creep over the brilliantly illuminated disk of the full moon, begin your watch by one o'clock.

A Rich, hot cup of INSTANT POSTUM with sugar and cream is a most delicious beverage.

Try it!--particularly if you are one of those with whom tea or coffee disagrees.

A dozen years ago POSTUM drinkers were comparatively few. To-day, this table drink is served on railway trains, on ocean steamers, at leading hotels and restaurants, and millions use POSTUM instead of tea or coffee at home.

POSTUM has become popular because it is popular to be healthy.

"There's a Reason"

What a Satisfaction to See Your Figure Improved Each Day

A Gossard graduate corsetiere said this to a new customer last summer and we have instructed corsetieres everywhere to say the same thing to every woman who looks at a Goesard.

Gossards lace in front—we originated the idea 14 years ago. You lace your corset in a minute each time you put it on. In this minute each day you can gently reduce or mold your figure as you want it. In no other corset is this possible.

If you are short waisted or have a poor back line, you may have a longer waist line and a graceful back line. All you need is the one Gossard designed for your figure type.

Ideal Short Waisted and Curved Back Figures

If your back line does not please you, a special straight line model may be selected that will, in a very short time, give you a beautiful normal back line. Daily, short waists are made longer and curved back lines straighter by special Gossards designed for these figures.

Hundreds of Millions In Munition Contracts Coming To Canada Now

NEW YORK, January 4.—Bankers associated with the management of allied finance in this country announced that in the last few weeks munitions contracts to the value of between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 which might have been placed in the United States had been diverted to Canada and that contracts to the value of $100,000,000 which were already in American hands had been cancelled.

In making this statement the bankers referred pointedly to the coincidence of these things having occurred since the federal reserve board in the latter part of November issued its "warning" against placing with the commercial banks of the country an "unlimited" amount of British and French treasury bills.

The foregoing announcement will be of interest to local manufacturers engaged in the manufacture of munitions as it will mean that Peterborough together with every manufacturing centre in Canada, will share in the distribution of war contracts. A number of Peterborough men representing local industries have recently visited Ottawa with a view of presenting their claims for a share of the work.

1916 WEATHER FEATURED BY GREAT RAINFALL OF EARLY SPRING MONTHS

As the year 1916 has now passed into history, we give a few facts and figures regarding the weather conditions of the year, compiled from the register of the local weather observer.

The year was chiefly noted for the great rainfall of the early spring months and more particularly in May and June, which had the effect of seriously interfering with the seeding of crops in this section at least. We give in this table the total amount for each month of the year, as recorded for Peterboro:

January	2.98
February	1.97
March	2.76
April	2.70
May	3.78
June	3.95
July	2.09
August	1.29
September	2.21
October	3.68
November	3.91
December	1.70
Total for year 1916	31.97

This total is almost exactly the yearly average for this city. The month of June had 17 days rain, with a total for the month of almost four inches.

There were no very low readings of the thermometer during the year, the lowest being 18 degrees below zero on February 14th and 21st.

High temperatures were unusually large in number, July alone providing ten days with 90 degrees and over in the shade. The last half of July was unusually hot. The highest temperature during the whole summer, however, was on August 21st and 22nd, 99 degrees being officially registered on both of these days.

The first robins were heard (and seen) on March 28th. This date also saw the finish of the sleighing. The grass began to take on its greenish hue on April 29th. The maples were in full leaf by May 25th—a few days later than usual. The last freezing temperature in spring was April 19th; the first in the fall Sept. 30th.—W.P.

POLISH CHILDREN LIVE IN BARRELS

Terrible Destruction in War Swept Country Reported By Investigation

New York.—Miss Zofia Naimska, Morningside Drive, who several ago, went to Poland to investigate the conditions there, has returned to New York.

Miss Naimska spent five months in Poland, but before she was permitted to go into that country she had to wait these weeks in Copenhagen for the permission of the German Government, and when that was obtained she was conducted hurriedly through the German Empire without being permitted to stop over night at any one

Working in Poland, Miss Naimska made Cracow her headquarters. Every fourteen days she was compelled to apply for a new permit to prolong her stay, and had a great many other difficulties to overcome before she received permission to visit the Polish territory occupied by the German and Austrian armies.

On short trips between Cracow and Lublin, then occupied by the Austrian troops, she discovered pathetic conditions. Lublin, Miss Naimska said, is surrounded by ruined villages, while in many places she found whole populations wiped out by the typhus induced by bad food. Not far from Lublin she encountered an old man, who was the sole survivor of a large village. Outside Warsaw she saw peasants' children living in barrels. Other youngsters made their home in trenches which had been dug by their parents for the storage of potatoes. At Gorlice, in Galicia, were many children who had been injured by bombs. In the cemetery a bombardment had uprooted coffins and gravestones, and hurled them about in all directions.

Miss Naimska learned that by reason of the lack of food the death rate of Polish children since the beginning of the war has increased 60 per cent., and that epidemics had flourished unchecked. The Woman's League in Cracow, the largest organization of women in Poland, was compiling statistics of the orphans and deserted children, and also trying to trace the youngsters who had been sent to other countries, as well as to keep together the penniless mother and her children.

Miss Naimska returned to New York to raise funds for this league. She brought back an appeal to the women of America, which is signed by Princess Caroline Lubomirska and Countesses Zofia Tarnowska and Wladyslawowa Mycielska among other leading Polish women. The American branch of this league has been founded in this city, and Mrs. Satterlee has become treasurer. Checks may be sent to her at her home, 37 East Thirty-sixth street.

Monk Rasputin Slain By Nobles

DEATH OF CZAR'S COUNCELLOR HAS CAUSED GREAT SENSATION IN RUSSIA.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Morning newspapers in their Petrograd despatches feature stories of the reported death of Gregory Rasputin, the Russian monk, who, it has been reported, exercised great influence over Emperor Nicholas.

According to one story, two young aristocrats drove in an automobile the night of Friday-Saturday, to a house on Korokhovaya street, where a man, assumed to have been Rasputin, entered the car, which then went to Yussupoff Palace, which is owned by the young prince Yussupoff, aide to Emperor Nicholas.

Later, according to another version, the body of a murdered man, wrapped in a fur coat, was placed in an automobile. The aristocrats took seats in the car and drove to Petrosak Island, in the Neva. Investigation Saturday and Sunday led to the discovery of a freshly made hole in the ice, traces of blood and many footprints nearby. Divers descended into the river and found the body of Rasputin.

The names of the persons suspected as being concerned in the alleged murder are not printed but it is stated that young Prince Yussupoff after the events of the week-end quit Petrograd for his Crimean estates, but that he subsequently returned to the capital. Young Yussupoff is related to the imperial family by his marriage in 1914 to Irene, daughter of Grand Duke Alexander Mikhailovitch, and the Grand Duchess Xenia, sister of Emperor Nicholas.

Warburton To Lead the Van

Accepts Position As Organizer of Canada-wide Prohibition Move.

The prohibition forces are being organized for an onslaught on the Federal Government. Mr. George Warburton has accepted the leadership of the Dominion forces and representative men are being gathered together from all parts of the Dominion to meet Sir Robert Borden and the Cabinet Ministers at Ottawa next week. The Premier will be asked to prohibit the manufacture and importation of liquor in Canada. This is understood to be only a preliminary visit to the capital. It will be followed by a monster deputation if the assurances from the Premier are not satisfactory.

RUSSIA HAS MADE GREAT PROGRESS IN 1916--WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED

"No Vodka" Year Has Proven Boon to Millions of Peasants in Great Empire—Fewer Cases of Sickness—People Co operate With Government in Waging War.

By Wm. Philip Simms, United Press Staff Correspondent with the British forces on the Western front.)

Mr. Simms spent most of the year in Russia. This review, written after his return to Paris, is based upon his study of conditions while in Russia and upon information from his Russian news sources subsequent to his departure.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—(By Mail.)—Whatever Russia may do in the future, 1916 will be set down as one of the greatest years in her history. No period in all her national development has been more significant, not even the Sixties which marked the liberation of the Serfs. During 1916 the Russian people, the common people seem to have found themselves and their place in the Emipre. Their position may not as yet be very clearly defined but the future Russian students believe, will look after that.

Russia, in the last year, has accomplished much. She recovered from the blow Germany dealt her in East Prussia, Poland and Galicia. She completed building a brand new army in the field. She called to the colours another army twice as big, which she holds in readiness for any emergency, which the war may cause. She sent troops to France and to Saloniki, via Siberia and Vladivostock and another army she sent to help Roumania when that country joined up with the Allies.

In the meantime she resumed the offensive in Galicia and completely disrupted the Austrian armies there, taking well over half million prisoners. And in Asia Minor she waged a powerful campaign against the Turks beyond the Caucausus.

These are tremendous accomplishments when one remembers what Russia was up against in 1915, when she had, during the great retreat, but one shell a day per battery, to fire against the advancing Germans. The Minister of War judged responsible for the bulk of the army's misfortunes, M. Soukoomlinoff, was arrested in the spring of 1915 and placed in the Peter and Paul prison on an island in the Neva.

Prior to 1915 it was overflowing all the time having some 2,000 patients to care for as best it could. Now 1,000 beds have been sent to a military hospital because there are never more than 400 patients to care for.

This year saw the formation of a Central Committee to co-ordinate the work of all-Russian Zemstvo Union and the All-Russian Municipality Union, two organizations composed of Russian plain people banded together to help the Empire run the war.

A PEOPLE'S UNION.

Through this committee every man, woman and child was brought more or less directly into touch with the war and perhaps it has done more to make the war a "popular" war than any other movement. The Zemstvo Union, above all, is a people's concern and the Zemstvos have instructed the peasants and common people generally throughout Russia as to what the war means to them and the importance of carrying it on to a successful finish.

Each state in the United States is divided into counties. If each county had a board composed partly of farmers, partly of village merchants or other property-holders, there and partly of landowners, this board would correspond to the Russian Zemstvo board which is charged with road building, schools and hospitals of its district. It is easy to see the influence of a Zemstvo board on the ruarl population.

The Municipality Union is doing in the cities what the union of all the Zemstvos is doing in the country. These two peoples' associations during 1916 have made millions of garments for soldiers, enlisting the services of women all over the land; fed tens of thousands of refugees from the invaded districts; equipped and operated hundreds of hospitals, furnishing the necessary supplies themselves; establishing tea and coffee rooms for the free distribution of these beverages; aided the government feed the soldiers at the front; furnished labourers in many instances to dig trenches, build bridges, pontoons, etc.; and, in a general way, they have solidified the Russian Empire by having the people work with the soldiers for the common cause. This work was begun early in the war. In 1916 it made such headway that no one can dispute its magnitude to-day nor its probable influence on the Russia of the future.

MAKING MUNITIONS.

Similar to the Zemstvo and Municipality Unions in that it is an organization growing out of public spirit, is the committee which during 1916 mobilized the small industries of Russia to help the army with munitions. There are several large munition factories in Russia which deal direct with the War Department, but there are hundreds of little foundries, machine shops, mills and works of all sorts too small to do business of this sort alone. The committee grouped all these, put specialists in charge of district groups, and had them fill orders for the government. The little industries were thus grouped into one big industry by a committee of patriotic men who receive no pay for their service though, of course, the little shops are paid for whatever they supply the army.

Russia's own output of munitions more than quadrupled during 1916 through these and other expedients. The little concerns could not make great seige guns, of course, but they could and do make trench mortars, hand grenades, caissons, cannon wheels, hatchets, spades, the smaller shells and what not.

HELP POOR WOMEN.

Furthermore they have built tanneries for taking care of enormous quantities of Russian hides, built or enlarged factories for making the necessary tanning chemicals; built new boot and shoe factories and enlarged old ones to make footwear for the troops; established enormous repairing plants to redeem leaky and worn army boots. They employ scores of thousands of poor people, mostly women, thus giving material aid in time of need. Schools for mechanics, chauffeurs and other specialists are maintained to supply the army with experts and automobile repair shops are operated by the committee all along the front.

On the sea 1916 failed to bring to Russia any great victories. But also it brought no defeats. Beyond one mysterious fight in a fog in the Baltic, during which two German ships of medium tonnage and several destroyers were reported sunk; a dash into the Gulf of Finland against coast towns there, costing the Germans another three or four odd destroyers, naval aid to the Russian armies in Riga, and at Trebizond, in Asia Minor, not much more is known of Russia's maritime activities.

Diplomatic Events.

Diplomatically, two important events were registered during the year closing. Both directly effect the United States. One was the conclusion of a treaty between Russia and Japan binding these two countries together on all questions concerning the Far East; the second was Russia's refusal to conclude a commercial treaty with the United States replacing the one abrogated during President Taft's administration. Her refusal was not official, but refusal it was, nevertheless, her excuse being the undesirability of entering into commercial agreements with neutral nations until after the war, or at least until the Allies' trade agreement can be more definitely defined.

On the other hand, a project was broached for direct telegraphic communication between Russia and the United States, either by cable or wireless. Also permission has been given for the establishment of an American bank in Petrograd.

A decree prohibiting the importation of luxuries was promulgated during the war, three meatless days a week proclaimed, and other economic war measures put into force.

But so far as Russia is concerned, the real participation in the war by the common people was the big event. Through this participation the people are beginning to find themselves. The information of a Peasants' Party in the Duma, is significant of the new trend in Russia which made itself particularly manifest during the year now at its close. The subtle internal change in the Empire will make 1916 remembered when victories in the field shall have been forgotten.

"I will be one of the most talked of figures in town. So don't fail to make my acquaintance. I will tell you more about myself in a day or two.

COAL DEALERS HAVE MADE HUGE PROFITS

AS MUCH AS $150 PROFIT UPON A CARLOAD OF COAL, PROBE DISCOVERS.

New York, Jan. 4.—The Federal food and coal price probers have discovered leads which indicate illegal manipulation, George W. Anderson Special Assistant Attorney-General, announced after meeting District Attorneys from Northern and Central Atlantic States.

"We have already good grounds for suspecting that the prevailing high prices, particularly in coal, are due to illegal acts," he said. "The failure of coal dealers to put consignments of coal on the market as rapidly as possible is suspicious in view of the prevailing prices.

"We have discovered that some of the dealers, in some instances, are making as high as $150 profit on each carload of coal."

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hemmings, Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

FOR THE NEW YEAR

Your table will not be complete without a big bowl, generously filled with these jolly, bright, California Oranges. They should be plentiful. They possess the organic salts and acids that oranges contain to aid digestion, and bring the blood and tissue back to normal.

SUNKIST

Uniformly Food Oranges

Buy them by the box. Uniformly good oranges—such as Sunkist—will keep.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

A LARGE NUMBER ATTEND THE OPENING SESSION OF THE RED CROSS WORKERS' CAMPAIGN

Large Quantity of Supplies Needed For Immediate Use on the Battlefront Will Be Made Up and Forwarded--Workers May Take Work Home if They Are Unable to Remain at the Red Cross Rooms in the Public Library.

CAMPAIGN WILL LAST SIX WEEKS

Over one hundred and seventy-five people, nearly all of whom were workers, attended the opening session of the Red Cross Society campaign, which opened yesterday afternoon in the Public Library. The object of the campaign is to prepare for shipment a large quantity of supplies needed for immediate use on the battle front. The campaign will last for six weeks. Yesterday a great many people who were unable to stay took work home with them. A number of knitting machines and twelve sewing machines are on hand and will be used by the workers throughout the campaign. Supplies that are required for immediate use in France will be made up and forwarded as soon as they are ready. The call for workers is an urgent one and should meet with a ready response. Large quantities of materials are on hand ready for the workers who will make them up into various forms as required by the authorities. People who are unable to remain at the rooms of the Society at the Public Library may take work home with them. About forty have already done this.

Mrs. Matthews' Address.

A feature of yesterday's session was an address by Mrs. T. F. Matthews, who recently returned from a trip to England in company with Mrs. A. H. Stratton.

Mrs. John Allen, who occupied the chair, welcomed Mrs. Matthews back on behalf of the society, and hoped through her efforts the society would acquire new information which would give fresh zeal and enthusiasm to the workers.

Mrs. Matthews emphasized the need of meeting the growing responsibility of the war to the fullest measure in this, the third year. The society has shown all through that it is capable of using the money it receives and wants the sympathy of all women who can spare any time for the work—and who can't? Mrs. Matthews gave a detailed account of her trip. On arriving at the dock the party had a few minutes to spare, during which the first real touch of war she saw was a black boat laden with ammunition which slipped out at three or four in the morning. On the boat the party came over on there were many interesting people, Mrs. Herbourne, who was collecting for English Red Cross hospitals, Col. Lewis, who patented a machine gun which in his own country, the United States, had been turned down and then adopted by the English government. Mrs. Matthews was greatly interested in the way women were falling in to fill the places of absent heroes. Taxi drivers, train conductors, everywhere a woman could take up the work they had done. She had many interesting chats with Peterborough people. Amongst Claude Rogers was the first mentioned. Her party was shown through the hospital of which Dr. Huston was in charge. To this hospital four hundred wounded men are brought daily from France. The patients on being asked if they wanted to return to France, replied that it was not inclination, but a sense of duty which compelled them. She was struck by the cheerfulness of all and much interested in the way they employed their time, some doing fancy work as well as women. This is sold and half the proceeds devoted to buying new material, the other half reserved for the patient who worked it. She then described the Lord Mayor's procession, which her party saw, and in which the 93rd band took part. She called upon Mrs. Bell, formerly Miss Eva Denne at the hospital in which she is interested. Dr. Bell is at present in the firing line. The next Peterborough people interviewed were Col. and Mrs. Clegg. Then on to Folkestone, where she met Capt. Burnham, Major Rollins, Capt. Widdifield and many others. Here she heard a letter read from Lieut. Romeyn Stevenson describing a successful raid he led into the enemy's lines. At Robacks she met Capt. Fee, George Butcher, Arthur Graham and Bob Neil. The Canadian women there have fitted up clubs where the soldiers can read, write, etc., and a canteen where a splendid meal may be had for nine pence. From Folkestone, once a fashionable resort and of great historic interest, the troops are quietly conveyed across to France. Aeroplanes hover about to locate mines and submarines. The speaker met Dr. McPherson at the Bromley Hospital for Convalescents, and was asked to stay to tea at Orpington Hospital to meet Canon Davidson, who had just received orders to report in France. He sent kind remembrances to friends in Peterborough. She met Dr. Kelly, who was wounded while on duty. On inquiring why he did not wear the customary gold stripe given to those receiving wounds in discharging their duty, he answered that his wound was so petty in comparison with others he would not wear it.

Pleased With Response.

Mrs. Matthews met Lady Drummond, who expressed herself much pleased with the response the appeal for money for our prisoners had met. Peterborough has shipped for Red Cross purposes $500 for hot water bottles. One ship on which a great number of Red Cross supplies had been sent was lost, but was fully insured, as are all Red Cross supplies. The canteens in England are run methodically and well, mostly by voluntary aid, many titled persons being engaged in this. Mrs. Matthews was struck by the darkness of England. The daylight only lasted from 9.30 a.m. until 4 p.m. and from then on all windows and doors are darkened; even the sides of windows have green strips pasted down. Birmingham in particular was mentioned for darkness, is being the centre for munitions and the place where gas, which the Germans taught us how to use, is made, and is the aim of many Zeppelin raids. Everywhere she went Mrs. Matthews was reminded of the growing call for Red Cross work and supplies. Socks sent to the Red Cross are given to the soldiers, of whom a great number go back to the firing line, so we are really working for two causes, Red Cross and the trenches. The call is not only in England and France, but out here, for supplies, and we must care for our boys on returning. Mrs. Matthews met Mrs. Parker, a social service worker from the States, who was in England to study the women's work problem so that the United States might take pattern and be prepared.

Mrs. Allen, on behalf of the Society, thanked Mrs. Matthews again for coming to speak, and made an appeal for the women to continue to lend their aid in making up the $2,000 worth of material which is still waiting in the basement of the Library.

An Army Scandal Is Uncovered

Thomas Reports Untrue.

The court also investigated reports that General Owen Thomas, who took a prominent part in recruiting in Wales, was transferred from the command of a Welsh brigade to a lesser command through Mrs. Cornwallis-West's influence. This proved to be unfounded; but due "to an unfortunate sequence of events and the ambiguous wording of certain official letters."

The report says that Colonel Wynne Edwards reflected on Gen. Thomas, who is a brigade commander, in a letter to Mrs. Cornwallis-West "with the apparent object of exalting his own qualifications for post of same."

Mrs. Cornwallis-West sent the letter to General Cowans, with a postscript which he forwarded to Lieut.-General Sir Wm. Pitcairn Campbell of the War Office, advising him to keep an eye on Edwards and expressing high opinion of him.

Lord French's Letter.

The report calls attention to the fact that it is contrary to the regulations for a War Office official to enter into private correspondence on official matters, and also says:

"Regret is expressed that a letter sent by Lord French to the War Office was so ambiguously worded as to be capable of misconstruction. In any case, a portion of the letter was in the nature of an adverse report on Brigadier-General Owen Thomas, and should have been communicated to that officer at that time. It is also regarded as unfortunate that Lord French should have concurred in the terms of the War Office letter of July 29 to Brigadier-General Thomas, which letter must have confirmed the latter's suspicion of sinister influence."

When making a jam roly polly, instead of boiling in a cloth or basin, insert in a two pound jam jar, covered with a saucer, and put in a pan of boiling water, half way up the jar. This turns out beautifully and can be cut in slices like a jam roll.

REFRESHMENT BOOTH AT BROCK ST. RINK

Mr. Tom Dawson Will sell Hot Drinks, Sandwiches etc.

An innovation that will no doubt be appreciated has been started at the Brock Street Rink. Mr. Tom Dawson has opened a refreshment booth that will be well stocked with confectionery, gum, laces, hot drinks sandwiches, etc. Most up-to-date rinks have booths of this nature and the patrons of the rink will no doubt be glad on a cold night to avail themselves of the opportunity for a hot drink, either skating nights or at hockey matches.

DAVY CROCKETT AT THE EMPIRE

Dustin Farnum and a Strong Company in a Grand Picture.

The story of the great frontier Indian fighter who loved as he fought—with all his might and won what he sought in spite of all obstacles, even the daughter of his aristocratic neighbor, Col. Vaughn.

Across a rugged background of frontier life is woven this sweetest love story of stalwart Davy Crockett and dainty Eleanor Vaughn. She dances beside him when he visits his traps, learns from him the art of woodcraft, and in turn reads to him masterpieces of literature, particularly his favorite hero, Lochinvar.

Eleanor goes to England to be educated; returning, her father dies at sea. His vast estate is under the control of Col. Royston, who through a weakness for gambling, has committed forgery and involved the Vaughn estate to Oscar Crampton, a professional gambler. To save himself Royston is pledged to accomplish the marriage of Eleanor to Oscar Crampton's nephew, Neil.

Eleanor walks blindly into the net and Davy looks on sore at heart. Eleanor's awakening begins when she is lost in the mountains with Neil, and snowbound in a deserted cabin. Davy discovers them and while Neil shows a craven spirit of fear, Davy thrusts his arm through the cleats in the door and holds it all night against the onslaught of a pack of wolves.

The grand finale comes when Davy emulates his hero, Lochinvar, and carries Eleanor away fro mthe altar, a willing captive.

Herb. King With Swift and Co.

The many friends of Mr. Herbert King, who was in Peterborough during the summer months, recuperating, will be very pleased to hear that he has taken charge of the Butter and Egg Department of Swift and Company, South Water Street, Chicago, Ill. Mr. King, who is an old Peterborough boy, has an excellent voice, and entertained his friends on numerous occasions while in the city. The following is taken from the New York Produce News:

Chicago, Dec. 23.—Herbert King, well known to the trade, started this week in charge of the butter and egg department of Swift and Co.'s South Water street house. Mr. King was for many years with Earl Bros. and later with M. L. Brown and Co. He is probably one of the best known figures in the butter business. Buttermakers and shippers know Mr. King for his unusually fine voice with which he has entertained many conventions. He expects to do a big business for Swift and Co.

93rd Deserter Held On Several Charges

A deserter from the 93rd Battalion was rounded up at the C.P.R. station last night and was remanded for a week in police court this morning. He faces three charges—of desertion, of stealing a ride on the C.P.R., and of being drunk in a public place. He was held in the baggage car of the early morning train from Toronto, and handed over to the police here. He was one of the few recruits who disappeared shortly before the Battalion left for camp, last Spring, and the police state that he has been in Toronto during the summer and fall.

CASH BONUS TO EMPLOYEES

Peterboro' Representatives of the Prudential Insurance Co. Participate in New Year's Gift.

The Prudential Insurance Co. of America has made the New Year of 1917 cheerier for its field force and home office employees by making a substantial cash New Year's present to the assistant superintendents and agents among their 16,000 employees in the field in the United States and Canada.

They have also informed their assistant superintendents and agents that an increase in salary will be granted to them beginning with the first week in January, and also a bonus will be awarded them for the last three months of 1916.

The above company is one of the gigantic companies doing business in the United States and Canada, and they have been very successful in the loyalty of their field force. This is only another recognition of work well done. The agents in the Peterborough District are well known to the people of Peterborough and who, no doubt, will be glad to hear the good news.

S. A. NOTES

The holiday season has been an exceptionally busy one in both Senior and Junior circles of the Salvation Army. At the three Sunday schools about 600 were served. The poor families of the city were not forgotten by any means. The Temple Band in their serenading effort got a splendid response for which they are very thankful. Brigadier Southall's visit was one of special interest indeed, and was very much enjoyed by large crowds. The financial statement given by Adj. McElhiney on Monday night showed the Corps in the healthiest condition in its history.

The gathering for new sehts goes on apace, having been halted a bit by the holiday season. The seats will be here soon and will be much more comfortable than the present ones.

Notwithstanding about 90, have enlisted from the soldiers or adherents roll to fight for their country, the work of the Salvation Army goes on. Adj. and Mrs. McElhiney, and local officers are very thankful to the public at large for their hearty support in every way, and will do their best in 1917 to merit confidence bestowed.

A Growing Year For Porter S. White

The excellent connection which the grocery firm of Porter-White has made in city and country was well retained during 1916. Notwithstanding the change which was recently made in the location of this store, by removing to allow the Bank of Ottawa suitable quarters in their old established stand. Their customers have followed them faithfully and indeed new customers have been attracted to the store in considerable numbers. The business of this store last year was the largest and most satisfactory it ever received, being an evidence that the service, quality and prices have made good in swelling the year's growth in trade.

DEFENSIVE CONSCRIPTION THE ONLY WAY SAYS MAJ. O'GORMAN

Returned Chaplain Thinks Best Plan is to First Call Out Unmarried Eligibles Between 18 and 45

"When a Canadian has lived for a time in countries where a defensive conscription is in force, he gradually comes to the conclusion that it is the only way, and by far the fairest way, to conduct a war which decides the whole future of the state."

These are the words of Major (Rev.) John O'Gorman, of Ottawa, who recently returned wounded from the front, in a statement just given out.

"The first thing which strikes one who has just returned from overseas," said Father O'Gorman, "is the extraordinary number of young men in civilian clothes in Canada, compared with France or Great Britain.

"At the present moment it appears to me the best plan is to apply the Militia Act and call the eligible unmarried men, between the ages of 18 and 45 for six months active service in Canada. The eligible married men could be called out, in a similar manner later on. The national registration ought to assist materially in deciding those who on account of important duties should be exempted. The people of Canada, and of every part of Canada, would support heartily such a plan.

"Two very valuable assets should result. First, the whole manhood of Canada would be trained, and thus capable of defending Canada, if and when necessary. Secondly, a vast number of those putting in this six months active service in Canada would enlist when they realised their position, for service overseas; they would do so, not as a result of cajolery or coercion, but quite willingly as a result of conscientious patriotism.

"Meanwhile, why should not our young men, who cannot see their way clear at present to go overseas, join a local militia regiment. It would be a step in the right direction; and if they were never able, for a valid reason, to make a further step, they would be respected all the more for having at least joined the militia.

"If I have the right to address any young man I would say to him: If you cannot enlist for service overseas, then this very week sign the national registration card, and join the militia. If, on the other hand, you can join the heroes of Courcelette, do so with out delay. If you want a motto from Holy Writ, why not take this one: "Far be it from me to spare my life in all this time of trouble; for I am not better than my brethren.'"

United States War Profits Reach Total of $5,000,000,000

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3. — Uncle Sam, balancing his books for the calendar year 1916 finds the European war has netted him up to date about five billion dollars.

He opens up a new set of books for 1917 with the prospect of swelling his colossal war profits to even more stupendous proportion if the war lasts another year and trade with the belligerents continues brisk.

The excess of American exports over imports known as balance of trade, since the war began, in August, 1914, amounts to $5,200,422,201. How the war has brought business to the United States is graphically set forth in the following table of exports and balance of trade:

Year.	Exports.	Balance of trade.
1912 . . .	$2,299,217,993	$ 581,144,938
1913 . . .	2,484,018,292	691,421,812
1914 . . .	2,113,624,050	324,348,049
1915 . . .	3,554,670,847	1,776,074,152
1916 . . .	5,480,000,000	3,100,000,000

Corner on Gold Supply.

Your Uncle Samuel has become within two years and a half the greatest merchant and producer on earth, and also the world's banker. He has a corner on the gold supply and is trying to devise ways and means of stemming the flow of the metal to these shores.

Analysis of the figures on exports shows that more than 90 per cent. of the increased trade of the United States since the war began is in supplies directly or indirectly required for the support of the military and naval forces of the belligerents, which means the entente allies, for the central powers are cut off from commercial intercourse with America.

In the last twelve months the United States rolled up a volume of foreign trade valued at $8,000,000,000, an increase of $2,000,000,000 over last year. The balance of trade this year is ten times greater than in 1914, the first year of the war.

Materials Exported.

During the first twenty-seven months of the war, which ended Nov. 1, the United States exported goods of all kinds to the value of $8,202,600,000. Of this amount $168,460,600 was in ammunition and firearms. Other materials mainly for war purposes were exported during that time as follows:

Horses and mules	$ 200,400,000
Brass and brass manufactures	285,466,600
Commercial automobiles.	106,500,000
Aeroplanes and parts . . .	8,500,000
Barbed wire	41,400,000
Horseshoes	4,300,000
Lead and lead manufactures	27,200,000
Men's boots and shoes .	58,400,000
Harness and saddles . . .	28,200,000
Wool wearing apparel. .	29,400,000
Other wool manufactures	51,100,000
Zinc manufactures. . . .	83,500,000

Difference in Tariff.

The value of the cartridges exported is given at $75,145,143; gunpowder, $283,796,867; other explosives, $413,064,404; firearms, $48,545,324. The monthly exports of gunpowder grew from $16,821 in August, 1914, the first month of the war, to $29,187,936 in June, 1916.

The value of cartridge exports has increased every month since the war began, starting with $164,069 in August, 1914, and reaching $6,448,881 in October, 1916. Exports of explosives other than gunpowder have grown from $26,336 in August, 1914, to $42,293,211 in September, 1916. Last September was the largest month for exports of firearms since the war began, the total being $9,259,263. The first month of the war the firearms shipments totaled $208,644.

During the last year of the Republican tariff law, according to the figures of the department of commerce, 55 per cent. of the imports were admitted free of duty, but under the present Democratic tariff law during 1916 between 66 and 67 per cent. came in without payment of any duty. Although the imports to the United States have grown from $1,792,596,480 in 1913, the last year of the Payne-Aldrich tariff, to $2,360,000,000 in 1916, the revenue derived from duties has dropped from $387,868,193 in 1913 to $183,533,475 in 1916.

Exports Continue to Grow.

Exports continue on the increase according to the latest reports received by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. "Exports for November," says an official report, "were the largest on record, exceeding those for September by $8,000,000. The total for November is $517,980,000. The total for the eleven months ended with November was $4,961,200,000, against $3,195,400,000 for the same period of 1915 and $2,200,800,000 in 1913, which was the largest in normal years."

The imports for November, 1916, exceeded by 25 per cent. the November averages for the years 1911 to 1915.

ONLY SEVEN SERVICE CARDS REFUSED IN ONE LARGE DISTRICT

The National Service cards are being returned with great success. Only a very small percentage have not returned their cards to the collectors when called for. In one district all cards are returned but seven, showing that a very large majority of the people are co-operating with the Post Office in this great work.

You are reminded that all cards not returned, the party to whom delivered or intended for, will be reported to Ottawa as refusing to sign.

Tomorrow (Friday) collection will be in the west district, composed of Charlotte street, Park street, and west from Wolfe street to Smith street.

Please assist the collectors by having your card ready.

FORTY YEARS IN SOLITARY CELL

Inhuman Punishment Inflicted in California Prison.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—A request that Jesse Pomeroy, who has served forty years of a life sentence of solitary confinement at the state prison, be given privileges similar to those accorded other prisoners, was made in a petition to Governor McCall and the executive council by District Attorney Pelletier.

The boy of 14 years was too young for immediate execution, caged in for forty years, he had been spared to become the only example in this nation of a prisoner being inhumanly treated and slowly done to death or insanity," the district attorney wrote. "He is human, sane, his record under awful punishment has been good; why fear to make him a prisoner under life sentence like any other?"

Birth of Nation Will Be Followed By New "Intolerance"

The Birth of a Nation Company that spent the first three days of the year in Peterborough will be taken in off the road on Saturday. Another company playing in Eastern Canada will continue its itinerary to Halifax and then jump to New York. There are about ten or twelve companies in the United States which will gradually close. Some of them, in fact, are already closed up, to be followed by David W. Griffith's magnificent spectacle "Intolerance," which is expected to reach Peterborough probably in February. The New York papers have described this Griffith successor to "The Birth of a Nation" as a wonderful series of films with a big lesson behind their sequent stories. The music has been arranged and some of it written by Mr. Carl Brell, who also did "The Birth of a Nation" music.

Writ For $2,000 A Month Against Cawthra Mulock

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—Toronto Society and General Circles were shocked to-day when a writ demanding two thousand dollars monthly alimony was issued by Mrs. Cawthra Mulock, against her husband, who was left eight million a few years ago from his Grand Aunt. Mrs. Mulock is the daughter of Chief Justice Falconbridge and Cawthra Mulock the son of Chief Justice Mulock.

Wadsworth Bill Passes

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The House to-day passed the Wadsworth bill authorizing Secretary of War to grant to water power users the entire 20,000 feet of water a second divertible by the United States from Niagara River under the Canadian treaty. The bill has passed the Senate and will go to conference so the amendments may be straightened out.

Millbrook Sunday School Anniversary Was A Success

Event Wound Up With a Big Entertainment on Monday Evening—Rev. C. E. Cragg, B.D., Preached the Anniversary Sermons.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 4.—The Millbrook Methodist Sunday School held its anniversary services on Sunday last, and its annual concert on New Years' night. The services on Sunday morning and evening were conducted by Rev. Chas. E. Cragg, B.D., of Grace Church, Napanee, and his eloquent discourses were listened to with close attention by very large congregations. During the afternoon session Mr. Cragg addressed the Sunday School as also did Rev. W. H. Higgs. The prizes were distributed to those who were regular attendants throughout the year and for memorizing Scripture verses. Special music by the choir and a solo by Miss Colwell added interest to the specially attractive services. The Sunday School orchestra, under the able leadership of Mr. G. E. Burnham, rendered appropriate music for the afternoon service.

THE CONCERT.

The concert on Monday evening was a grand success both as to programme and financially. The little tots were well trained and their motion songs were well given. Great credit is due Master Jack Byam, Alfred Higgs, Lawrence Winslow, Earnest Burnham, and little Miss Jean Burnham for their splendidly rendered songs, recitations and dialogues. Prof. Staples and Mr. Jas. Williams sang several solos, and also in duet, and their singing was a real treat. Miss Guite, elocutionist, gave several recitations, which were greatly enjoyed by the audience. Mr. Fred Fallis was chairman. The Sunday School orchestra gave several numbers, adding greatly to the delightful programme.

The Superintendent, teachers, officers and other members of the school have reason to be pleased with the success of their anniversary services and entertainment. The proceeds of which amounted to $106.

Corp. Stewart Wounded.

From Ottawa, Jan. 1st, 1917, to Mrs. Elizabeth Stewart, Millbrook:

Sincerely regret to inform you A 4219, Corporal Hiram Lyman Stewart, infantry, officially reported wounded, Oct. 8th, 1916. Will send further particulars when received.

Late C. C. Shaw.

The death of Cecil Clifford Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shaw, took place last week, after an illness of over two years, from diabetes. He had been able to go about until Wednesday evening. All that medical aid could do was done for the sufferer. He was a bright boy of 10 years and had made many warm friends since coming to Millbrook, five years ago. He was a member of the Methodist Sunday School. The funeral to Emily cemetery, on Saturday, was largely attended. Services at the home was conducted by Rev. W. Higgs and at Omemee by Rev. J. W. Down. Besides his parents, three brothers, Milton, Arthur and Stanley, and four sisters, Eva., Pearl, Reta, Helen are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate son and brother.

Broke Her Arm.

Mrs. Wm. C. Allen fell on Friday last and broke her arm at the wrist. She is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Sunday School Entertainment.

St. Thomas S. S. entertainment was held in the S. S. room on Dec. 29, and was well attended. The story of Robinson Crusoe, illustrated by limelight views, was ably given by Rev. A. G. E. Westmacott; recitations by Frances Turner and Jas. Dean, and songs by Henry Gray were well given. The song "Enlist Little Mothers" by eight little girls, was also greatly appreciated, as were the dialogues "The Making of Canada's Flag," and "The Key of Jack Canuck's Treasure House." After the programme the prizes were distributed. A Christmas tree was also an interesting feature of the entertainment.

Mr. Fair of Tyrone was a guest of Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Higgs, this week.

Mr. Fred Medd was a guest of his mother, Mrs. Thomas Medd, this week.

Mrs. E. McConnell of Lindsay is a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nattrass.

"May be More Yielding."

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: If the Allies have the patience to look further they may find Germany more yielding than she wishes to appear. It would be dreadful to refuse to listen to anything before deciding the war must go to "knockout."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SATISFIED WITH SOLDIERS LOCAL FANS NOW WANT TO SIZE UP THE JUNIORS

Will Get Their Chance on Tuesday Night When the Bowmanville Team Will Clash With Peterboro' in the First Junior O.H.A. Game of the Season – Looks Like a Battle Royal.

Satisfied that the 247th Intermediates have a team that should go far this season, the local fans are now waiting an opportunity to size up the Peterborough Juniors, a team in which they are greatly interested, because its members are so well known in the city. With two good teams in the running the fans could look forward to a busy season, hence their anxiety to be on hand when the junior season opens next Tuesday night, at Brock Street rink, with a visit from the Bowmanville Juniors. The Peterborough team have been going strong in practice, and made a fine showing in a game with the 247th team on New Year's morning. Not a regular has missed a practice this season except through illness or absence from the city, and the spirit the youngsters are showing, coupled with the fact that they are practically buying their own outfits, should earn them a big following. With Junior teams in action the fans are always sure of a battle from gong to gong and next Tuesday night's game should be a red-hot one. The Bowmanville team is said to be very strong this year, but the Petes will endeavour to give them a lively reception on Tuesday.

LINDSAY COMMENT ON TUESDAY'S GAME

The Lindsay Post says on Tuesday's hockey game:

Playing five man hockey, the 247th Battalion Intermediate team defeated the Lindsay Midgets last night at Peterborough 14 to 2 and the game was a lot more closely contested than the big score would indicate.

Weighing many more pounds to the man, the Peterboro' team which has been gathered from all parts of Ontario, simply outskated and outchecked the Midgets at every turn, but they did not outgame them, and with her regular lineup on and favored with good ice next Friday night, Lindsay should give the soldier aggregation a merry chase.

The local squad had to contend with a series of unfortunate circumstances that would have taken the heart out of most teams. "Chuck" Carew's failure to join the club was the first jolt handed the Midgets, "Buck" Read's illness was another wallop to solar plexus, and Art Carew's injury early in the contest proved to be the knock out. To add to that the condition of the ice was impossible, and the all star selection that they had to face was altogether too much of a handicap for the locals to overcome.

The game itself proved to be interesting for the first few minutes only, with seven men aside on the ice. Then "Buck" Read, who had been confined to his bed for the past week, could not stand the pace in his weakened condition, and had to be lead off the ice, much against his own wishes. He showed remarkable gameness in going on the ice at all, and it would have been foolhardy to allow him to play further. Flanagan was dropped to even up, and both teams continued to set a fast clip. Peterboro notching the first goal. After that it was pretty much all Peterboro with Lindsay showing occasional flashes of form. It would be hard indeed to select anyone in particular of the soldiers as the best man, as each one played grand hockey and at no time were they in any danger as far as the game was concerned, the result never being in doubt.

Anthony Wilding's Enlistment Emphasizes Darcy's Shirking

(By W. O. McGeehan, Sporting Editor New York Tribune.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The importance of Les. Darcy, the bull-necked young man who skulked away from Australia to avoid possible conscription, has been greatly magnified. The drool that has been poured forth about him gives some information as to the state of the "fight game." This man, who smuggled himself out of his country when he was sadly needed for a man's work and for the fight of fights, has been hailed as a conquering hero who is about to enliven and elevate the "fight game." This seems to be the point of view of the average boxing fan in New York.

Because I have seen fit to intimate that Darcy should have been among the first of the Australians to answer the call to the colours—he being a fighter by profession—I have received a flock of letters abusing me for this perfectly obvious contention.

Tennis to the patron of the "fight game" is a "sissy" sport, a game which requires no particular courage or stamina. Anthony Wilding was the best of Australia's tennis players. Darcy—so we have been told—is the greatest of Australia's fighters. Yet when the great war started Anthony Wilding, tennis champion, hurried from the United States to Australia to join the colours. He was killed at Gallipoli. His splendid, graceful body was mangled under tons of earth when a shell hit the dugout where his machine gun was stationed. Death came to him shortly after he had been promoted for gallantry in action. "And he was the only son of his mother, and she was a widow."

Les. Darcy, the fighter, was in Australia when the war started. For two years he resisted the importunings of the recruiting sergeant, and when the intimation that "a fighter should fight" became annoying he travelled to the United States to avoid taking his part in the great war.

It was just as natural for a man like Wilding, a gentleman, to do what he did as it was for Darcy to do what he did, perhaps. The one instinctively ran toward his duty as quickly as the other ran away from it. I do not blame Darcy for the lack of imagination which prevents him seeing things as Wilding saw them. But, in the name of the God of Things That Are Fit, why should Darcy be called the fighter?

HOCKEY GOSSIP

Both Peterborough clubs were out for practice at Brock street rink last night, the juniors from 7 to 8 and the 247th team from 8 to 9. The interest the players are taking in the game is shown by the fact that not a regular was absent from either squad. The ice was bad, but the teams each put in a useful hour nevertheless.

The Soldiers are scheduled to play in Lindsay to-morrow night, but unless the weather man trots out a sudden change in the atmosphere there is little prospect of a battle in the Arsenal town.

The Oshawa Hockey Club has written the Peterborough juniors, asking the locals to switch the two games between the two clubs. The local juniors are scheduled to play in Oshawa on Friday, Jan. 12, on which date Oshawa and the 162nd Battalion team of Oshawa are also scheduled to meet. Oshawa wanted to come here on the 12th and have the locals go back on the 19th, but the local management declined to switch, because it would mean three home games here next week, a little too much of a good thing.

McPhee, a former Peterborough player, turned out with St. Patricks last night. He is a right wing player and appears to be a good stickhandler.—Toronto Globe.

Oshawa, Jan. 3.—The first local O. H. A. intermediate game was played to-night between the 162nd Battalion and Oshawa. Soft ice made the game one of individual effort, and McNally in goal and Ryerson at centre for the khaki boys were the best. Although the soldiers did not score, they will require watching on hard ice. Oshawa scored three in the first period, two in the second, and seven in the last, making the total score twelve to nil. The line-up:

Referee—Gorrie, Toronto.

Bowmanville, Jan. 3—In the O. H. A. intermediate series here this evening the game between Bowmanville and Port Hope was won by Bowmanville by 4 to 2. Lineup:

First period, Port Hope 0, Bowmanville 2, second period, Port Hope 2, Bowmanville 2; third period, Port Hope, 0, Bowmanville 0.

Referee—J. Marron, Toronto.

CURLING

The early break in the cold weather has interrupted the curling just as it was beginning to gather interest and games. Last night's schedule had to be postponed, and the ice is too soft to-day unless the weather turns colder before night.

Gay Lid Lifting Club in London Shut and Fined

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Ciro's club, one of the most elite and lively night clubs that ever dispelled darkness from the early hours, is no more for the present. Recording its demise the Times says:

"In the Bow Street police court Mr. Garrett passed the sentence upon officials of Ciro's club, summoned for selling and permitting the consumption of intoxicating liquor after hours. The Magistrate said the facts, which could not be disputed, were that in a night raid the police took twenty-three samples of drink from seven tables. Twelve were found to consist of intoxicating liquor.

"No attempt was made to dispute the evidence. Police officers were served with champagne. What was very significant was that the drinks were served under the name of 'cups' in glass jugs.

"The defence was based upon the theory that the drinks had been left on the tables through carelessness. The magistrate said he was forced to the conclusion that there had been flagrant and deliberate and repeated breaches of the liquor control regulations.

"He felt it his duty, the magistrate said, to strike the club from the register and order that no club could be held on the premises for twelve months. He ordered that the club pay a fine of $500. The governing manager and the restaurant manager were fined each $131, and the three committee members were fined each $125 and $26 costs."

A MOST EXTRAORDINARY VALUE IN CASHMERETTE STOCKINGS EVERY SIZE FROM 6 TO 10½ REGULAR 50c. ANY SIZE FOR 28c

This is a most unusual Hosiery event, unusual from many standpoints, unusual from the scope of quality and the great quantity of hose to be offered at these special prices. Knowing that the hosiery situation is making it more difficult to secure dependable hosiery at moderate costs, we planned for this event some time ago and which provides you with the opportunity of laying in a six months supply and which we feel sure, you will not be able to duplicate within a long period.

The stockings are particularly desirable as you will learn after a moment's inspection. We have many thousands of pairs and every size, and you can have as many as you wish ..... 28c pair

Sir,—In last night's issue, on page five, appears a statement re Harry Hill having "graduated" under Mr. John Renwick. Just returned from spending the New Year's holiday in Toronto, my attention has been called to the above statement, which is just to neither John Renwick nor the undersigned. Harry Hill sang in St. John's choir, as alto boy for over two years, and studied under me for his first instrumental examination, passing with first-class honours. Later he was appointed to Park Street Baptist Church, and while there passed his first vocal examination with first-class honours, and later still, his second vocal examination with second-class honours. He then secured an appointment in a church with a pipe organ at Orangeville, as organist and choirleader. On returning to Peterborough he resumed lessons with me until about a year ago. On page 109 of the Toronto College of Music Calendar, 1916, appears the name of Harry Hill, as having passed the third vocal examination with honours, his previous examinations resulting in either first or second-class honours. This last result was obtained while studying under Mr. Renwick. Credit to whom credit is due.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your Evening Examiner I saw a letter, signed "A Soldier's Wife," put in concerning the small pay which we receive. Well, let me tell you, dear Sir, that I think that she is right in saying that the paltry sum we do get is hardly enough for bare existence and I know that I don't get enough meat to eat since my husband joined the soldiers; it just keeps me busy buying fuel and the bare necessities of life, besides paying light, water, gas, and rent. I wonder if some of the men who are handling the pay checks and also the Patriotic Fund had to economize on forty dollars a month, how they would like it. I guess there would be a lot of hot air shooting around them when our so-called aristocracy had to turn out and economize. I know that there are some men who would help if they knew the condition the soldiers' wives were left in; so for pity's sake somebody get busy and see that we are used a bit better. I think for my own self the best thing we could do, I mean all the soldiers' dependents, is to have a meeting and see what we can do in reference to having the soldiers' pay raised.

Hoping you will print my letter, dear Editor and hoping I am not taking up too much of your valuable space, I beg to remain,

Another Soldier's Wife in Need.

Editor of the Examiner:

It is nearly time that some person could spare the time to think of the soldiers' wives and babes. Here we are with no one to think or do for us and we are responsible for the care of small children. The paltry sum of $40 or $50 may have been alright when the foods and rent were normal, but fancy us trying to economize when the money we receive is scarcely sufficient to exist on these hard times. I myself have spent the better part of my pay to pay for sick debts for the past three months, but some people are under the impression that we receive a handsome compensation for the separation or loss of our husbands. I would advise this class of people to try a soldier's life or that of a soldier's wife and they would very soon give us some real sympathy. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space.

ANOTHER SOLDIER'S WIFE

Editor of the Examiner:

IMMIGRATION AFTER THE WAR

Professor Ward of Harvard University, thinks that the danger to the United States after the war, is not so much the dumping of cheap European goods as the dumping of cheap European labour. "Goods from abroad concern pocketbooks only. Human beings from abroad enter into our national life. They contribute to the blood of the future American people. They determine what our race is to be. it is the cargoes of men, and women and children, not the cargoes of goods that are the real problem."—Toronto Star.

That's a hard hit at the virile European immigrant with good red fighting blood in his veins. We are inclined to believe the United States will benefit rather than lose by the admixture of some foreign blood that has red corpucles in it. Any unprejudical stranger who might visit New York or other large American cities to-day would, we believe, incline to the opinion that American morals are not in danger of being lowered by any new stunts that can be introduced by Europeans, no matter from what grade of society, rather the reverse. This "I am holier tha nthou" attitude, on the part of a people who are too proud to fight, does not sit well on them to-day, when the white light is turned on—revealing the festering sores, which are gnawing at the heart of the great republic. A carnivalia of revelry holds the land in thrall—blinding the people to the true significance of the terrible world tragedy being staged in Europe. They manifest impatience only because the struggle should not now be ended so they might once more over-run the new blood soaked soil of ill-fated Belgium, and of Valiant France—seeking for souvenirs—filling the lands with their Oh's and their Ah's—how dreadful, how shocking—filling their trunks with relics real and ficticious of the great fights (in which they too should have been fighting) these to be exhibited on their return home, to credulous friends, with mouthings about the dreadfulness of it all.

Again, we venture to suggest that the mixture of some European red blood with the present diluted American articles should prove of great import to the republic some day, when she too may have to fight for her existence.

CANUCK.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—With your kind permission I would like to offer a few suggestions concerning the 247th Battalion's canvass of the city, and in so doing hope I may not incur the displeasure of the military officials, particulars those entrusted with the collection of the data desired.

In the first place every citizen should cheerfully and promptly comply with the officer's request for this information, for he is simply doing his duty, an imposed duty, none too pleasant I may reasonably suppose, and while it may be annoying to some over-sensitive people to be so frequently bothered for apparently the same information don't you think it must be infinitely more trying to the officer who is obliged, only too often, to meet so many people who fume and scowl and abuse him, withholding particulars which, as Britons, we should be glad to proffer without waiting to be asked? These officers are our own people, friends—not our enemies — and we should meet them with a smile and the glad hand.

In my opinion the work could be expedited and to better satisfaction if the officer would leave a card or slip asking for the required information, as many of us are employed on night work, and rest during the day, and so are not accessible. Others work during the day and possibly are out to the show or the rink at night, and in like manner, are not at home to be interviewed. If these cards were left and were used to signing cards, we could fill them out in a few minutes at our leisure, and they could be called for later. As I understand it, there has been a great list of names (1,400) turned in to the Armouries, many of whom are not eligible for various reasons; and it is the intention of the officers, from this information now being gathered, to remove such names from the lists and erase troubling the parties. It is only a matter of time till we have conscription anyway, and if our hearts are in the right place we should make this repugnant duty of canvassing as easy as possible for our worthy military fellow-citizens. If conscription comes withholding the information will be no benefit; if it doesn't come, giving it will be no detriment, so let's help the boys who voluntarily enlisted to fight our—mark that word "our"—battles.

Law Association Gets $4,500 For Library Damage

Offer of Appraiser Accepted Yesterday—Lawyers Will Wait on Councils to Suggest Facilities

At a meeting of the Law Association in Mr. R. R. Hall's offices, last night, it was announced that the offer of the insurance adjuster of $4,500 to cover the damage to the law library sustained in the fire of December 11th, had been accepted. Mr. Hall presided. The members discussed at some length the probable alterations to the Court House and the desired provisions for the courts and lawyers. A committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. F. D. Kerr, R. R. Hall, Joseph Wearing and Crown Attorney Hatton to wait upon the members of the County and City Councils regarding the prospective action in restoring the Court House. The Association desires merely to present suggestions that would improve the facilities in which they are concerned.

The discussion naturally turned to a consideration of the ideal arrangement and location of the county and city buildings. It is recognized that for the present the Court House will probably be renovated and restored, but it is also viewed as a certainty that the demands of the future, even of the present, exceed the accommodations of the old building. With the city maintaining its growth it should only be a few years until a commodious, modern building is required. The possibility of the city and county acting together to provide a building for their combined use was mentioned. The city is poorly equipped at present, and the county building has decided limitations. There are no adequate quarters for the County Crown Attorney, for the County School Inspector, for the County Constable, and the Judge's chambers could be made more cheerful and could be greatly improved in its appointments. However great the present needs may be and those of the future may impend, it is conceded that they are not likely to receive much consideration under the present conditions. But in the alterations to the Court House, it is hoped that its former limitations may be extended.

URGES NEW LAWS IN JAPAN.

Tokio, Japan, January 4.—The Diet was opened by the Emperor, who in his address from the throne, expressed his gratification that the relations between the empire and the treaty powers were growing closer. He said that the alliance with Great Britain and the convention with France were becoming much stronger, and called attention to the new convention with Russia, which he termed a matter for congratulation.

The Emperor explained that he had ordered the ministers to draft the bills necessary for the development of the country, "keeping in mind the world situation," and asked the Diet to cooperate in passing these measures. The House was then adjourned until Jan. 21st.

OBITUARY

JENNIE HARRISTON.

Last night Jennie Harriston, wife of John Harriston, died at the Nicholls Hospital from pneumonia, aged 36. Mrs. Harriston was born in Burleigh township and resided the greater part of her life in St. Catharines, coming to Peterborough about three months ago. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, at present confined at Nicholls Hospital from pneumonia, and two children. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at two thirty from the family residence, 476 Rogers street, to Little Lake cemetery for interment.

JAMES ALEXANDER LINTON

The death occurred on Christmas Day in Eyebrow, Saskatchewan of James Alexander Linton, age 47 years. Deceased had been ill but a few days. He formerly resided in Roseneath and was well known in Peterborough.

BERTRAM DAWSON.

Mr. Bertram Dawson, president of the Dickson Bridge Works Co., succumbed to an attack of pneumonia on Sunday night about 11 o'clock, after an illness of only a few day's duration. The deceased who was 36 years of age, was one of Campbellford's best known business men, and enjoyed the respect of a large circle of acquaintances.

He was born in Omemee and spent the early part of his life in Peterboro. He came to Campbellford nine years ago with the Dickson Bridge Works Co., and later became a stockholder. His promotion with the company was rapid until he finally became president.

Seven years ago Mr. Dawson was united in marriage to Miss Laura Dickson, who with two small children is left to cherish the fond memory of a loving husband and father. He is also survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dawson and three brothers and two sisters, via; Percy of Winnipeg, Charles of Quebec, and George of Montreal; Mrs. Clemens of Tyrone, and Mrs. (Dr.) Lloyd of University, Ala.

A private service was held at the family residence yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The Masonic Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, was present at the funeral and marched to Mount Pleasant cemetery headed by the 40th Regt. Band. The employees of the Dickson Co.. also marched in the funeral procession

Among those who honored the memory of the deceased with floral tribute were: Employees of the Dickson Bridge Co., five wreaths; Golden Rule Lodge; Northumberland Paper and Electric Co.; Mrs. Dawson, Mrs. Dickson and Miss Dickson; Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd, Father, Mother and Brothers; Dr. and Mrs. Dupras, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. E. The Dahlia Peerage.—In a railway carriage recently two men were talking rather loudly. "Lord French is very sick," one of them observed. "Yes," said the other, "so is the Marchioness of Powys, but the Duchess of Clevaland is getting on famously. The Earl of Rosebery seems to be dwindled away. I can't make it out." When they left the carriage a passenger remarked to a friend that these two fellows seemed anxious to imthey were acquainted with everyone in Burke's "Peerage". "Peerage be said the clairvoyant, "you will visit foreign lands and the Courts of Kings and Queens. You will conquer all rivals and marry the man of your choice. He will be tall and dark and aristocratic looking." "And young?" interrupted the lady. "Yes and very rich." The beautiful lady grasped the fortune-teller's hands and pressed them hard. "Thank you!" she said. "Now tell me one thing more. "How shall I get rid of my present husband?"

HARRY LAUDER'S "BOY" CAPTAIN IN SCOTTISH REGIMENT, DIES IN WAR

Comedian's Only Child, Who Had Been Twice Wounded, Reported Killed at Front—Father Told How He Soothed Dying Comrade With His Piano Playing

LONDON, January 4.—Capt. John Lauder, of the Argyl and Sutherland Highlanders, a son of Harry Lauder, the comedian, has been killed at the front. He was wounded twice previously.

COMEDIAN'S ONLY CHILD.

Captain Lauder was the only child of Harry Lauder, whose whole heart and soul were wrapped up in his gallant son, and whose pride in his career since he entered the war at the age of 21, with the rank of second lieutenant, was outspoken and entirely unaffected. He was twice wounded and invalided home, this being the third time he returned to the front.

On his last trip to America, Mr. Lauder was asked about his son, who had then been mentioned for conspicuous bravery and had been promoted to the rank if captain.

"He is doing fine, thank God," said Mr. Lauder, "and I'll tell you a little story about him.

"You know he was wounded at Neuve Chappelle and he was convalescing in a hospital. As soon as he was able to sit up he saw a fine piano in the big ward where he lay. Now the boy is a splendid musician—"

"'As good as his father?' questioned a hearer.

PLAYS FOR WOUNDED.

"Now, quit your 'dafin','" exclaimed the comedian. "Mind, I'm tellin' ye, he was a real musician, studied it at Oxford and all that. So, he saw this piano, and he asked the nurse:

"'Would there be any objection to me playing a bit?'

"'Objection!' the nurse says. 'Oh, Captain, please do play. It would do the boys so much good.' So my boy played for a while, softly, of course, for there were some terribly wounded fellows in the hospital, and he feared to disturb them.

"By and by, the nurse comes to him and says: 'Captain Brown, of the Gordon Highlanders, who is so seriously injured in that cot over there, asked me who was playing, and I told him it was Captain Lauder. He asked me if I could get you to play 'Lead, Kindly Light.'

"Of course, my boy was only too glad to do it. He began to play, and he saw Captain Brown smile and wave his hand at him. He played on for five or ten minutes, when he felt a hand on his shoulder. There stood the nurse, with the tears rolling down her cheeks. 'Captain Brown is dead,' she sobbed. And so he was.

"And my boy told his mother, 'Mother, I was so thankful that I was brought up to know those things, that I was sent to Sunday school in my boyhood, because it helped me to cheer the last moments of a brave man who died for his country.'"

WAS SOON TO MARRY.

Harry Lauder recently purchased an estate of 22,000 acres with a castle in Argyleshire, Scotland, where his son was to live as the young "Laird" after his marriage to Mis Mildred Thompson, of Glasgow, to whom he was engaged. He was in Australia with his father when the war began and started home immediately to enlist.

John Lauder has been in New York twice and persons who met him described him as a fine type of a gallant, well educated young Scotchman.

Worry Is Nothing But Your Mental Engine "Running Idle"

Washington, D. C., Jap. 4.

If the people of the United States are to remain well, live long and know happiness there are many thing to be considered. And among these things, in the opinion of the United States Public Health Service officials, is the automobile. And if the inhabitants, after long contemplation of the automobile and its ways, find no means of definitely improving their own health it is time for them to consider the squirrel, the contented dog and the birds of the air.

The message of counsel as sent from the Health Service offices, is as follows:

"Consider the automobile. When the car is going to stand still for more than a few minutes, the driver stops the engine. By doing this he saves gasolene, oil and, above all, useless wear and tear on the machinery. If he lets the engine 'run idle' he has wasted a lot of valuable material and shortened the life of his engine, and in the meantime the automobile has not budged an inch.

"The birds build nests for the protection of their young against the weather; the foxes dig holes for security against foes; the squirrels lay by stores of nuts against the coming of winter, and the dogs bury bones against the day when bones will be scarce. These are the manifestations of a normal protective instinct arising from an experience of many, many generations. So far as is known, though, no bird ever tried to build more nests than his neighbor; no fox ever fretted because he had only one hole in which to hide; no squirrel ever died of anxiety lest he should not lay by enough nuts for two winters instead of for one, and no dog dog ever lost any sleep over the fact that he did not have enough bones laid aside to provide for his declining years.

"This protective instinct is also present in the human mind, and when properly directed is a great source of prosperity both to the individual and the nation. In order for man to store up and lay by, to gain advancement either in honor or in material things, it is necessary that he take some forethought of the morrow, but just as soon as he carries this beyond the normal point the mental process becomes an exaggerated and an abnormal one. The normal protective instinct is stimulated by a normal fear of those events which are reasonably sure to happen in the future, unless means are adopted against them. The moment that this fear becomes abnormal or exaggerated it overstimulates this protective instinct and to no good purpose because it results in worry.

"This worry continues long after the necessity for the normal stimulus of fear has passed, with the result that there is an impairment in mental power and a dissipation of the nervous forces. In other words, the mental engine has been 'running idle' and at the same time delivering no propulsive power. In fact, worry is an abnormal state.

"Not all worry is preventable, but for the most part it can be avoided. Most of our fears are never realized, and as a rule if we meet our troubles day by day as they come without worrying about them before they arrive or fretting over them after they have passed, we will find that we have the strength to rise above them. Worry undermines the health to a certain extent. It really weakens the mental forces by tiring them out by doing nothing. Usually the relief from worry rests with the victim of this unhappy habit himself, but sometimes the real causes are not the ones which seem to explain the condition and we must go deep into our lives or have the assistance of those who are skilled in unravelling mental processes.

"The best antidote for worry is a change of mental occupation, a getting away from the scenes which provoke worry, exercise in the open air, a good book, a pleasant recreation, or a temporary change of occupation. As a matter of mental health every sufferer from this unfortunate condition owes it to himself to discover some simple means of getting away from this habit, which is destructive to health and peace of mind alike."

Germany May Attempt Another Great Offensive On the Western Front

Same Desperate Need of Peace Which the Allies Believe Inspired the German Peace Proposal Thought to Be Behind the Proposed Gigantic Thrust on the West—Enemy Will Find the Allies Ready.

LONDON IS AWAITING REPLY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Jan. 5. — Germany is about to attempt another great offensive on the west front, is the view of the allies.

The same desperate need of peace which the allies believe inspired the German peace proposal is thought, now that those peace pleas have been rejected, to be behind a gigantic thrust on the west, designed as Germany's supreme efforts. But if Germany is preparing another offensive, she will find the allies ready. Speeding up of all branches has been the first duty of the new Lloyd George ministry.

London was awaiting to-day for the publication of the allies' reply to President Wilson's peace suggestions. The note itself may be handed the American Ambassador at Paris to-day.

LONDON, Jan. 5.— British steamer "North Wales" was sunk by a submarine on the way to Canada. All on board were lost.

TRANSPORT IVERNIA IS LOST, SUBMARINE IN MEDITERRANEAN

Cunard Boat Sunk, and 150 Are Said to Be Missing —She Was a Big Vessel

LONDON, January 5.—The transport Ivernia was submarined in the Mediterranean and one hundred and fifty of those aboard her are missing, the Admiralty announced yesterday.

The Ivernia is listed as a Cunard boat built in 1900, of 14,278 tons, 582 feet long, 64 wide and a depth of 37 feet. Her speed is 16 knots an hour, so it is probable that she gave the submarine a chase before she was hit.

Japan Will Arm Her Vessels To Drive Off Subs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. — Japan, through the embassy here, notified the state department of her intention to arm her merchant ships defensively, and requested information as to whether any special rules had been made by the United States Government for passage of ships so armed through the Panama Canal. This was the first official information that Japan intended such action, and was interpreted in some quarters as indicative of fear of German submarine operations on a wider scale than so far attempted.

Japan has a large tonnage passing through the canal, and has suffered seriously from German under-sea activities, particularly in the Mediterranean. While no submarines have appeared in the Pacific so far British naval experts have said that information in the hands of the admiralty and the exploits of the U-53 in the said off the New England coast indicated that it is quite possible that they will operate there later.

There are no canal regulations imposing special restrictions upon vessels armed purely for defensive purposes.

Ontario Woman Committed Suicide

Jumped from Liner Three Days from Liverpool.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 5.—Standing high on the rail of an ocean liner which has arrived here, silhoutted for a moment against the sky, Mrs. Anderson Emmerson, of Donald, Haliburton County, Ont., a passenger, when three days out from Liverpool, plunged into the icy waters of the Atlantic to her death.

Mrs. Emmerson left Montreal last October for her home in Scotland accompanied by her little son, who is but 14 years of age. After visiting relatives she booked passage for herself and boy, and when three days out committed suicide.

Mrs. Emmerson, before taking her life, had complained to the little son that she was not feeling well, but the lad saw nothing out of the ordinary in her condition, and he could give no reason for her jumping overboard.

The husband and another son are at Donald, while a third son is at the front with the 15th Battalion.

Life in London is now subject to five regulations, designed to produce economy, efficiency and safety. These are: No cigars or cigarettes may be sold after eight o'clock. All shops and stores must close after eight o'clock. Taxicabs may not be summoned by whistling. Alcoholic drinks may be obtained only between the hours of 12.30 and 2.30, and between 6.30 and 9.30, and each man must pay for his own drink. Window shades must be drawn down at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, so that no light is visible from the streets.

Beware of the Cold Storage Egg! In his work on food and dietetics Doctor Robert Hutchison says, "the absence of carbohydrates prevents eggs from being in any sense a complete food." This refers to the fresh egg—the egg with a clean bill of health. What would Doctor Hutchison say of the modern cold storage egg? At present prices two eggs cost ten cents—and the egg is not a complete food! Something must be eaten with it to supply the needed carbohydrates. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, with cream or milk, make a complete, perfect meal at a cost of four or five cents. Made in Canada.

Two Million Men Now in France

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Jan. 5.—It is announced that the British Army in France now totals two million men.

"MARSHALS" ONCE WERE GROOMS.

That only now has General Joffre been raised to the rank known to speakers of English as "Marshal," and that even now, when the great war is well along in its third year, has the name been accorded to him, is significant of the way in which France has been conducting her share of the conflict. Napoleon scattered the title so lavishly among his commanders that the hope of its attainment, according to legend, at least, was in the minds of all his soldiers, and every private's knapsack contained the baton that would be the symbol of his coming glory. At present the effort is to keep credit from individuals as much as possible and to give it to the army as a whole and to the country.

In the case of Joffre an exception had to be made in order that his removal from command in the field might be the promotion he had so well earned, and not the humiliation it otherwise would have been.

The Germans, as might have been expected, still have many Marshals—they still trust to the old appeal and are willing to gratify ambition in the old cheap way. Like many other French words relating to war and hunting, "Marechal," in its older form "Mareschal," in its older toute derivation in both its parts, and the word has had a curious history. Some words rise in the world with the passage of the centuries and others fall. This is one that from the very humblest of beginnings has come to great estate.

The Marshals do not owe their name to Mars, though they are his votaries. In the olden times they were about the humblest men in the army—horse-servants or grooms. Then they advanced to the dignity of being horseshoers, and these highly respected artisans are still "marechals" in France, though "ferrants" has to be added to make their calling clear. And while "Marechal de France" is a magnificent title, there are also "Marechals des Logis," who are in cavalry regiments only what "sergents" are in infantry regiments.—New York Times.

The fruiting canes of raspberries die off every year after fruiting. Nature has provided for this and they should be cut and burned as soon after fruiting as possible.

In our experience the two weakest points of the draft horse are the hock joints and the feet, and these too are the most important points when it comes to endurance and efficiency in harness.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"Very well," she told him as she looked at him with an honesty of expression under which his own gaze fell discomforted, "suppose I do confess it, what then? I had not ever meant to confess it, but perhaps it is better that we understand things. We must not drift blindly. Just now, Paul, when you declared your love you thought that you meant it. For the fleeting time it took to say it you did mean it. If you saw her to-morrow you would tell her the same things, and you would believe yourself honest. If I loved you beyond all hope of forgetting you it would only prove that we had both made a mistake. We must not go on with it."

As a wind may veer without warning, the current of Paul Burton's emotions shifted. While wishing to deny and argue, he knew that what she told him was true. He had entered the house with no thought of love-making. Had she accepted his protestations at their face value, he would have left it shaken with an agony of doubt and misgiving. After all he had sworn his first love to Lofaino. He had permitted her to separate from her husband on the assumption that his own allegiance would hold. Could a man truly love two women at the same time, he wondered. Whatever he did he must appear a weak fool. The fact that this phase of the matter presented itself for consideration at this time proved only that it was Paul Burton who found himself in the situation.

"I dont know what to say," he admitted brokenly. "I know only that I would like to be happy, if humanly possible, and I would give anything on earth to see you happy. At least you believe that much, dear, don't you?"

She nodded. "Yes," she said. "I believe that much."

Then after a few moments she continued seriously:

"We have been trusting ourselves on the quicksands, Paul, and between us we have done one wise thing. We have discovered it in time. Maybe it would be still wiser now to be really frank for once and then to be very careful afterwards."

"What do you mean, exactly?"

"I divined your unhappiness, and I knew my own—for a long time I have known my own. You have been petted and praised by women—women of that world which was once mine. You say I love you. Do you know why?" She wheeled suddenly and spoke without disguise. "Not because you are a great musician or a celebrity. It is because I realize how weak and foolish you are." The man winced, but she went on steadily. "In all woman-love there is a ruling element of mother love. I wanted to take you into my heart and make you happy, to.... to give you all that a woman can give a man."

He came forward and his words were unsteady.

"You can at least let me be your best and closest friend—"

"No. I doubt if men and women can really be friends. It comes to mean too much—or too little."

"But, Marcia—"

Again she interrupted, and again the voice was monotonous, almost lifeless.

"No, dear. All our silly little jokes—things that have come to be dear little traditions between us—would be mockeries now." She raised her chin, and said suddenly, with a forced laugh: "I don't often have these brain storms. They make me very foolish. We must see less of each other, Paul."

"And yet," he stubbornly argued, "it has been only an hour since the basis of our comradeship was secure enough."

"In that hour we have come a long way, dear. It is going to be hard enough to get back as it is."

She stood still and, after a brief silence, spoke once more.

"I must brush these cobwebs away from my brain....only—" suddenly her eyes flooded and there was a gasping sob in her voice—"only they are not cobwebs—they are cables and chains! I was a fool to expect to be happy. I haven't been happy for years. I have never had what I wanted....I haven't even been able to have my baby with me." Marcia went slowly to a chair and sat staring, wide-eyed, at the wall. At last she looked up and commanded in a whisper. "You must go now—don't say good-bye—just go!"

Paul took up his hat and let himself out into the narrow hall.

CHAPTER XXII.

The illness of Elizabeth Burton proved to be tedious and perplexing to the specialists who traced its origin beyond the purely physical to some unconfessed thing gnawing at the peace of her brain. Accordingly they did what they could and, having effected a temporary repair, fell back on the customary prescription of change and travel.

During these weeks Mary had been constantly with her mother—and when she was even a short while away the elder woman anxiously called for her. Sometimes she and Hamilton had met but at these times there was no syllable of surrender from the lips of either; only a taciturn sort of truce such as might have existed where two armies drawn tensely in confronting battle lines pause to care for the wounded in which both have interest. But when the mandate came that Elizabeth Burton must go abroad Mary Burton faced the sternest dilemma which had ever presented itself for her decision. The mother refused absolutely to obey the verdict unless her daughter accompanied her, and while Mary was abroad she could only guess what crises her lover might be meeting at home—because he was her lover.

She and Edwardes were walking together one afternoon as they discussed this new complication in their affairs. They had chosen for their tryst neither the smooth stretch of the avenue nor the paths of the park, but those tangled by-ways that thread the woods back of the Jersey Palisades.

It was a cold day with the air as biting as a lash and as clear as crystal, and since these woods were wild and desolate in spots though skirted by smooth roadways and flanked by handsome estates they had for the most part uninterrupted solitude. Ragged outcroppings of rock stood baldly etched against the brilliant sky and through the open spaces they occasionally saw the Hudson and the contour of Upper New York. Twice they came upon rouged and powdered men and women with bearded lashes but these men and women were too busy doing varied things before cameras to take notice of them, for their refuge was also the open-air workshop of moving picture folk.

"Of course you must go," Edwardes seriously told her. "Your mother's health—her life itself—may depend on it. You aren't the sort who can hesitate to answer such a call and it won't be forever, you know."

"And while I'm—over there—with an ocean between us—" she broke off and her eyes darkened with terror—"you may be facing a decisive battle, here—a battle decisive for both of us. If you have to fight, it is my right to be near you—to share your fortunes and your misfortunes. Our love did not begin as little loves do. It shan't end in that way."

"If I thought—" his voice was very deep in its earnestness—"that anything could mean an end of our love, I could not make a fight whether you were here or elsewhere. I think our love will outlast all battles. I want you to go."

"And if I do go," she demanded with a gaze of questioning which demanded a truthful answer, "will you swear, by whatever is holiest and means the most to you, that you will called on only for honest service. More storm?"

For a while he stood silent and his features were trouble stamped; then he took both her hands and their eyes met. Slowly he bowed his assent. "I swear it," he told her, "by my love for you, but if I read the signs aright the time is not quite that close at hand."

In these days Hamilton Burton's secret service was preternaturally active. Less of the Titan's affairs passed through the hands of Carl Brunoll. He could be implicitly trusted, but, caleld on only for honest service. More went through Tarring and Ruferton and Hendricks—who questioned no motives.

After two months Mary returned, and when she met the gaze of Jefferson Edwardes she read in it the struggle which his fight against his hearts clamorous insistence had cost him. "I have thought of little else since I went away," she told him, "and I have decided that either I am worthy to stand with you in whatever comes to you, or I am not worthy to be your wife at all. Hamilton hurled his thrust at us and we, like a pair of timid children, let him frighten us. In this as in everything else he has had his way, and we are paying the price—giving up our lives."

"It's very hard," he answered. "To stand out against you, when only to mind argues against you and my heart is so insistent on the other side. You say you have thought of little else. I have thought of nothing else. The clocks have chimed it—the bells have rung it—the voice of the city has roared and echoed it. I want you so much dear, that without you I am starving. You pledged yourself to me and then came this menace. I could not let you act blindly. Now if you are still resolute—"

"I am more so," she declared. "My brother issued his challenge and we accepted it. Yet we went abjectly away and obeyed him. If he means to fight he must fight now. I am no less a Burton than himself and I am tired of submission."

Jefferson Edwardes smiled. For the instant everything except her own undaunted courage seemed to shrink into minor consideration.

"You are right," he said, and he said it with a note of triumph. "We shall announce our engagement and set a day—neither hastening it nor delaying it—but acting precisely as you would act had he never opposed us. If he thinks that he can oppose us let him try." He paused and his face suddenly hardened as he added, "There have been moments when murder has tempted me—when I wanted to go to Hamilton Burton and kill him with my hands."

Paul was commissioned by his mother to convey to Hamilton the news which would on the following day appear in all the society columns, the statement that in thirty days Miss Mary Burton would become the bride of Mr. Jefferson Edwardes, head of Edwardes and Edwardes. At first Hamilton said nothing. His face paled a little and he reached out and fingered a paper weight and a pen, with the gesture of one whose brain takes no thought of what his hand does.

Then slowly his eyes kindled into the tawny gleam of a tigerish light.

"It was very good of them to wait so long," he said significantly. "I think I am just about ready now."

"What do you mean, Hamilton?" Paul bent forward and spoke with alarm.

"Mean?" Hamilton came to his feet and his anger snapped across the table like a powerful current leaping a broken wire. He took up a delicately fashioned statuette of porcelain and tossed it to the stone flagging of the hearth where it lay shivered. He walked over and contemptuously kicked some of the fragments toward the open fire.

"Mean! I mean that I shall treat him like that. What's left when I'm through, Mary can have—for a wedding or a funeral which ever seems the most suitable."

For once in his life a flame of resistance and momentary courage leaped up in Paul Burton.

"You shall do nothing of the sort," he vehemently declared. "Mary is my blood and your blood and my mother's blood. You shan't sacrifice her, merely because she loves a man whom you hate."

"Stop!" Hamilton raised his hands warningly. "Don't throw yourself to the enemy, Paul. Don't make an irreconcilable breach between us. I do not find fault with your sympathy. I should hate you if you did not feel it—but this man Edwardes is doomed. Nothing can save him. If heaven itself fought for him, I would make war on heaven. Whoever attempts to thwart me—even if it be you, Paul, shall go to ruin. We won't talk of this again."

* * *

Mary Burton awoke one morning to see, through her window blinds, a mixture of snow and rain falling from low-hanging clouds; yet her lips parted in a smile. She glanced at the clock by her bed. It was eleven. In just one week and sixty minutes she and Jefferson Edwardes would be standing at the altar.

Was Completely Laid Up With Severe Case of Piles

Sworn Statement From a Man Who Has Unbounded Confidence in Dr. Chase's Ointment

There is no longer any debate as to the best treatment for itching, bleeding or protruding piles But since about one person in every four suffers more or less from this annoying ailment it is necessary to keep on telling the people about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Wm. Shaw, Island Brook, Que., writes: "I am writing this to let you know the benefit that I have derived from your Ointment. I have suffered more or less for years with protruding piles and last winter I got so bad I was completely laid up with them. I went to our local storekeeper and asked him if he had anything that was good for piles and he recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment. I purchased a box and took it home and used it according to the directions and for over one year I have not been troubled with piles. I had tried other remedies before but they only gave me temporary relief and that one box of your Ointment did more for me than all the others, as I have not been troubled since last winter. I consider it to be the best remedy for piles I have ever used and shall always carry a box with me, although I don't think I will need it for piles. We have used it for other purposes in the family, such as burns, and cuts and scratches, etc., and my wife says it is one of the best remedies for such purposes we have ever had in the house. Although you only charge sixty cents a box for it it is well worth $5.00 a box for anyone who is afflicted with piles. Now you can use this letter if you wish or refer anyone to me who wants to know about it for piles. I might say that in my business I am known all over the English portion of Quebec, and am having this statement sworn to before a Justice of the Peace."

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Have a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast; keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

Strength of Canada Kept At Maximum

Sir George Perley Tells of Dominion's Resolve to Aid Empire to Victory.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The weekly newspaper, "Canada," published here, received several New Year messages. Sir George Perley writes: "Canada has kept her divisions up to strength. Every month brings reinforcements, but what shall we say of Britain? The whole force of the nation is now at the service of the State, and never has she been greater or her spirit stronger. Signs show that the struggle should be over before another year is ended, but be the time long or short, we can and shall continue till victorious." Sir George Foster says that Canada at home is fully determined to carry this war to a glorious conclusion. "We are calling on our people for a new national service in thrift and self-denial, so that Canada's whole strength may be added to the Empire's forces."

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

IN THE NAME OF PHILANTHROPY

By O'Ryan O'Bryan

The Dawsons were double cousins—first in days of calm, but second when storms swept over the land—girls, fourteen years old apiece, bright, fiercely energetic and up to date.

They owned two adjoining ancestral places well furnished with fathers and mothers, and from cellars to attics, particularly the attics, with chairs and things, and with servants to dust the chairs and things. They owned also one grandmother in common besides two or three others in severalty.

Said their mothers, whom grandmother-in-common's illness called away, "How fortunate that school is in session; otherwise the girls might be lonely," a maternal euphemism resulting from long years of practice.

The term closed, however, without the mothers' presence to soften the blow. Grandmother-in-common's illness necessitated a longer leave of absence, which was granted in a characteristic message: "We're all right, little mothers. Stay as long as you please. Love to gram."

This was indorsed by the Fathers Dawson.

That was what the Fathers Dawson were for—to indorse. Although much absorbed in trying to double the output of the foundry without increasing the expenses, they still reserved the veto power at home. But the possibility of the overruling two-thirds vote led them to preserve the show of authority by indorsing, always and speedily.

The mothers were becoming uneasy. The daughters were becoming uneasy too. Usually when these restless fits came on the girls were tactfully guided into the paths of philanthropy. "Great executive ability" their mothers said they had, and indeed they could dress dolls or make scrapbooks for children's hospitals if necessary, but they just doted on sales.

When a sale was announced, their subordinates drew a long breath. The mothers fell to work with a will, echoing the remark of Rosa, the cook: "Now we knows where wese at. I can stan' on my feets all day makin' canny, an' I doesn' complains, but it's dese yere surprisin's dat gibs me de misery in my haid."

The restlessness now worked itself into a fever, and as it reached its height simultaneously in both girls they started on a run from their respective homes and met under the linden tree on the boundary of their ancestral lawns.

In breathless duet they exclaimed, "Oh, Susannah, I have an idea!" "Oh, Hepsibah, I have an idea!"

Their names were neither Susannah (always spelled with an "h") nor Hepsibah. Their mothers in youthful ignorance of what good form would demand in a name later had called them Nellie and Gracie. The girls early came to despise these weakly cognomens, and when some Harvard anthority in a proud spasm of reform changed their Uncle Harry's name to Henry without so much as saying by your leave they promptly said, "We'll change ours." Susannah and Hepsibah they became to each other from that moment. The fathers and mothers at first stoutly resisted, but might prevailed. The general public now knew no others.

"We'll have a sale—a 'fresh air' sale."

Then the embryo "lady board" put their heads together and gave their executive ability full play.

At night the Fathers Dawson's indorsement was called for.

"A sale? Certainly." What a relief!

When the girls' signal lights greeted each other from their windows, each Father Dawson started for the telephone.

"My dear," said Susannah's father, "rest easy. A sale is on. They are quite capable of managing the Pan-American, you know, and they can this. The servants, both men and maid, must by this time be letter perfect."

When his turn came, Hepsibah's father said much the same thing.

The mothers embraced each other fervently. "The little dears," they said and slept the sleep of the unworried.

This was Friday. The sale was set for the next Wednesday. Grandmother-in-common was now recovering rapidly.

Tuesday night the mothers said to each other, "We're homesick."

"Wouldn't a surprise be fun?"

"Let's go home. I should enjoy a sale when we haven't worked to get ready for it."

"We won't even telephone for the carriage. The girls will need all the help they can have."

This was true. A sale without the two faithful henchwomen called for manual labor as well as executive ability.

Thus it was that the waning Wednesday afternoon found the two mothers hurrying on foot up the street from the station.

"Look at all the people coming down the street," remarked Susannah's mother. "There must be a circus in town."

"Yes, or a fire somewhere. They all seem to be carrying something."

"They are mostly women and look like the Plains people."

"Not all. There's Mrs. Gaines."

Now, Mrs. Gaines was an intimate friend, and with smiling faces they stopped to greet her. To their astonishment, she only gave a vicious little flirt to an out of date orange colored workbag hanging from her arm and walked by with averted face.

Not far behind her was another acquaintance from whom they received only a cold nod.

"What in the world! Do they think mother had the smallpox, or have the Dawsons failed, or what is the matter?"

"Oh, look at that woman! I do believe she has Grandfather Dawson's white bell hat. I know there isn't another in town."

"And that one with the silk waist hanging out of a water pitcher! There must have been a rummage sale."

The horrible truth flashed upon both at the same instant.

"My old rose waist!" gasped Susannah's mother.

"My Grandmother Pelham water pitcher!" moaned Hepsibah's mother.

There was no question now. Every one past whom their hurrying steps led them bore some half forgotten treasure seen only at housecleaning time.

They were women of fine sentiment, never willing to destroy anything about which fond memories could twine, and their large ancestral attics were filled to overflowing with what Rosa significantly called "heaps of plander," the accumulations of several generations of Dawsons, Pelhams and Gaynors and the reapings of many Christmas harvests.

They rushed on, growing more and more sick at heart as they met here and there among the throng friends who dwelt within the circle of Christmas giving. When they reached the lawn, out of the tumult of their souls rose a bubble of pride that, awful as it was, the girls had displayed their usual executive ability.

Under the linden tree sat Hepsibah, the cashier, with a goodly pile of money before her. Patrolling the grounds and keeping an eye on each grinning negro in charge of the heaps of goods, which had been carefully assorted, classified and grouped around the trees, walked Susannah, the general manager.

The mothers had been too long under the yoke to make a scene, but as they walked from one ancestral tree to another and read the gorgeous placards tacked to the trunks their emotions were many and deep:

"Shoemakers' tools used by Great-grandfather Dawson."

"Infant wardrobe of the Gaynor branch," mostly rags.

"Great-grandmother Pelham's wedding dishes," a most disreputable collection of pans and crockery ware.

"Great bargains in Christmas presents. Good as new; some never used."

At this finishing stroke the Mothers Dawson fled each to her own heats and wept behind closed blinds. "They will never forgive us!" they sobbed. "No wonder Mrs. Gaines didn't speak!"

A sudden shower put an end to the sale. A little uneasy in their souls, the girls went in to report results. When the interviews were over, it was not the Mothers Dawson who came out with drooping heads. On the contrary, these accomplished ladies used down the lawns and shook hands in solemn compact under the linden tree.

Said Susannah's mother, "Hereafter I am to be boss of my own ranch."

"Same here," said Hepsibah's mother.

Then a blush of shame spread over their faces that even in this their hour of independence their speech should betray their daughters' influence.

"I mean that from this time forth I shall control the affairs of my own household."

"And I mean that the same conclusion has been reached by me."

They have a hard job before them.

How He Kept Informed on Clocks.

A fad more or less general is the collecting of old clocks, from the tall grandfather variety to the curious timekeepers of foreign make. The garrets of old farmhouses from Maine to the Carolinas have been ransacked for the former, and there is many a shen and woman in New York who keeps an eye on the pawnshops of the foreign districts for curious and ancient things from abroad.

"It is almost impossible to keep them all running," complained a woman who has two dozen aged and valuable clocks scattered through her Madison avenue home. "They seem to be in good order and run along for awhile, then all of a sudden they stop for no reason at all.

"I have found an old German who knows more about the ways of old clocks than any one in the city. I sent him my German prize a few weeks ago, and when it did not come back after the usual period of waiting I went to his shop. What do you think I found him reading?"

The friend did not have the slightest idea.

"It was a little German volume with a title something like this: "Thirteen Hundred Reasons Why a Clock Is Perfect Order Won't Run."—New York Tribune.

He Drew the Nine.

On one occasion Mr. Justice Hawkins, who always wore his hair close-cropped when on circuit in the South of England, and went for a country walk with a brother judge. Being thirsty the two judges entered a wayside inn in the rear of which were two laborers playing skittles. They decided to join in the game, and each taking one of the players as a partner, entered into the game with spirit.

Getting hot, Mr. Justice Hawkins took off his coat; getting hotter, he removed his hat. His lordship's partner at once stopped playing. "Go on, my friend," said Hawkins; "why do you stop?" "I don't mind doin' neighborly," replied the man, looking at Hawkins's close-cropped head, "but I'm hanged if I be a-goin' to play skittles with a ticket-of-leave man!"

An Invisible Clock.

A public clock which can be heard but not seen is one of London's curious possessions. It is in the tower of St. Mary Abbot's church, Kensington, and is the only public clock in the immediate neighborhood. It chimes the quarters and the hours, but commits itself no further. It has no dial, no hands, no outward and visible sign of any kind to show that it is a clock. This eccentricity, it is explained, is the result of two causes, one aesthetic, the other financial. When the tower was built in 1897 a clock was suggested as an afterthought, but the architect protested that it would mean the addition of 15ft. to the tower, and the ruin of its cherished proportions. A second point was that the church, having but slender funds, could not afford a clock with a dial. A compromise was arrived at by installing the works of a chiming clock in the belfry without dial or hands.

All Perishable.

Mighty few welcomes come with a guarantee not to wear out.

WELCOMED WOUNDED

ARRIVAL IN SWITZERLAND OF CONVALESCING PRISONERS.

Thrilling Reception Accorded to Wounded British and Colonial Soldiers From Germans Camps—At Every Point of Their Journey They Were Literally Showered With Flowers and Gifts.

JAMES CUSIN, president of the Toronto Swiss Society, gives the following detailed account regarding the triumphant arrival in Switzerland from Germany of a large number of British and colonial soldiers, which he received from his native country recently. The party consisted of 304 English Tommies, 32 officers, a number of Sikhs and Ghurkas, two Japanese, and a large number of Canadians.

The information says: "Having left Constance, Switzerland, this first convoy of English prisoners convalescing coming from German camps, has had from Constance to Chateau d'Oex, a most triumphant trip across Switzerland. The heroes of Ypres, Epres, the Marne, and de Vimy, have been welcomed and covered with flowers. In Zurich the reception was enthusiastic. At Berne, the capital, an immense crowd was on the platform of the station and the diplomatic body was represented by Mr. Beau, the French ambassador.

"The number included the English minister, Grant Duff, and most of the members of the British legation, who had left the night before to welcome the wounded soldiers. The officers and the English soldiers in khaki, who were on the train, were all standing at the windows of the car greeting the crowd by waving their caps and shouting hurrahs for Switzerland.

"The cars were literally overflowing with flowers, and Swiss and English flags, foods, cigarettes, and gifts of all kinds. The wounded could not hide their emotion. The English prisoners at Berne incited a lively interest, the colonial troops, especially the Canadians, Australians, and a Ghurka, coming in for especial attention.

"Everybody was touched by the good appearance and sympathetic behavior of officers and English soldiers, all cleanly shaved and clad in clean uniforms. Most interesting were their descriptions of the war and their captivity in Germany.

Many of them were sick and unable to come out of the cabs, but all of those able to do so walked to the dining-room of the station where they were served with coffee, milk, tea, and other beverages. The reception to the soldiers continued along the trip at Lausanne, Vevey, and Montreux, where it almost reached a delirium. The British soldiers were so touched that, despite the fact that they were more reserved than the French, tears ran down their thin cheeks. They stood at attention when the band played God Save the King, which is set to the same music as the Swiss National Anthem.

"At five o'clock they reached Montreux, where breakfast was served on the terrace of Hotel Swiss, having in front of them one of the most beautiful panoramas of the world, while the orchestra played over and over again, 'Tipperary.' When the train was leaving at six o'clock the Tommies were all waving Swiss flags, while on the platform the crowd was waving Union Jacks with enthusiastic shouts. The pockets of the Tommies were overflowing with chocolates and cigarettes.

"Evelyn Grant Duff, the English minister, made a speech in which he thanked Switzerland for her bread hospitality, referring again to the ties which unite the two countries. He stated that in Switzerland sympathies were not all on the same side, but the subject upon which there was a unanimity of opinion was the treatment of victims of war. He said it would for ever be to the glory of Switzerland to show herself the sister of charity to all. In all the cities through which the wounded and the refugees have passed the people have welcomed them with kindness and hospitality. Turning to the soldiers he said, 'The Swiss have given a great welcome to you. The same people regret your departure.

"All that Switzerland is doing for the interned soldiers is pure charity and good will, none of the generous helpers having any money interests in the matter. Even arguments regarding religion are strictly prohibited."

Heated Gloves for Aviators.

A British firm has recently introduced electrically-heated gloves for aviators. Cold hands and feet are among the prime discomforts experienced by airmen flying at great altitudes, and it is obvious that numbed hands in particular may lead to disaster. Ordinary gloves, irrespective of their thickness, are of little use. The electrically-heated gloves, on the other hand, maintain the hands at a comfortable temperature. As in the instance of the electrically-heated gloves for automobile drivers, electrical connection is made between small brass discs on the gloves and metal plates on the steering wheel of aircraft.

Didn't Mind How Clock Lying.

In a baker's shop near Oldham they have a grandfathers' clock in one corner and a small clock on the mantelshelf, and the grandfather's clock has not been altered according to the Daylight Saving Bill.

"How is it," asked a customer, "you've altered the small clock and not the grandfather's clock?"

"Well," replied the old shopkeeper, "the grandfather's clock's been telling the truth for over forty years, and I can't find it in my heart to make a liar of it now. But the small clock was made in Germany, so it be all right, no right we can be for that!"

FINDING A "FINDER."

A Scientific Thief Confesses His Misdeeds to a Writer.

He was sixty; hair just beginning to grey; of staid, almost solemn, appearance. The sort of man old ladies in bathchairs would call "most respectable." The man you would ask to hold your gold watch while you dived into the sea for a rescue. You may know the type? Scrupulously neat and clean; clothes a trifle old-fashioned and well-worn, but not shabby.

Pushed to a guess, you might have ventured that he was a retired retainer—one of the old, loyal-to-the-family sort, just managing to exist and keep himself decent on some small annuity.

And, for fact, he was a professional "finder," a seeker and snapper-up of the lost, the temporarily mislaid, the forgotten. And with him "findings were keepings." Baldly, he was a scientific thief.

I had left my tobacco-pouch on a bench, sans a writer in London Answers, but remembered it, and returned just in time to see Mr. Respectable put it in his pocket and walk away. I followed, but before I overtook him he had sat down again, and a lady's handbag followed my pouch into his capacious pocket.

Then I came on the scene, and the price of forgiveness was my pouch back to me, the lady's bag to the attendant, and his "confession." For what it is worth, I may quote his solemn declaration that that day was to see the end of his "findings." An endowment-policy, he said, had matured.

"People are very careless," he continued. "A lady will come down here with her children. They play about while she reads. Her bag falls from her lap, so she hangs it on the chair, and——" He ended with an expressive shrug.

"And you 'find' it?" I completed. "And very quickly, too?"

"Yes; I suppose so. But one must live."

"By stealing?" I asked sternly.

"The word is a hard one," he said sadly. "I take what is left, that is all. And if I did not 'find' the things others would. I don't know that the result would be different. I have returned several things I have found—keys, letters, spectacles, and so on."

"Gold-rimmed spectacles, too?" I hazarded, and got home. His face showed me that.

"Now," I continued, "as you're going out of business, just tell me how many 'things' you 'find' in a week, and what they're worth to you?"

"Twenty, and perhaps twenty-five, in a week; but that includes big and little—gloves, tobacco pouches, and so on. Some weeks I don't make more than thirty shillings or so. At other times I have been a little—or—more fortunate.

"Purses, of course, are the best things to 'find.' They have been much busier," he added naively, "since paper-money came in. Do you know how many things are lost in a town like this every day?" (The town was a big South Coast watering place, with an all-the-year-round season.) "Put them at a hundred, and you might be much below the mark. There's a big list in the evening paper each day; and, of course, not many of the losers advertise.

"You've got a trained eye, I can see."

"Y-yes. Look!" he said. And my eyes followed his gesture. An old gentleman had taken off his overcoat, padded the back of the seat with it, and was leaving it behind.

"Go and tell him!" I commanded. He went, and came back with—sixpence!

"I could have sold that coat for fifteen shillings easily!" he said, with a sigh.

"Ever been caught?" I asked.

He looked hurt.

"No. If I meet the owner I am always glad to return what I have found. Once or twice"—and the shadow of a twinkle passed over his eyes—"I have had to explain that I must be permitted to carry out my intention—leave the lost article at the police-station."

"What made you take to this 'finding' business?"

"Well, I found one or two things quite accidentally, and it made me think a bit, I suppose. Then I began to look for the lost.

"I came here last year quite by chance. It's a good place for my 'profession'; there's so many invalids here, and they are very careless. Yes; I expect I can judge a probable 'loser.' I have always studied faces. But this is my last day. The need no longer exists."

Drop in Montreal.

According to figures given out recently by Building Inspector Cahusse of Montreal, the building record for the first six months of the current year shows a decrease of one million dollars as compared with the same period of last year. For the first half of 1915 the value of permits issued was $3,419,000, while for the first six months of the current year the figures were $2,484,000.

FORESTERS ENOUGH.

Three Battalions Have a Total Strength of 3,600 Men.

It is expected that the two Forestry battalions now being raised in Canada—the 238th and 246th—will provide all the lumbermen that will be needed for the operation in the Old Country, in addition to the 1,550 men already there, members of the 224th BattaMon. The three battalions will have a total strength of over 3,600 men, who will be able to cut a lot of wood.

The 238th Battalion, under Lieut.-Colonel Smythe, is well over the 700 mark, while the 246th is just being organized. The commander of the 246th, Lieut.-Colonel John B. White, is in Ottawa, buying equipment for both forestry battalions. He has already been overseas looking over the timber limits, and knows the needs of the new units.

The 224th is doing most of its work in the North of Scotland, cutting Scotch pine. There is a company at work in the park at Windsor Castle, cutting trees there, and a third company at New Forest.

There is a party in a camp near Diver, and some men still at Bramshott. The new battalions will likely be sent to France. Lieut.-Colonel White was over the ground there, and found a great deal of timber suitable for lumbering, so that it is likely, if not all, at least the majority of the men now joining will soon be laying low the trees in France.

Eight sawmills have been sent from Canada to England, six for the 224th Forestry Battalion and two for the Forestry Committee in England, which has supervision over the lumbering operations there during the war. They are mills typical of the Canadian lumbering industry, and are generally known in Canada as portable mills, although they cannot be transported with the facility of most mills which carry the name "portable." They are entirely new to the British Isles, and their wonderful efficiency is said to be causing much interest. They each have a capacity of from 15,000 to 20,000 feet a day, and include the edger, slash saw, saws for making railway ties, etc., in addition to their big 50-inch circular saw. They have 40-horse-power locomotive boilers.

Christian Soldiers.

That many of our leading soldiers and sailors are devout Christians is well known. Lord Roberts was wont to say family prayers, and there is the authority of a London vicar for saying that nearly every day Lord Kitchener visited his church and spent a few minutes there in silent prayer. He started the practice very shortly after the commencement of the war. The church was almost invariably empty when he came, and even when other worshippers were present they did not seem to recognise the Secretary for War.

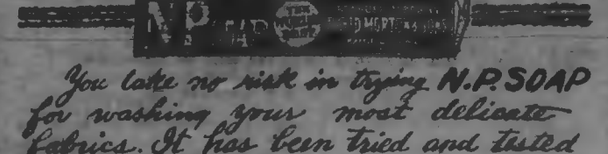
PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.



You take no risk in trying N.P. SOAP for washing your most delicate fabrics. It has been tried and tested for nearly half a century—approved by three generations!

GIVES UP HIS LEG.

One of the Most Remarkable Surgical Operations on Record.

One of the most remarkable surgical operations on record is now being performed at the Grand Palais, Paris, the massive building usually used for the annual salon but now transformed into a vast hospital. Here two soldiers lie side by side, bound together like Siamese twins, while a large portion of the leg of one of them is being slowly transferred into the leg of the other one. Noted surgeons are gathered about, watching the slow development, which they regard as marvelous both from the surgical standpoint as well as from the sentimental, in which one soldier is calmly giving day by day part of his body to a fellow soldier.

The two men lie on their backs on a large operating table in one of the halls of the hospital. They lie in opposite directions, the head of one near the feet of the other, like the figures on playing cards. They are among the most seriously wounded of the younger class of soldiers, one 26 and the other 23 years old. The younger, Rousselot, was wounded in the leg at the battle of Morhange in the early days of the war. He was taken prisoner to Germany, where the surgeons say he did not receive intelligent attention. Brought back here it was necessary to perform a second operation to lengthen his leg 14 centimetres (about 5½ inches). But after the operation was performed, there was still a lack of bony matter between the two portions of the broken femur.

The other soldier, Tillette, an artilleryman, was seriously wounded in the leg in the desperate fighting over Fort Douamont. In a bold operation his leg was amputated above the knee. Later it was found that a second operation was necessary in order to shorten the leg by some centimetres.

It was at this point that the surgeons concluded that the soldier who needed the shortened leg could give up this portion to the soldier who needed the longer leg. Tillette was consulted by the chief surgeon, the operation of grafting was fully explained to him and it was made known also that he was rendering a service to a soldier comrade and to science. He did not hesitate, but gave his full assent.

Thereupon the operation began, and now, after some weeks, the two soldiers lie there on their backs, the right thigh of Rousselot against the left thigh of Tillette, bound together with the same surgical bandage so as to prevent the slightest shifting of the operated parts until the phenomena of transferring one leg to the other is accomplished.

Scotsmen Are French Citizens.

Every Scotsman in France is a French citizen, with all the rights and privileges of such, if he chooses to claim them! In other words, every Scotsman born in Scotland is also a Frenchman, and is thus possessed of two nationalities. Surely a unique position.

Rheims has been very prominent during the present war, and it was there, after his coronation in 1429, that Charles VII. promulgated a decree that, in return for the assistance rendered by the Scottish soldiers to Joan of Arc, who defeated the English and made his coronation possible, Scotsmen were for all time to be considered free citizens of France.

Now the whirligig of time has once more brought the Scots to the neighborhood of Rheims to assist their fellow French citizens, not against the English, but, in conjunction with them, against the would-be destroyers of civilisation.

Why He Joined.

Early last year a patriotic grocer in a small Scottish village decided that either he or his assistant must go. And as he himself was single, his mother and sisters being well provided for from their shares in the shop, he thought he was the more suited. Mackay, the assistant, agreed promptly, and presently found himself in command of the business. But a few months later the master was dumbfounded to meet his late assistant, attired in khaki, "somewhere in France." "H'e, mon," he said angrily, "did I no' tell ye tae stay at hame in chairge o' ma shop?" "So I thocht at the time, maister," replied Mackay, "but I sune fun' oot it wisna only the shop I was in chairge o', but a 'yer womenfolk. 'Man,' sez I tae maeself, 'gin ye've got to fecht, gang an' fecht someone ye can hit,' so I joined."

Senator Belcourt Took Air Trip.

Senator Belcourt, while visiting Aldershot, was given what was called a "joy ride" in an aeroplane. The pilot treated him to an extra assortment of thrills, going through all the hair-raising aerial manoeuvres he could think of, short of looping the loop. Senator Belcourt was apparently relieved to find himself once more on terra firma, and remarked, that, while he could think of several phrases which would describe his experience, "joy ride" was not one of them.

RECORD BID FOR PEARLS.

$120,000 Paid for a Three-Row Necklace.

Remarkable prices were realized at a jewel sale at Christie's in London. A necklace, composed of 193 pearls, was bought by Messrs. Tasburn & Co. for $120,000, and a single-row pearl necklace was sold for $24,000. The $120,000 is a London record. In 1902 the Dudley pearl necklace of 47 round pearls realized $111,000, to be beaten in the following year by the Gordon-Lennox three rows of 287 pearls at $112,500. In 1907 the Lewis-Hill adornment of 220 pearls reached $80,000; the necklace of 46 pearls belonging to the late Lily Duchess of Marlborough, brought $85,000 in 1911, and the Lindsay necklace of 53 pearls, $72,000 in 1912. The necklace now offered as "the property of a lady," was in three rows of 193 pearls of superb Orient with a delicate tinge of pink, the pearls being beautifully matched and cunningly graduated.

Wounds and Infection.

The professional healer, like the professional fighter, has found that many of the things he learnt in South Africa he has had to unlearn in Flanders. Wounds seldom proved troublesome in the Boer War, because the South African veldt was almost virgin; but in Belgium and France, where the land has been cultivated for centuries, the gentle germ is always ready to enter the smallest wound and bring about tetanus and other diseases. At first the surgeons were in despair, fearing that our much-vaunted antiseptics were of no avail.

It required long search and experiment before methods of overcoming new difficulties could be discovered. Then, owing to the lavish use of high-explosive shells, wounds are more complicated and more difficult to keep clean, while the pointed bullet works more harm than the blunt one of the "good old days." Plenty of fresh air is found to work marvels, so there is at least one hospital in which the patients live practically in the open. It has also been found that wounds remain clean if water continually flows over them, so the clever surgeon has constructed little baths which fit over the wound, a supply of warm water impregnated with oxygen continually flowing through.

Dry Docking a Warship.

One of the operations a naval officer dislikes more than anything else is docking a big warship to undergo repairs. It is one of the most difficult tasks imaginable, and the slightest carelessness may mean damage done to the extent of some thousands of pounds. Before being floated into the dock the vessel is usually lightened of everything that can be easily taken from her, and then she is towed in by tugs. The greatest care has to be taken to get the huge mass to float in exactly its proper position so that, when the water is pumped out of the dock it will come to rest upon the keel blocks in such a way that its great weight is evenly distributed.

These big repairing docks, or graving docks, as they are usually called, are built in a series of steps so that they are much narrower at the bottom than at the top. These steps give support to the balks of timber which keep the vessel upright. A float, called a "marker," is used to show that the battleship is in its right position before the water is drained away. Any miscalculation and the vessel might heel over, and there is no stopping a 35,000-ton ship when it begins doing that.

Eskimo Games.

In the matter of amusements the Eskimo are not badly off. They have a form of the cup-and-ball game played there, the ball being a block of ivory with holes at different angles, into which one of the players strives to insert an ivory peg as the block falls, the position of the hole determining the value of the stroke.

Another game closely resembles dominoes, while, when they can borrow or purchase a pack of cards, the more intelligent of them will play with considerable skill; and they enjoy draughts, having learned these games from the whalers. They also have a game exactly like solitaire, with the exception that ivory pegs take the place of glass balls.

The special amusement of the women is a species of "cat's cradle," which has been brought to such perfection that they develop from the string twenty to thirty different figures in it. Indeed, they are extremely clever in performing tricks with string, winding and unwinding a piece in and out among their fingers, and then disentangling it by a single pull on one end.

$150,000 for Wounded.

Mrs. A. H. Scott, the organizer of the sale at the Caledonian Market in London in support of the funds for the wounded of the Allied countries, states that the magnificent sum of $150,000 has been received to date. Certain amounts are outstanding, and there are still some things to be sold. Lady Markham, for instance, had about 600 tons of coal—so that she hoped the grand total would ultimately be nearer $175,000. This was a most astonishing result when, before the sale, the most sanguine view was that $100,000 would be realized. The stall-holders whose receipts were highest were: Lady Markham (coal), Hon. Mrs. Charles Craven, Mrs. A. H. Scott, Mrs. Mathias, Lady Paget, Australian Stall, Italian Stall, and Lady Perley (Canada). Between 70,000 and 80,000 people visited the market.

Memorial to Warneford.

In the town of Wilts a unique memorial will be erected to Flight Lieutenant Warneford, who brought down a Zeppelin from an aeroplane last summer and was himself killed with a journalist in a flying accident a few days later.

The memorial will be erected by the contributions of the Warneford family in all parts of the world, including the British Isles, France, Italy, India, New Zealand, Canada, and Antigua.

The famous exploit of young Warneford has reunited the family, many members of which had entirely got out of touch with their kinsfolk. The Rev. H. L. Warneford, who organized the memorial work, is to write a family history. The earliest known Warneford was instructor in Greek to Charlemagne, the great conqueror.

Australian Bread Prices.

Details of the regulations fixing the prices of flour and bread in the principal cities of Australia are given in an article in the Melbourne Age. The price of flour is fixed at $54.75 a ton, except in Western Australia, where it is $55.48. The price of bread in states other than Western Australia is fixed at 13.2 for a four-pound loaf sold over the counter, and 14.2 cents in Western Australia. Where a fraction of four pounds is bought a proportionate price is to be charged.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

PILES

Are you a sufferer? Know that terrible aching, dragging-down pain, that robs you of pleasure, even of rest, and makes life miserable? Don't you believe in the law of average? If a remedy has cured hundreds of people, don't you think it likely it might at least cure you?

Just give Zam-Buk a fair trial!

Mr. J. McEwen, of Dundas, suffered from piles for fifteen years. He says: "I tried pretty nearly everything, but got no permanent relief until I tried Zam-Buk. This balm relieved the pain; continued use completely and permanently cured me."

The rich herbal essences of which Zam-Buk is composed, quickly remove congestion, relieve the dull, gnawing, burning pain, and cure.

Jesus the Life and Light of Men. John 1:18.

Golden Text: In Him was life; and the life was the light of men. John 1:4.

1. Verse 1, 2. Why does John here call Jesus the "Word," and what does it mean?

2. Did John mean that the man Jesus who was born of Mary, that is his human nature, was God, or that the person who dwelt in, and dominated his humanity was God?

3. All orthodox Christians believe that Jesus was very God, and very man, how then, would you distinguish between his humanity and his divinity?

4. Verse 3. What can you say for, or against, the theory that matter is eternal?

5. No person claims that this world always existed, how then, do you account for its origin?

6. Would you say that the Word "made" the world out of nothing, or out of pre-existing material?

7. Verse 4. Life on this planet began to be, how could it originate, if it did not spring from an eternal and self existing "life?"

8. When the Word created life, did he do it as a finished product, that is life fully organized, or create the germ only?

9. Which for example, demonstrates the more wonderful wisdom, and power, to make the egg, or the chicken, first?

10. Jesus is the creator of our physical and spiritual life, and of our "light," or reason, by imparting himself to us, what then is our relation to him?

11. Verse 5. Whit brought "darkness" to this world and what effect does it have upon the shining of the true light?

12. Verses 6-8. What was the prime mission of John the Baptist?

13. How can it be shown that Jesus is the true light, that lighteth every man born in this world?

14. Verses 10, 11. How do you account for it, that Jesus the world's creator, and eternal friend, was rejected when he came to the earth, and that the majority are still rejecting him?

15. Verses 12 13. What wonderful thing comes into a man's life when he accepts of Jesus?

16. Verse 14. God was pleased to dwell in, and to become part and parcel of the body of Jesus, why should that be thought to be any more a mystery than the sublime mystery of life itself?

17. Verse 15. What testimony did John the Baptist give concerning Jesus?

18. Verse 16. To what extent may a man enjoy the "fullness" of Christ?

19. Verse 17. Moses gave the law, and Jesus gives the grace to keep it, does that imply that we can keep God's law or not? And why? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

20. Verse 18. What do you understand from the words of Jesus, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God?"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S NIGHTGOWN.

By Anabel Worthington.

Only a nightgown, but we want such garment to give satisfaction, too, and studying this design one cannot overlook the fact that it is exceptionally well made about as near to perfection in scientific principles as it is possible to make any undergarment.

This model will be copied by almost every woman who wants a perfectly smooth fit to the body part and the most advanced lines for comfort in a nightgown. Notice that the sleeves extend to neck edge, also the shape of the neck and the round, flat collar that finishes it. The facing where the front is slashed to just the right depth is also noteworthy, and the skirt portion is roomy and falls to the desired length.

Scalloping or a simple stitch in embroidered silk will give the dainty touch that is liked by women and this embellishment should be repeated on the sleeve cuff. Lace or edging will answer the purpose also. Of course, the making of this garment is the very simplest of leisure time tasks.

The nightgown pattern, No. 8,012, cuts in sizes 36, 40 and 44 bust. To make in size 36 requires 5½ yards 36 inch material.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Canada Will Have Munition Contracts Totalling $500,000,000

If People Respond to the Call of National Saving and Give to the Extent of Their Powers Dominion Can Procure All the Business She Can Finance--Allies Will Demand Heavy Indemnity and Reparation to All Allied Nations

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, January 5.—That Canada will have munitions business in the coming year of five hundred millions if her people will respond to the call for national saving and give to the extent of their powers, is the statement made by Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, this morning.

"The distribution of this money," says Sir Thomas, "would mean a continuance of favourable business conditions which in turn will support the Dominion's credit in her financing for war purchases. All the money distributed from time to time by the expenditure should through saving be made available for fresh credits on the strength of which new orders will be placed.

"Canada," concluded the Minister, "can procure all the business which she can finance, and shells are what Great Britain needs more than anything else."

PARIS (French Official), January 5.—Active interchange of artillery fire around Dossumont and Vaux, marked last night's fighting on the western front, to-day's official statement said.

Engagements of advanced posts by Serbians on the Macedonian front was also detailed.

LONDON, January 5.—Germany is preparing a tremendous naval effort, says the Amsterdam correspondent of the Daily Express. From German sources it appears that the greatest activity is now prevailing from Emden to Memel. The Kiel yards are turning out submarines of the largest type only, while torpedo boats are being built at Hamburg and Cuxhaven.

NEW YORK, January 5.—A Times cable from London to-day declares the chief feature of the Allies' peace terms will be heavy indemnity and reparation to all Allied nations.

LIVERPOOL, January 5.—Governmental control over corn as well as over wheat and flour was announced to-day.

BERLIN, via Sayville, January 5.—The capture of Slobozia and Rotesti in Roumania was announced to-day by the War Office.

Gurguetil and Rumandi, two other Roumanian towns, were captured after hand-to-hand battles. Proceeding from house to house, the German forces took 1,400 prisoners and six machine guns.

WASHINGTON, January 5.—Every indication pointed this afternoon to a two or three-days' delay to a Senate vote on the Hitchcock resolution endorsing the President's note to belligerents.

BERLIN, January 5.—"Sanguinary losses" were inflicted on British troops on the east edge of Loos by a detachment of Allenburg infantry, which penetrated into the fourth hostile trench and captured 51 prisoners, but retired from this position, says a War Office statement.

AMSTERDAM, January 5.—Great significance was attached to the passage by Austro-German censors to-day of a quotation from the Vienna newspaper Arbiter Zeitung asking the government to "Discover if the Entente would be ready to negotiate peace, after an evacuation by Teutonic troops in the west, and if so that the evacuation be made immediately."

LONDON, January 4.—The official communication issued to-night by the War Office says:

"Yesterday we successfully raided enemy trenches northeast of Arras. His positions also were entered by us early this morning in two places in the neighbourhood of Wytschaete.

"East of Armentieres, after a heavy bombardment, a party of Germans endeavoured to approach our trenches. They were driven off with losses before they were able to reach our lines.

"The enemy exploded a mine early this morning north of the bluff. The enemy's artillery activity continues marked in the neighbourhood of Ypres. Elsewhere the intermittant artillery activity continued on both sides."

PARIS, January 4.—A special Havas despatch from the British front in France says:

"Gen. Sir Douglas Haig to-day commands the largest army Great Britain ever levied on her soil. The number of effectives in the British army in France on Jan. 1 was nearly 2,000,000 men, completely trained and ready, day or night, to receive orders from their commander-in-chief.

"This figure only refers to the British forces in France, and is exclusive of those employed in the defence of Great Britain, Ireland, India, Salonika, Egypt, Mesopotamia and Africa."

FEDERAL MEMBER FOR PETERBOROUGH BACK IN CANADA

Capt. J. H. Burnham of the 93rd Battalion Arrives in Ottawa and is Expected to Reach Peterboro' To-morrow

WAS IN FRANCE

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P. for West Peterborough, arrived in the capital to-day en route to his home in Peterborough, from the front. Captain Burnham, who went overseas with a Peterborough battalion, has returned to do recruiting work, and will attend the coming session of Parliament. Captain Burnham quoted Sir Julian Byng, commander of the Canadians, in high praise of the character and soldiers. The returned M.P. was in the front trenches and had one narrow shave when a trench which he had visited an hour before was the object of an enemy raid. Eight of its defenders were killed and 14 wounded, but the last man succeeded in holding it with a machine gun.

Captain Burnham will likely arrive in Peterborough to-morrow. He is billed to speak at Pembroke at a recruiting meeting to-night.

A Laidlaw's Annual January Sale

The attention of gentlemen is directed to A. Laidlaw's annual January sale of "Fashion-Craft" suits and overcoats, which begins to-morrow. Good dressers in need of a new high-class suit or up-to-date overcoat of whatever type of build desired, can save good money by taking advantage of this bona-fide sale. See the advertisement on the first page of this issue. Mr. Laidlaw carries out everything he advertises about this sale without any reservation. The convenient system by which he has the garments arranged serves an excellent purpose in showing each style without delay to the customer as well as all the good points and values of the shop of "Fashion Craft."

May Tour English Companies in Canada

A. G. Delamater, theatrical producer of New York, is making a short tour of Canada, with a view to bringing over prominent English stars and companies for Canadian tours.

Mr. Delamater stopped off last night en route from Toronto to Montreal, and spent the evening with Mr. W. F. Turner. His attraction, "Mother Love," playing at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, will be presented at the Grand, here, Tuesday night, next.

CONCLUDING MEETING TO WEEK OF PRAYER

Another very successful service with an overflowing congregation was held at All Saints' Church last evening. The concluding meeting will be held in Trinity Church to-night. The speaker will be the Rev. R. Pogue.

SUBJECT—"Preparedness for After the War."

It may be raining to-night. If so your attendance will be a more definite witness for Christ and a clearer evidence of your interest in the boys in the trenches who have fought through months of worst weather than Peterborough ever experienced.

All are welcome. Let us have a worthy close to a week of phenomenally successful meetings. Collection to-night to defray expenses.

PTE. T. E. BARNS OF 93rd BATTALION IS SEVERELY WOUNDED

Went Overseas as a Member of A Company and Was Drafted to the Mounted Rifles---Recruiting Tour In Interest of 247th Battalion Arranged---Band to Visit Millbrook, Norwood, Havelock and Lakefield---To-day's General Military News.

Still another former member of the 93rd Battalion has been reported wounded. Mrs. Florence Barns, Claraday P.O., received a telegram from Ottawa this morning notifying her that her husband, Pte. T. E. Barns, of the Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to No. 26 General Hospital, Etaples, on Dec. 29, wounded severely in the arm. Pte. Barns enlisted in Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit in November of 1915, and went overseas as a member of A Company, afterwards transferring to the Mounted Rifles in a draft from the 93rd.

The following extract from a letter by Signaller Kenneth C. McClelland, a Peterborough boy, with the 9th Brigade Headquarters in France, is a striking endorsement of the work of the Y.M.C.A. at the front:

"I only have three sheets of paper which I managed to get at the Y.M.C.A. By the way I'll never forget the good that institution has done over here for the fellows. It is our only place of amusement, and thanks to the people they are so well placed and in great numbers."

Lt.-Col. Ackerman is arranging for a recruiting tour in the interests of his battalion the week after next, when the 93rd Band will give a series of concerts. Millbrook, Norwood, Havelock and Lakefield will all be visited during that week. A representative of the 247th will visit all four villages next week to make the arrangements.

Bandmaster Hughes' organization will play at the recruiting meeting in the Armouries Sunday night, when Dr. J. W. Edwards, the member for Frontenac, and Col. Ponton, of Belleville, will deliver addresses in aid of the 247th Battalion.

Mrs. Coons of the Canadian Kitchener League has received the following letter from Pte. Chas. Veenman, a Peterborough boy with the Mounted Rifles:

December 12th, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Coons,—Just a few lines from the boys and myself thanking you for the socks you help to send to us, and which you may be sure were greatly appreciated by us all, for we received them just at night time when we were going into the line and as the weather has been bad of late and lots of mud, which isn't very pleasant to have to wade around in witho t a pair of dry socks. Many thanks for the box of candies we found in the middle of the bundle, they sure did go good, they lasted about as long as Frits did when our fellows went after him at the Somme. Well Mrs. Coons, as it will soon be time for me to get busy again I will bring my letter to a close. I am writing to Mrs. Jos. Knox to-night also. So many thanks from us all. Wishing you and the Canadian Kitchener League a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

Yours sincerely

PTE. CHARLES VEENMAN.

Among the Canadians mentioned by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig for meritorious service in the field, is F. K. Wynan, a former resident of Peterborough.

MR. CHAS. COBEN SAW LONG SERVICE IN COUNTY COUNCIL

The retirement of Mr. Charles Coben from the municipal affairs of the combined counties of Galway and Cavendish, removes from the County Council one of its most prominent figures. During his twenty-seven years of active participation in the public life of the northern townships he enjoyed for a long period the honour and responsibility of leadership. From 1907 to 1916, both years inclusive, he represented his municipality in the County Council without a single interruption. All the offices in the gift of that body had been his and previous to 1907 he had spent many terms in the Council. There has been no intimation that he would have been defeated this year, but evidently concluding that he had seen service enough, he announced his retirement, and Mr. Clarke assumes his mantle. Mr. Coben will be greatly missed from the Council. He had the wisdom that comes with years of municipal experience; he took a broad view of all questions the Council discussed; he was decidedly public spirited, and his kindly an genial disposition established his popularity with the succeeding Councils.

Mr. Coben, in joining the ranks of the long-service members of the County Council, who have retired, approaches Mr. Robert Shaw's record of twenty-six years as the representative from Harvey. Mr. Shaw was twenty-seven years in the Township Council. In the County body Shaw and Coben were a formidable combination. They possessed a talent for municipal affairs and displayed an astuteness and capacity that would have served them in a larger field. They were intimate with municipal law, and knew the County of Peterborough from boundary to boundary. In their retirement they have the satisfaction of knowing that they gave the County good service even in the consideration of the minutest detail.

St. Peter's Ladies Had Busy Afternoon

The ladies of St. Peter's Patriotic Club showed their interest in assisting the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross in the campaign undertaken to supply the needs of the men on the battle front, by the large number that came to the workroom at St. Alphonsus Lyceum yesterday afternoon. Ten sewing machines were kept busy all afternoon, and ten more could easily have been used. The tea-room was prettily decorated and was in charge of the Young Ladies Sodality. Mrs. E. J. McCarthy kindly assisted the young ladies by pouring tea and the following looked after the different tables: Misses Sue Kelly, Dib. Welsh, L. Hurley, Irene Dorris, Gertrude McFadden, V. Hickey, L. Godfrey and Florence Leahy. A large number came in to tea and a nice little sum was added to the yarn fund.

GREAT DEAL OF STARVATION AMONG THE HUN CIVILIANS

Lieut. Fred. S. Hubbs of Peterborough Squadron 8th C.M.R. Just Released From Germany States That the Army is Taking All the Good Food

DOCTOR A KULTUR BRUTE

Lieut. Fred S. Hubbs, who went overseas with the Peterborough squadron of the 8th C. M. R., and who was captured by the Germans, after being badly wounded in the battle of Zillibeke, has written the following most interesting letter to his father, Mr. O. E. Hubbs of the Peterborough Hardware Co., from Switzerland where he is now interned. The Mogers referred to in his letter is Lieut. Harry Rogers of Peterborough, son of Mr. R. B. Rogers, whose friends will be glad to learn that his condition is good and his spirits as high as ever:

Palace Hotel and Grand Hotel Des Alpes, Murren, Switzerland.

December 15, 1916.

Dear Dad,—I have moved again. This time to a new country. I got here yesterday morning after several hours, from Constance, where I was held up for four weeks on account of a mixup in the exchange, but at last we got away on Wednesday p. m., at 7.45, and got some welcome, all the way along, all night, landing here at noon and coming up 5,500 feet at the end. Across from our hotel is the Jungfrau, the Monk and Yeager mountains, and such scenery as I never expected to see. We are about 1,000 British, here, all living in hotels, and it is some change from cabbage soup, half-rotten fish, 1-4 lb. of meat per week and living inside a barb-wire fence with Bosh sentries all around. My parcels were coming good when I came, and of course will, and they will come along I think in due course.

I suppose you knew long ago I am here, as I cabled home from Zurich two nights ago, and the cable should be home long before this gets started.

I did not get used so bad in Germany except in hospital, where I had some trouble, and was nearly court martialed for kicking an orderly away from me for lifting my broken leg wrong and causing the bones to smash through the flesh, but I got it squared. The doctor I had was one of those kultur brutes, and I hope I meet him again after the war. All the others at least did me no harm. I was only unlucky about my doctor.

The general attitude in Germany has changed a lot since the early days. There is a great deal of starvation among the civilians as the army takes all the good grub and they are generally seeing that the finish will be bad for them; but I think we will have one more year before we have them right, and next year will be some hell. I met Col. Usher at Constance, but he did not pass the Commission. He has gone to Friedberg, where Rogers is. It is a fine camp, (as camps go.) I met a chap who was there with Rogers, and he says Rogers is fine, and was already working on a minstrel show. Our boys are all right for parcels, and one thing about the Bosh, they are afraid to steal your parcels. So all you suffer from that source is delay.

My leg is not so bad as it was in Bosnland; it got a lot better as soon as I crossed the border, but I will get treatment here to make it bend. We have a curling club here and skiing and tobogganing and all winter sports and there are about twenty-five of us in a big hotel with all the fixings. I am afraid yet I will wake up and see the wire outside, and a Bosh sentry walking up and down. The Boshes are not all devils and were they out from under the thumb of the military caste would be pretty good people. They are very saving and industrious, and a grand nation of boot-lickers from the bottom up. I am feeling fine and expect to get in shape in a few months, but cannot go very far here as yet, as I am now acclimatised to either the decent grub or the altitude, but guess I will improve. I will write you again soon as there is no limit to our correspondence here, and let you know just how things are. Good-bye for now,

FRED.

Falling Off In Circulation Due to Decreased Demand For Fiction But There Has Been an Encouraging Increase in Circulation of Books Relating to Fine Arts and in Sociology.

THE LIBRARIAN'S REPORT

At the meeting of the Public Library Board last night, the librarian, Mr. F. M. Dale Foass, presented his annual report as follows:

Gentlemen,—I beg herewith to present my report on the work accomplished and the progress made in the Public Library during the past year.

Save in one respect the Library has had the most successful year in its history. An exception has to be made in the matter of circulation, which shows a falling off compared with 1915 of about 6,000 volumes. This in itself is not a great matter as the main falling off has been in Fiction as will be seen in the tables appended in this section. There has been an encouraging increase in the circulation of books relating to Useful Arts and Sociology.

1915		1916
Fiction	40938	40000		938
Biography	960	1000	40
Philosophy	280	280
Religion	280	280
Sociology	1047	1200	153
Philology	21	7		14
Nat. Science	940	1000	60
Useful Arts	797	1000	203
Fine Arts	400	400
Literature	1200	1100		100
Travel	1000	1000	40
History	1046	1100	54
Magazines	800	800
	49819	49819

Decrease altogether 938.

The total number of juvenile books taken out during the year was 8,212, a marked increase over the previous twelve months, the number for 1915 being 8,012.

During the year 1,366 volumes have been added to the Library, of which 1,046 were for adults and 320 for juveniles. The classes were made up as follows: General Science 27, Literature 105, Biography 20, General Reference 27, Sociology 46, Fine Arts 33, Religion 17, Fiction 773, Useful Arts 19, Philosophy 11, History 104, Travel 40, Magazines 31. (This last item refers to magazines bound and placed on the shelves.)

The largest amount of fiction purchased is accounted for by the fact that many of the books that had been added to the favourites with the public were worn out and these had to be renewed in addition to purchasing the best of the current fiction.

About twelve hundred dollars' worth of literature has been purchased during the year. At a meeting of the Library committee held early in the year it was decided to purchase a certain percentage of books for each section. The committee felt that in this way they would be best attending to the interests of the public. The accompanying figures will show in what percentages of value the volumes were purchased:

Fiction	40 per cent.	960	47.12
Biography	5 per cent.	72	8.49
Philosophy	1½ per cent.	12	2.83
General Works	2 per cent.	24	2.83
Religion	2 per cent.	24	2.83
Sociology	6 per cent.	72	8.49
Nat. Science	4 per cent.	48	5.66
Fine Arts	4 per cent.	48	5.66
Literature	4 per cent.	48	5.66
Travel	7 per cent.	84	9.90
History	10 per cent.	120	14.15
Juveniles	12½ per cent.	150	14.15
Useful Arts	4 per cent.	48	5.66
Pathology	1 per cent.	12	1.41
	100 per cent.	$1200	141.50

This includes all accounts paid and unpaid, as well as books on order, for which a generous percentage of value has been allowed.

84 volumes were presented to the Library, besides the usual quota received from the Dominion and Ontario governments. The Library is indebted to the following donors: Miss Maguire, Capt. Burnham, M.P., New Zealand Government, the [illegible]

ALL AVAILABLE CITY TEAMS USED IN CARTING DEBRIS

The removal of debris from the Quaker Oats factory ruins is being expedited as much as possible, and the work should be speeded up in the immediate future. Twenty-five waggons are now available. They have been procured by Mr. Wm. Lytle, who has the contract of supplying the teams and waggons. Yesterday all the available teams in the city but one were requisitioned, and if more are needed the farmers' horses will have to be called up. The contract with the company demanded that only city teams be engaged to the limit of their supply. Mr. Lytle has put his own waggons to work, obtained fifteen from Mr. Ed. Davis of the Standard Paving Company, and has others on the way. The day wage is $4.50, for which the teamster supplies only his horses. There are four or five teams working at night, and others in the day time. The number will be increased when required and as soon as the extra waggons arrive. The first carload from Lindsay reached the city late yesterday evening, and shortly after six o'clock some of them were at work.

It is understood that the debris will be removed from the siding on the west side of the building in order that freight cars may be run in to carry out the twisted iron and other debris. At present the old bricks and scrap materials is being carted across the river and is being dumped behind the old mill. The Standard Paving Company waggons were used here when the paving work was in progress. Six of the Warren Bituminous waggons are also on the way.

"PRUSSIANISM IN ONTARIO."

Under the above heading the Toronto Telegram (Conservative) prints the following:

The British League of Kitchener should get its name copyrighted, and the name could be stamped as a trademark upon all goods manufactured by supporters of the British League.

Kitchener voters seems to have forgotten the obligations of their residence in a country that is at war. It is just for Canada's Minister of Justice, Hon. C. J. Doherty, to wake up. A Citizens' League formed to obliterate the name of Berlin upon any community under the British flag should be preached against as a seditious organization. The Citizens' League should be broken up; the backers and officers of such a League should be arrested.

An agent of the Department of Justice should attend the meetings of the Kitchener City Council. The first whisper of a move to restore the name Berlin ought to lead to the arrest of every author and supporter of such a move. The Canadian and British citizens of this country are not called upon to further endure the pro-German antics of Prussianism in Waterloo county. Nor are Canadians and Britishers required to tolerate a continuance of the patronage and protection extended to Prussianism in Ontario by Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice.—Toronto Telegram (Conservative.)

The Telegram's counsel to strong action, reminds one of locking the stable after the horse is stolen—taking precaution after the mischief has been done. The time for the Borden government to have acted, as the Telegram now urges it to act, was long ago. When the pro-German league was formed, with the avowed purpose of restoring the name of Berlin, when British interests and British ideals were flouted, with the organ of the Borden government as the organ of the traitors. But can we expect the government to act now, which has refused to act and has given Prussianism and pickings in its interests a free hand? Can we expect the Borden government to act in the matter of a name involving treason, when it tolerates the fact of Nationalism, a cult that is anti-British in declaration, utterly opposed to Canada taking any part in the war of the empire and in the interests of human liberty. The Borden government not only tolerates Nationalism and its works, in propagandism, but sanctions, applauds and encourages it by holding office by the grace of Nationalist votes, by including and keeping as the price of Nationalist support, three or four cabinet ministers representing Nationalism—having as colleagues of the King of Great Britain, men whose doctrine is denial of Canadian responsibility in respect of helping the empire in war. It is no wonder that recruiting has been unsatisfactory in Quebec when the government keeps within its ranks ministers whose anti-British policy of refusing to help Britain in her right-cause war, practically cancels and counteracts the government's call for 100,000 more soldiers. It is no wonder that recruiting is slow in Ontario, when the government has not only permitted the existence of a nest of traitors, but has aligned the organs of its own party and its own Minister of Justice—according to the declaration of the Conservative Toronto Telegram—to sanction and foster open treason—open propagation of German interests in the heart of the province. If there is "Prussianism in Ontario"—at Kitchener—it is he fault of the Borden government. If the German preachers of treason had been handled without gloves, disciplined as they should have been, and would have been under reversed circumstances in Germany, quiet would have restored to Berlin long ago, and the city would not have had, as it has now, the ignominy of having a mayor whose confession of patriotic faith is expressed in his declaration—"Legally the name is Kitchener, but in my heart it is Berlin."

INDUSTRIAL AND NATIONAL THRIFT.

Peterborough spends, upon her Public and Separate schools and secondary schools, about $150,000 per year, the proceeds of direct and indirect local taxation. This is a large amount of money; but it is none too large if we get the full advantage of its expenditure—if the education given, the knowledge imparted, are of the right, the practical kind. Little fault is to be found with the literary educational results, though, under our system of working up to an overloaded curriculum, there is a difference of effort and result, that does not mean desirable thoroughness, the thing that gives real value to education or knowledge.

Our local education is lacking entirely in one very practical and essential and important "thrifty." The highest ideal of life is not the mere making of money; the only real value of money is its employment for necessary and high purposes. Money is not an end; it is an instrument, that may be used for sordid and selfish ends, or used for the highest of purposes. We may in our schools equip children with the knowledge that may help them make money, but we have no means of teaching its real value.

One of the highest and most important duties connected with winning the war, impressed and enjoined by British statesmen, is thrift — popular thrift; and our own Minister of Finance, Sir Thomas White, imposes the same injunction upon the people of Canad. Thrift is defined as economical management of property, and economy is defined as frugal and judicious use of money. It is safe to say that in Canada millions of dollars a year are wasted in extravagant expenditures upon living, upon luxuries, and things that not only deprave moral conditions, but vitiate and weaken physical forces. There is, perhaps, in thousands of households, as much waste as is properly used for beneficial domestic purposes. One woman on a fifteen dollar weekly allowance will keep her family, pay her way and have a trifle to the good; another housewife, with double the allowance, the same family and the same general scale of living, will be in debt at the end of the week. The latter condition, obtaining throughout the country, accounts for enough waste to pay a large share of the extra financial burden placed upon Canada at the present time.

It needs no argument to show what would be the immense local and national advantage of universal thrift—proper use of money, judicious care in its employment.

There is only one easily practicable way in which thrift can be made a national asset—an offset to national waste, and that is by educating our people to this end. That cannot be a rapid process and it will take time if we adopt the only immediately practical means—the establishment of Penny Banks in connection with our schools. The benefits of the principles of thrift and conversion to, or training to, its logic will be practically demonstrated by an object lesson far more impressive than precept and preaching. The annual report of the Penny Bank operated in connection with our schools in some, and far too few, places gives the total of deposits at $339,271. In this the Toronto schools rank first with $175,719, Ottawa next with $95,804, both sums coming from the deposit of stray pennies by school children. In the town of Welland, only 10,000 inhabitants, there are deposits of $2,280, and during September and October the average monthly deposits by pupils was 37 cents each. This rate of deposit by all the million or more school children of Canada would make a yearly total of between four and five million dollars, otherwise wasted on trifles of no benefit.

It seems that one of the greatest practical improvements in the educational features of our Peterborough schools would be the establishmen of a Penny Bank system. At the rate of deposit of the Welland schools, 35 cents per month the total yearly deposits of the school children of Peterborough would be between $10,000 and $12,000. The saving of such an amount, though it would count for much for many families in time of stress, is not the most important point. The influence upon the individual pupil in the promotion of habits of thrift, would extend to manhood and womanhood and we should have a nation of men and women who would practise economy and thrift and eschew waste and extravagance. These characteristics ingrained in the people would create a popular antagonism to the monstrous and intolerable waste and extravagance of governments in every detail of administrative function, and the two influences combined would bring about the conditions of national strength of finance and equipment for national service, such as statesmen like Lloyd George and Sir Thomas White, and even plain common sense demand.

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—An overwhelming endorsation of Hydro electric policy was fostered by Sir Adam Beck and the Liberals in the Legislature and opposed by the Conservatives during the Legislature, marks the week's voting in municipalities.

It is true that towards the end members of the government, seeing the tide of public opinion rising strongly against the stand they had taken, did give support to the proposals of Sir Adam Beck and the Opposition, but their stand in the Legislature is on record in the journals of the House, showing that they voted down the proposal which the municipalities this week have accepted.

It was on the 19th of April, 1916, that Mr. Proudfoot moved a resolution in the House, providing that "the municipalities now under agreements with the commission for the supply of power from the Niagara system and such other municipalities as may hereafter become entitled to receive power from the said system, may acquire the ownership of the power development at Niagara authorized by the Act upon terms and conditions similar to those upon which they are acquiring ownership of the transmission lines and distributing system."

This, in substance, is the very question on which the municipalities have voted this week. Mr. Proudfoot's motion, representing the views of the Opposition, was voted down by the Government with a vote of 54 to 18. Among those opposed to the motion were Hon. Howard Ferguson, Hon. Jas. Duff, Hon. I. B. Lucas, Hon. T. W. McGarry, W. D. McPherson, now Provincial Secretary; Hon. Sidney Macdermid, Hon. Dr. Preston, Hon. Dr. Pyne.

The Opposition, including Mr. Rowell and his supporters, and also including Mr. Studholme, the Labour member, supported the motion.

It is another dramatic vindication of the Opposition's policies, and another proof that the real interests of the Hydro Electric are being guarded and advanced, not by the government, but by the Opposition.

ENGLAND'S BIT.

The embattlements, laboriously built up by generations of men against barbarism, were broken, and had not the might of Britain passed into the breach Europe would have been inundated with a flood of savagery and unbridled lust of power.—Lloyd George's speech.

The cheap talk about Britain letting her allies do her fighting for her, com[illegible] a peculiarly cheap sen[illegible] ready to fight to the last Frenchman," met with the contempt it deserved among thinking men, but with acceptance among idle minds. It is well to be reminded that but for Britain that flood would have poured over those broken embankments and inundated Europe. It was the entry of England that shattered the well-laid German plan for an easy march to Paris and a swift, crippling blow at Russia over the ruins of France. To-day it is England's unbroken mastery of the sea that overmatches Germany's mastery of conquered lands. Always a naval, never a military, power, England has nevertheless brought herself up to the Continental military standard and raised the great and heroic army that now confronts Germany in France. But it is on sea that the great service to liberty has been rendered; there she broke at once the German dream of victory, and there she has ever since had her hand at Germany's throat while the allied armies struggled with their half-strangled foe.

Furthermore, it is England's glory that she grows truly great with blows. It is always in a muddled, helter-skelter way that she enters a war, but if the war is long and great she steadily rises and steadies, until her figure looms higher and higher among the contestants. It was so in the last attempt of despotism to conquer Europe, when, after all her allies were beaten down or seduced, she continued the fight alone, the last refuge of liberty in the Old World. "Every other monument of European liberty has perished," said Sir James MacKintosh. "That ancient fabric which has been gradually raised by the wisdom and virtue of our forefathers still stands but it stands alone, and it stands among ruins."

France saved Europe at the Marne; Russia saved Europe by dividing the German armies and given France breathing space and England time to arm; but England too, saved Europe, for without her on the sea the war would long have been over. The part she played is not single, as it was when she faced Napoleon alone; she divides the honor with others, but her share was not the least, it grows greater all the time. The spectacle of that growth under blows is majestic. To the querulous ones who have said so much about the weakness of democracies in arms, there are two impressive answers; the sight of England confronting Napoleon, the sight of England confronting William II. — New York Times.

France Will Also Till All Idle Land

PARIS, Jan 5.—The Minister of Commerce has introduced a bill empowering the Agricultural Department to put into cultivation all unoccupied land. This is in line with similar action taken in England.

The celebration of Christmas along the fighting front in France is regarded as of more importance than that of the people at home. Families every where are denying themselves to send great quantities of comforts, delicacies and useful gifts to the men at the front.

In addition to this abnegation the new spirit of economy in France is causing much reserve in buying. The growing weight of the war has limited sharply anything in the nature of indulgence in festivities. The shops have unusually few patrons, and there will be no relaxation of the early closing hours of restaurants, none of the customary midnight suppers, no midnight masses and no watch-night meetings, the church authorities having decided to effect a saving in lighting and heating.

The provincial cities are following the example of Paris. The Government is deferring until the day after Christmas the compulsory restrictions in regard to private heating and lighting.

This is the first time since the war began that children are feeling its consequences in the way of restriction or modification of Christmas distributions in step with the new regime of economies. The number of toys on sale is much reduced and the trade in them is diminished. Dreary weather conditions are forecast for Christmas.

LLOYD GEORGE AS SEEN BY PROMINENT AMERICAN WRITER

A message to America from Premier Lloyd George is contained in an article entitled "An Intimate Study of England's War Chief" written by Isaac F. Marcosson for the January issue of Everybody's Magazine. Mr. Marcosson writes that in a recent interview with Lloyd George he said:

"Since the war means so much to us, have you no message for America?"

From this point the article reads:

"Throughout our talk he had sat in a low chair, sometimes tilting it backward as he swayed with the vehemency of his words. Suddenly he became still. He turned his head and looked dreamily out the window at his left, where he could see the throng of Whitehall as it swept back and forth along Loudon's Great Military Way.

"Then, rising slowly and with eloquent gestures and trembling voice (he might have been speaking to thousands instead of one person) he said:

"'The hope of the world is that America will realize the call destiny is making to her in tones that are getting louder and more insistent as these terrible months go by. That destiny lies in the enforcement of respect for international law and international rights.'

"It was a pregnant and unforgettable moment. From the throne room of a colossal conflict, England's war lord was sounding the note of a distant process of peace.

"If you had probed behind this kindling utterance you would have seen with Lloyd George himself that beyond the flaming battle lines and past the tumult of a world at war the hope of some faraway tribunal that would judge nations and keep them, just as individuals are kept, in the path of right and humanity.

"But before any such bloodless antidote can be applied to international dispute, to quote Lloyd George again, 'This war must be fought to a finish.'

"These final words, snapped like a whip lash and emphasized with a fist-beat on the table, meant that England would see her titan task through and if for no other reason, because the man who drives the war gods wills it so."

ONCE A PACIFIST.

The article continues with a narration of Lloyd George's career from the beginning, that part of it connected with the Boer war forming contrast with the present.

"Before the conflict with the Boers, says the author, "Lloyd George was a militant pacifist—a sort of peacemaker with a punch. When England invaded the Transvaal, Lloyd George began a battle for peace that made him for the first time a force in imperial affairs. He believed himself to be the anointed foe of the war, and he dedicated himself and all his powers to stem what seemed to be a hopeless tide. It was a courageous thing to do, for he not only risked his reputation, but his career. Up and down the empire he pleaded. He was in some respects the brilliant Bryan of the period, but with the difference that he was crucifying himself and not his cause upon the cross of peace. He became the target of bitter attack; no epithet was too vile to hurl upon him. After he carried his life in his hands as the episode of the Birmingham riot shows. In all his storm-tossed life nothing approached this in daring or danger.

"Lloyd George was invited to speak in the citadel of imperialism, which was likewise the home of Joseph Chamberlain, arch-apostle of the Boer War. Save for the stanchest Liberals, the whole town rose in protest. For weeks the local press seethed and raged, denouncing Lloyd George as 'arch traitor' and 'self-confessed enemy.' He was warned that he would imperil his life if he even showed himself. He sent back this word:

"'I am announced to speak, and speak I will.'

"He reached Birmingham ahead of schedule time and got to the home of his host in safety. All day long sandwichmen paraded the highways bearing placards calling upon the citizenry to assemble at the town hall where Lloyd George was to speak—'to defend the King, the Government, and Mr. Chamberlain.'

MOBS IN THE STREETS.

"Night came; the streets were howling mobs, every constable was on duty. The hall was stormed and when Lloyd George appeared on the platform he found turmoil. Hundreds of men carried sticks, clubs, and bricks covered with rags and fastened to barbed wire. When he rose to speak bedlam let loose. Jeers, catcalls, and frightful abuse rained on him and with them rocks and vegetables. He removed his overcoat and stood calm and smiling. When he raised his voice however, the grand assault was made. Only a double cordon of constables massed around the stage kept him from being overwhelmed. In the free-for-all fight that followed one man was killed and many were injured.

Anything like a speech was hopeless; the main task was to save the speaker, for outside in the streets a bloodthirsty rabble waited for its prey. Lloyd George started to face them single-handed, and it was only when he was told that such procedure would not only foolishly endanger his life but endanger also the lives of his party, which included several women, that he consented to escape through a side door, wearing a policeman's helmet and coat. Fourteen years later Lloyd George returned to Birmingham acclaimed as a saviour of empire. Such have been the contrasts in this career of careers."

Mr. Marcosson gives his analysis of the personality of Lloyd George as follows.

"Reducing the wizard Welshman to a formula, you find that he is 50 per cent. Roosevelt in the virility and forcefulness of his character; 15 per cent. Bryan in the purely demagogic phase of his make-up, while the rest is canny Celt opportunism. It makes a dazzling and well-nigh irresistible composite.

"It is with Roosevelt that the best and happiest comparison can be made. Indeed, I know of no more convincing interpretation of the thing that is Lloyd George than to point this live parallel. For Lloyd George is the British Roosevelt, the Imperial Rough Rider. Instead of using the Big Stick he employs the Big Voice. No two leaders ever had so much in common. Each is more of an institution than a mere man; each dramatizes himself in everything he does; each has a genius for the benevolent assimilation of idea and fact. Trust Lloyd George to know all about the man who comes to see him, whether the man who comes to see him, whether he be statesman, author, explorer, or plain captain of industry. It is one of the reasons why he maintains his amazing political hold.

A GREAT ADVERTISER.

"Lloyd George has Roosevelt's striking gift of phrase-making, although he does not share the American's love of letter writing. As I have already intimated, whatever may be his future, Lloyd George will never be confronted by accusing epistle. None exists. Like Roosevelt, Lloyd George is past master in the art of effective publicity. He has a monopoly on the British front page. Each of these remarkable men project the fire and magnetism of his dynamic personality. Curiously enough, each one has been the terror of the corporate evildoer—the conspicuous target of big business in his respective country. Each one is a dictator in the making, and it is safe to assume that if Lloyd George lived in a republic, like Roosevelt he would say: 'My army,' 'my navy,' and 'my policies.'

"Roosevelt, however, has one distinct advantage over his British colleague in that he is a deeper student and has a wider learning. In one God-given gift Lloyd George surpasses not only Roosevelt, but every other man I have ever met. It is an inspired oratory that is at once the wonder and the admiration of all who hear it. He is in many respects the greatest speaker of his day the one man of his race whose utterance immediately becomes world property. The stage lost a great star when the Welsh David went into politics.

Poor Wheat Crops Throughout World

Estimated Total for 1916 is 25 per Cent. Less Than Last Year's.

ROME, via Paris, Jan. 5.—The International Institute of Agriculture's harvest estimates continue to indicate poor world crops. It is now able for the first time, through new reports just received, to forecast the wheat production of Argentina. The Argentine wheat crop is estimated at 70,000,000 bushels, one-half that of last year.

Australia's wheat crop is estimated at 135,000,000 bushels, which is four per cent. better than the yearly average.

For the world's eighteen most important countries, including the United States, Canada, British India, Japan and all Europe, the estimated total wheat crop placed by the Institute at 2,500,000 bushels, which is 25 per cent. less than last year.

STUBBORN COLDS

Cause Weak Lungs, Peterborough Druggist Suggests a Reliable Remedy.

We have a constitutional remedy for hard colds and weak lungs which we guarantee. Such letters as this prove its efficiency:

Wickatunk, N. J. "I suffered from weak lungs, pains in my chest and very short of breath. I am an agent for the C. R. R. of New Jersey. I had a very bad cough and lost fifteen pounds in weight and my trouble interfered with my occupation, so that I had to stop work last July. I had doctored for some time without benefit, but when I learned of Vinol through a friend I decided to try it, and soon commenced to improve. My cough has gone, the weakness from my chest disappeared. I am working again, and have regained the fifteen pounds in flesh which I lost." Victor Walden, Wickatunk, N. J.

The reason Vinol is superior to any other remedy is because it contains in deliciously palatable form the healing, body-building and strengthening elements of beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates—the oldest and most famous tonics known to medicine. Try it on our guarantee.

Court Decides That Millionaire Of Eighty May Woo and Wed

Miss Nettie M. Richards was given a verdict for $170,000 in her half million dollar breach of promise suit against Henry Deniston, her third cousin, who is 80 years of age, and is supposed to be worth $2,000,000, of which $500,000 is in cash.

Miss Richards, who is 40 years younger than Deniston, filed her suit at Pittsburg last February, asking for $500,000 damages. She said she had promised to marry him a year ago last July, and the marriage had been set for a month later. Former friends of Deniston, influential men of Pittsburg, persuaded him to postpone the wedding and finally to cancel the engagement.

In the meantime the courts were petitioned to declare Deniston incompetent and appoint a guardian for him, urging as a proof that he lived in a three room shack and avoided the friends of his youth. The application was denied.

Lawyer Willis F. McCook, in urging the appointment of a guardian, said: "There are two periods in a man's life in which he requires assistance—in his childhood days and in his old age. Old age is only young age. Is this man able to look after his own affairs or has he so enfeebled he is not capable of ordering his own life suitably? He has banished his fellow men from his own narrow life. His mind lacks the development we derive from association with others."

To which Deniston's counsel replied—"Because an old man wishes to marry a young woman he should not be held incapable. It is rather an indication his faculties are keen and he knows what he is doing.

IT'S ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

By Henry Churchill King, D.D., President Oberlin College.

A man's point of view and his mood toward life have after all everything to do with what his life is to mean to himself and to other men. My thought is that this common everyday phrase, "It's all in a day's work," may well indicate both mood and point of view.

Five suggestions it may be said to contain: The true view of life is not the ascetic view, nor the attitude of self-pity, nor the point of view of mediaeval chivalry, with its faith in the aristocracy of certain events; nor a like faith in the aristocracy of persons, even in attempted service; but the straightforward taking on, with cheer and courage, of whatever is involved in the goal one has set himself.

That a man should say "It's all in the day's work" has a still further vital bearing on his outlook in life so saying, one should mean that he takes all that comes, pleasant or painful, bitter or sweet, as simply involved in the work assigned, in the trust assumed, in the ideal cherished, in the kind of man he purposes to be. He has chosen his goal and whatever is necessary to that goal he takes as a simple matter of course. He finds St. Paul, I think, expressing with exactness his own point of view: "I count not myself to have laid hold but one thing I do, forgetting the things which are behind and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal." One's sufferings and sacrifices appear in a different light when one looks at them as simply involved in the goal that he himself has chosen. Though the point of view is neither that of the mediaeval knight nor that of the modern aristocrat, it is still not a dull and hopeless drudgery to which a man is doomed. The goal illumines all the course toward it. It is all in the day's work.

COMBING OUT ELIGIBLES.

Unskilled Munition Workers in Britain Called to Colours.

It was officially announced that the Admiralty, the Ministry of Munitions, and the Army Council have agreed to release for military service, at an early date, all semi-skilled and unskilled men of military age in munition factories who can be spared without prejudicially affecting the output of munitions, says London Mail.

For the time being the military authorities propose to call to the colours such of these men up to 31 years of age as may be fit for general service. To avoid dislocation they will be called up in consultation and agreement with representatives of the Government Departments concerned.

These proposals do not involve the calling up of skilled men, and in order further to secure the retention of skilled men on work of national importance the Army Council will issue trade cards through a number of trade unions to their members who were registered as journeymen and apprenticed before August 18, 1915.

This big comb-out follows upon the Order under the Defense of the Realm Act giving power to call on any exempted man to undergo a Medical Board examination. It is to be followed by a comb-out of Government Departments, beginning with the Board of Trade and the Foreign Office.

The application of the combing-out order to all controlled factories will release tens of thousands of men for the army, it is said.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Use "Tiz" For Puffed-up Burning, Aching, Calloused Feet and Corns

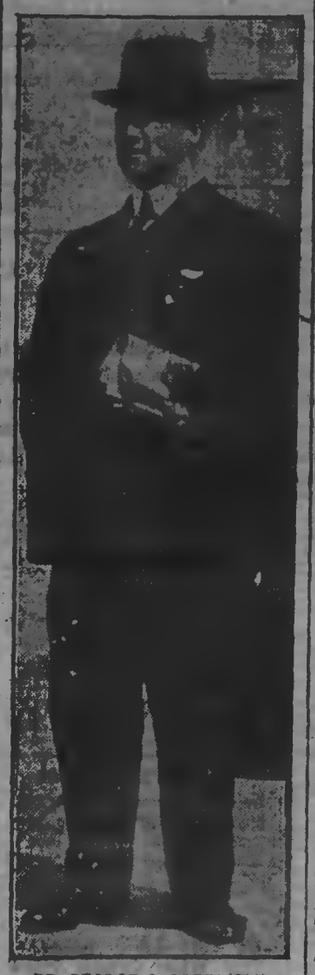
Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, calluses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot troubles.

CANADA'S WAR HONORS

From the O.C. and officers of the 14th Battalion, Royal Montreals, there came an inspiring little Christmas remembrance. The card was of plain khaki, bearing within the season's greetings and good wishes, and on the cover some of the glorious names which the regiment will forever bear on its glorious colors:—"Neuve Chapelle," "Ypres, 1915," "Festubert," "Givenchy," "Messines," "Ypres Salient," "Zillebeke," "Mount Sorrel," "Somme," "Moquet Farm," "Courcelette." Here's to the fighting Fourteenth, which with the Thirteenth Battalion, of equal fame, led the van in some of the hardest fighting ever done for this Empire, and made a name that will never die.

Soldiers and Farms



DR. GEORGE C. CREELMAN

Ontario's Commissioner of Agriculture, had charge of preparations and plans for linking up the returned soldiers of his province with the vital industry of agriculture. He was previously in personal charge of the Guelph Agricultural College and his appointment to the commissionership by Premier Hearst was a war-time measure.

THE SECOND STANZA

Should "God Save the King" Include Certain Lines?

Archdeacon Cody of Toronto, in a talk on the National Anthem, said that some people think the second verse is un-Christian in sentiment—an English "hymn of hate." With such a view he strongly disagreed. The words, "O Lord, our God, arise, scatter his enemies," is an adaptation of the first verse of Psalm 68. In essence it is a prayer that God will give us victory; and if our cause is right, if we are seeking to establish truth and justice in the world, may we not pray to God to bless the cause by giving us the victory? As to the words, "Confound their politics, frustrate their knavish tricks," some people yet think that "confound" is a milder and more polite swear-word, but it means only to throw into confusion, or to bring to naught. "Politics" is the archaic form of "policies," and who among the allies has any hesitation in asking God to bring to naught those tortuous policies, those nefarious stratagems of our great antagonists? The only fault of the words, "Frustrate their knavish tricks" is that they are far too mild to meet the present situation.

The National Anthem has come to be the deepest and truest expression of fundamental patriotic sentiment of the British peoples and of the whole empire; it is our one great vocal expression of the depth and intensity of our national emotion. There is only one National Anthem in the empire and it should have special respect and be sung with the greatest reverence, and not as a signal for putting on coats and overshoes.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust dirt and dandruff.

HUNTERS FIND FAMILY STARVING IN SHACK

ATLANTIC CITY, Jan. 5.—A case of almost inconceivable destitution was discovered in the pine barrens two miles from the McKee City railroad station, when ex-Senator Lewis Evans, Assistant City Treasurer Charles Parsons, and Charles Tilton, a contractor, on a gunning trip in the now, found Mrs. Nicholas Planto and six small children starving in a hovel, without either warmth or food. The woman said her husband had abandoned them and gone to Philadelphia, after promising to return with food, clothing and provisions.

Mrs. Planto was wearing a shapeless garment, made from bagging, in which other gunners a week ago saw her skirmishing through the woods for fuel. She had neither hat nor stockings and her shoes were without soles. The six children wore garments made from flour sacks. They were crying for something to eat.

After starting a fire and procuring a temporary supply of food, the first the family had eaten for more than a day, ex-Senator Evans and his companions hurried here and notified Prosecutor Moore of the case. Moore at once set in motion legal machinery to bring Planto back to New Jersey and force him to make provision for his family.

Late this afternoon Mrs. Planto and her brood of six little ones, wrapped in heavy robes, were brought to this city by County Probation Officer Scull in automobiles, and taken to the Crittenton Mission. They will be kindly treated until the head of the family is found by the authorities.

Farmers widely scattered in the McKee City region said that Planto took his family to the hut in the woods several weeks ago, and had made two or three visits since. The man was well dressed and seemed to be plentifully supplied with money.

National Service Envelopes Opened And Read Publicly

"Pernio's" Act Causes Several Citizens to Destroy Cards After Signing.

QUEBEC, Jan. 5.—Criticism of the manner in which national service cards are handled after they are signed is heard all over the city. The people say sealed envelopes should be provided, because their answers are openly read by postmen in public.

One instance in particular is pointed out. One afternoon two postmen who had collected filled-in cards were openly reading the answers of this and that citizen, joking about his salary and obligations.

Protests were heard in the street car where this scene occurred, and many passengers who had already filled in their cards openly tore them to bits, saying they did not care to have the information about their revenues, obligations and their attitude toward national service openly circulated and exhibited.

The cards received in Peterborough were accompanied by sealed envelopes.

HIGH PRICE FOR ST. KITT'S RECRUITS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 5.—At the opening of the recruiting campaign here, addressed by Col. Williams and others, Dr. Jeasop, M.P.P., offered $200 for the first man to enlist, and J. D. Chaplin put up $1,000 for the next five men. Three names were soon handed in.

Young Lady Injured At Downeyville

On New Year's Eve, Miss Galvin, sister of Rev. Father Galvin, of Downeyville, had her shoulder dislocated. She was driving out of the laneway at Father Galvin's residence, in company with Miss Matthews, when the cutter overturned, and the occupants were thrown out. Dr. Blanchard attended Miss Galvin's injuries.

ARTISTIC ELECTRIC SIGN OVER NORDHEIMER AGENCY

"Good taste, exquisite in design," is about the only fitting way in which one can describe the Sign recently erected by J. J. Turner & Sons for Mr. Frank Whitehouse, District Representative for Nordheimer Pianos, and Aeolian-Vocalion Phonographs. The Sign is transparent, lighted with 31 25-Watt Lamps, the wording "Nordheimer Pianos" being embossed in flashed ruby glass, backed up by white opalescent, which diffuses the light, giving a brilliancy and transparency obtained in no other way. The lettering "Aeolian-Vocalion," is on white Opal glass, with a smaltzed background of jet black. Altogether it is a unique Sign, built of metal throughout, and wired under the supervision of the local Provincial Government Electrical Inspector, and meeting all the demands of the Fire Underwriters.

The Sigh is the clever work of the Sign Department of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, and is another creditable contribution to their skill, art and expert designing.

France Preparing For Rebuilding Of Northern Province

Health Services, Industrial Activities and Agriculture Prepared For.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. — Plans for the reconstruction of Northern France after the war worked out by a French cabinet committee and outlined in official reports received here, embrace a carefully prepared programme for restoration of normal conditions immediately after peace is declared. Provisions are included for the return of refugees to the enemy occupied districts as expeditiously as possible, prefects of the departments already having reported the number to be repatriated and a system having been worked out for the return first of those whose presence is an immediate necessity. A central labour bureau has been established in Paris to estimate the labour demand and supply.

Health services in the north will be reorganized under the plan, to direct measures of security from damaged buildings and unexploded shells, and the advisability of building of portable houses to send to northern provinces is being investigated. Steps are also being taken looking to victualling the departments of the Nord, Pas de Calais, Somme, Aisne, Ardennes and Meuse after the war by Government allowances. Cattle now kept in the camp of Paris will be supplied to the northern farmers and prefects in the invaded districts have been provided with funds to purchase agricultural machinery.

Resumption of industrial activities will be under direction of the minister of commerce who will form a private organization to handle funds advanced by the Government and distribute merchandise. Exports will be closely regulated.

PAPER FROM BURMA GRASS

CHRISTMAS GIFTS ARE ACKNOWLEDGED

Children at St. Vincent's Orphanage Were Made Happy by the Receipt of Many Presents

The Sisters of St. Vincent's Orphanage desire to thank most sincerely the following benefactors who, by their generosity, helped to fill the Christmas stockings of the orphans, or filled the festival board with the good things that made their young hearts glad. Not the least of the little ones' Yuletide pleasures was that afforded them by the kindness of Mr. C. Rutherford and family, who served the annual banquet at their own home, Jan. 2, 1917.

May all who participated in making the orphans happy be repaid by Him, Who has promised that even a cup of cold water given to the needy shall not go unrewarded.

SUFFRAGE JUST AS MUCH PATRIOTIC QUESTION AS IS RED CROSS

Mrs. Alice Roger-Collins Delivers Interesting Address on Equal Rights Before the Workers of the Red Cross Society.

THE VOTE IS NOT ALL

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Alice Roger Collins gave a most interesting address on equal franchise at the meeting of the Red Cross in the Public Library. There was a very large crowd of workers out. Mrs. T. F. Matthews, President of the Society, occupied the chair. Dr. Jessie Birnie was also on the platform, and in introducing the speaker, Mrs. Collins, gave a short address endorsing the movement which is so much before the country to-day. She spoke of the difficulty encountered by every new movement, even the Red Cross Society, now so popular, doing such splendid and grave work, had trouble in organizing on account of prejudices, etc., but it had come through successfully—all good things must. War has shaken many ancient prejudices. A situation has arisen through the present conditions when something must be done by women and some stand taken. The war has had a psychological effect on everybody. Things are looked upon in a different light. Such men as Asquith and Lord Northcliffe are now favourable to the equal franchise movement. There are grave questions coming up presently in which women must take a stand. The prohibition question must be settled, the influx of foreigners must be regulated. Women have fallen in to take the place of men largely during past three years, and for a generation they must still take the place of those who are returned from Europe unfit to work. If they can do this why can't they vote? Dr. Birnie paid a great tribute to Mr. Collins and hoped that all would give their undivided attention and if there were those who had not time to help in the movement of equal rights, they would at least give their sympathy.

Mrs. Collins then addressed the meeting. It is hard for me to speak, as I came to town with no idea of doing so, said Mrs. Collins, but since coming I find there has been no movement to make up the petition which the women of Canada are about to present to the Legislature. You must hurry with it to obtain best results. Men have asked for the vote for women, yet Peterborough is not in the list of the cities who are petitioning the government. Suffrage and Red Cross go hand in hand; one is just as much a patriotic question as the other. There is a common mistake that the actual vote is all women want. Some argue that to vote women must neglect home duties. I do not think that one day in the year will upset any home while the women go down to vote. Some are afraid directly the vote is given, women will want to sit in parliament. I have a vision of a special car running to Ottawa full of women eager to oust the men from their seats! In going into the votes for women movement I have not trodden a smooth path. I have worked for six years and have found no glory. In my town the league for the movement started with ten who were regarded as freaks. Some were afraid to join on account of public opinion and the company they might be in. The company is not bad. To be a suffragist you have George Elliott, Beerbohm Tree, etc., whereas the company against it are the liquor and white slave traffic, so you can pick your company! Suffrage goes back to the beginning of the world. In 1867 J. S. Mills asked Florence Nightingale to join the movement. She at first refused, but was forced to change her opinion when the matter was explained to her and all her old prejudices conquered by reason.

Women as a rule are stronger in their opposition to suffrage than men. They fear others might get what they want. Every thinking woman who studies the question will want suffrage. There are reasons women should have the vote.

1. Because women are well qualified as men mentally. Women can compete with men, often excell, in trades they have taken up.

2. Women give their children to teachers who are supposed to be fit to take charge of their children, yet they have no say in the board. Men who have no idea of children's minds and requisites are placed on the school boards where those in sympathy should be.

3. Women's ideals on modern questions raise moral standards. Women are the greater sufferers from intemperance, yet have no say in the governing of the laws controlling this. In our laws property is regarded before life. There is practically no law at present against child labour. In Toronto when there was a tremendous crop of berries to be picked and no one to do it, the government said, "Let the children." This was bad for children. The unfair adjustment and penalties for crimes against women and children in comparison with crimes against property are a scandal. I have gone into them section by section and sub-section by sub-section and find them an eye-opener. Some say it is unpatriotic to take up the movement while the men are away. Is it not patriotic to make the country better for them when they return? Socks are necessary. Yes, so is suffrage.

Infant mortality is terrible in Canada. In Australia, where they have had suffrage for years, the mortality is lower than in any other country, because the women have a say in the conditions.

4. Women should have equal wages with men. They work as well. Why should they not be paid as well. We never hear of High school or Public school women principals. Why not, when their work is as good and at times better?

5. The care of the feeble minded. Women have asked for years to have this serious matter adjusted, but the government is always "too busy," so feeble minded people marry, the state has feeble minded children to look after.

6. Because equal franchise has proved a success everywhere it has been tried. The only objection some can find is that it is new. Peterborough hates to take up anything new. One hundred years ago a man was stoned for carrying an umbrella in Baltimore because it was new. In Finland they have purer laws than any other country because of equal franchise. Women got the vote there because men and women had suffered together, and a spirit of equality and comradeship had been established.

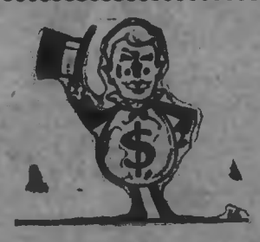
The arguments against the movement are weak. Women's sphere is home, women are too emotional, women don't really want the vote, women lose charm, women of all classes would vote, some badly, women can't fight (this reason is principally given by kindly old clergymen and corklegged men), it would raise suction in the homes (there is lots now even without the vote.)

Now you have seen both sides I hope you will look deeper in the matter, which cannot be decided by a casual reading of the daily papers, and will help on the movement by signing the petition.

AGAIN ASKS INQUIRY INTO CANNED GOODS

Brantford Also Wants Oleomargarine Admitted During the War.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 5.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, was forwarded an appeal on behalf of the civic High Cost of Living Committee for an investigation into the prices on canned goods and a request for the removal of the prohibition of oleomargarine, particularly during the war, while butter production is decreased and consumption for the troops increased. The committee forwarded unverified figures, giving costs of production on which an investigation could be based, regret being expressed that the Minister had not thought it practicable to take action on the committee's first request.



When you make my acquaintance, you will want to see me every day, I'll have such interesting things for you.

J. C. O.

WHY BELGIANS DIED DAILY.

Given Acorn Tea, Weak Soup, and Mildewed Bread.

The Hague, Jan. 5.— According to the statements made by Belgians invalided from camp at Soltau, Prussia, they received at six o'clock in the morning a bowl of some decoction made from acorns. At midday they received half a liter of soup containing much water and a few turnips, carrots, and shrimps, served with bread or potatoes. At three o'clock in the afternoon there was given to them 250 grams (slightly more than half a pound) of black bread, bad, and often mildewed. In the evening, as at midday, they received half a liter of soup, sometimes containing bran or brown maize.

Under this regime the stronger men went under and the weak soon fell ill so that, the Belgians say, deaths occurred daily.

British Attack in East Africa

LONDON, January 4—The following official communication was issued by the War Office to-night:

"In East Africa our forces in the vicinity of Kisaki, south of the Uluguru hills, assumed the offensive New Year's day. They stormed the enemy's strongly entrenched lines in the Mgeta valley, inflicting heavy casualties and capturing several guns and howitzers. Pursuing the enemy we approached on January 3 the Tiogowali river, eleven miles northwest of Kibambawe."

THE INAUGURAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mr. V. Eastwood Appointed Chairman of the Board For the Year 1917 —Standing Committees Appointed—Few Changes Were Made

The inaugural meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening. One of the first duties to be dealt with by the 1917 Board was the appointment of a chairman. This fell to the lot of Mr. V. Eastwood who thanked the Board for their mark of favour and confidence. "The position, said Mr. Eastwood, is an honourable one and I hope to measure up to the standard of those who have held it before me. We have before us greater responsibility than ever before. We have sent away hundreds of our boys to the firing line who will come back looking in education. Many of them were only boys when they went away. They will deserve the greatest attention we can give to fit them for civil life and it is up to us to liquidate the great debt we owe them."

STANDING COMMITTEE

Messrs. Dr. G. Burnham, J. W. Miller, A. A. Fowler, R. Denne and J. Crane were appointed a committee to strike the standing committee for the year. The Committee brought in the following report:

FINANCE COMMITTEE

J. W. Miller (chairman), T. McGrath, Dr. G. Burnham, G. N. Gordon.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE

R. Denne (chairman), Dr. F. C. Neal, A. A. Fowler, G. N. Gordon.

SUPERVISION COMMITTEE

J. Crane (chairman), W. H. Hill, Dr. G. Burnham, R. Denne.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

Mr. W. H. Hill (chairman). The whole Board constitute the membership of this committee.

ADVISORY INDUSTRIALL COMMITTEE.

Mr. V. Eastwood (chairman), T. McGrath, A. A. Fowler, Dr. F. C. Neal, J. Crane, J. W. Miller. Outside members of this committee are as follows: Mr. E. G. Patterson, Mr. R. Anson, Mr. W. Sangster, Mr. T. H. G. Denne, Mr. J. Corkery and Mr. W. R. Breyfogle.

ADVISORY COMMERCIAL COMMITTEE.

A. A. Fowler, Dr. F. C. Neal, G. N. Gordon, T. McGrath. Outside members of this Committee: W. R. Morris, W. F. Johnston, A. W. Cressman, and W. H. Hamilton.

MR. V. EASTWOOD

The newly-elected Chairman of the Board of Education.

PREDICT WHISKY FAMINE.

London, Jan. 4.—The Central Control Board of Liquor Traffic, has made an order which comes into force Feb. 1, further reducing the strength of spirits to 30 degrees under proof. An official of the Central Control Board explained last night that the chief object of the new restriction was to get increased efficiency from all classes of people now on war service. Another reason was the Ministry of Munitions' requirements of an immense quantity of alcohol for war purposes. The official added that it is calculated there will be a famine in whisky in five years time, and the more whisky is diluted, the longer it will be possible to have stocks in reserve.

Sergt. Ed. Downes In Hun Chase From Fleury to Les Boeufs

Sergt. Edward Downes, writing to Chief Thompson, acknowledges the gift of a Christmas parcel from the police force, of which he was a member, and relates his experience in the campaign on the Somme:

Summerdown Camp,
Eastbourne, 12 Dec, '16.

Dear Chief—I received your splendid Christmas gift this morning. It is very kind indeed of you and your staff to take so much trouble over us boys, and I thank you all very much. Last Christmas I was at Merville, a small town in Northern France. This year I shall be lucky enough to be in England. You will notice that I am still convalescent, which is not at all bad. I came here on 7th Oct., so have had a good spell, although I have had a few days' sickness on and off. How much longer do you think this war will last? Not very much I hope. It was on the 15th Sept. that I was wounded. My regiment was at the Somme Valley and we had to fight from Ginchy to Flers and Les Boeufs. It was a grand affair and we gave Fritz a warm time. They were on the run with us chasing them with bombs and bullets. During the fight a shot went through my hand and put me out of action. I was left in a shell hole to get back as best I could. I put a bandage on and started on my journey, a tramp over ground which had been torn up by the shells. I soon saw many others who had been hit and we made up a nice little battle party. The first place one gets treated is as close to the line as possible. Here a dressing is put on and cocoa and bread and butter given. From there we were taken to the first field hospital by ambulance, where wounds are seen by a doctor and washed and dressed again, also another meal. The worst part was the 12 hours' ride in cattle trucks. After that we get to a base hospital, where the worst cases are sent to England and the remainder are put into wards and looked after there. The wound I got was not a very painful one and gave me very little trouble, but the continuous exposure during my time at the front began to tell on me when I got home. I wish you all a very happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year. Hoping God spares me to be with you all again soon, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Edward Downes.

Division Court in County Council Chamber To-day

The first Division Court since the fire ravaged the Court House was held to-day by Judge Hayeke in the County Council room. Most of the lawyers were represented with clients on the docket and the mill started amid an interior warmth that was heightened by the bedraggled conditions outside.

RAIN LEAKING THROUGH

To-day's rain leaked through the exposed ceiling into the central section of the main corridor directly under the old court room. It was simply a case of enduring the disagreeable conditions and of calling out some of the "birds" to mop up the mess.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETING.

When the new County Council meets on Tuesday, January 23rd, one of the most important questions will be the restoration of the Court House which will likely be determined then.

City Council Inaugural Meeting

The inaugural meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday morning next at 11 o'clock. The chief item of business will be the formation of the standing committees. It is altogether likely that several preliminary, unofficial meetings have been held during the week, with the result that the slate will be pretty well defined by the time Monday rolls around. Last year Ald. Duncan opposed such methods, but did not receive much of a reception. It is only fair to say that every member of the Council is not implicated in the preliminary efforts that are usually made to have the chairmanships assigned prior to the inaugural meeting.

A Scarcity of School Teachers

The Board of Education has declined to accept the resignation of Miss Ruth McFadden, of the Queen Mary school teaching staff, unless a suitable substitute can be secured. The matter was brought to the attention of the Board at a meeting held last evening.

Mr. W. H. Hill claimed that it was nearly impossible to secure teachers at the present time and that Miss McFadden's departure would seriously interfere with the work of the school. At Easter conditions would be different, as the annual crop of Normal school students would be available.

"Unforseen circumstances" was given as the reason for Miss McFadden's request.

Mr. Eastwood, chairman of the Board, wanted to know if the usual doctor's certificate accompanied the resignation.

Mr. Hill informed the Board that the case was not a question of physical disability. Matrimony was given as the reason for Miss McFadden's request.

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Replying to "The Mother of a Soldier," as Secretary of the Peterborough Law Association, I can assuredly state that any lawyer in the city will be glad to advise her, free of charge. I do not believe, however, that the Patriotic Association will allow any woman to suffer whose only son is wounded in France. My advice is that this mother see Mr. Dobbin, whose business it is to deal with just such matters as this. Discretion must, of course, be used and each case dealt with on its merits; but there is no doubt that it is the plain duty of those who remain at home to see to it that no woman or child suffers because the man on whom they depend for support is fighting the country's battles.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

Supplementary Meetings Were Well Attended

The supplementary meetings held in Central Smith yesterday under the auspices of the Board of Agriculture, were well attended in the afternoon and evening. Mr. J. A. McGregor presided. Meetings are being held at Buckhorn to-day.

A Hot Fight In Collingwood

Special to The Examiner:

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Jan. 5.—A new feature in the red hot by-election campaign here for the Legislature was the allegation in the local Conservative organ issued this morning, that the liquor interests were behind the Liberals in the campaign against the Conservative candidate. The article says the liquor men are out to defeat the Hearst candidate at any cost. The Liberals vehemently deny that they are receiving assistance from the liquor men. N. W. Rowell, K.C., will be the chief speaker at the Liberal meeting here to-night. A big army of workers of both parties are in the constituency.

Bits of Clothing Found In Ruins

A small piece of clothing, evidently the remains of a black shirt lined with grey and pink flannel and having a small patch, which may lead to identification, and a small portion of human flesh was recovered from the debris at the Quaker Oats. Them were taken to Lane and Enno's undertaking establishment awaiting identification. The bad weather to-day has interfered with the work of the searchers.

COST OF TEA RAPIDLY INCREASING.

The recent advance of five cents a pound by no means represents the increased cost of the fine teas used in "SALADA." The markets have advanced from six to ten cents a pound, and the freight rates jumped two and a half cents a pound in the past two months. Whatever prices these uncontrollable conditions may warrant, however, you may rely on the quality of "SALADA" remaining exactly the same as ever.

TENDERS WANTED

Capt. J. D. Warren, Canadian Army Service Corps, whose headquarters is with the caretaker of the Armouries, is calling for tenders for the supply of potatoes and fresh vegetables for the troops in Peterborough, from February 1st to May 31st.

Those desirous of tendering may do so by getting in touch with Captain Warren.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY HAS HAD GOOD YEAR

tan Institute, Mr. O'Dell, Farm & Dairy, Journal of Commerce, W. R. Morris, C. C. Abbot, S. African Government, Carnegie Library, Ottawa, Carnegie Peace Endowment, Mr. Croft, G. A. Gillespie, Esq., M.P.P., the Misses Nicholls, and Mr. Pogue.

Some 450 volumes have had to be retired, everyone of which has been a book of fiction. In cases where the volumes were not too far gone to be of service they were made up in bundles and sent for the use of our soldiers overseas, or to the local recruiting rooms. Capt. Best took charge of those destined for overseas use and Mrs. Scadding of those for local service.

I am glad to report that there have been fewer books missing, about 38 as compared with 400 in 1915. Most of those that cannot be found were in the juvenile department.

There have been fewer cases of mutilation of magazines and newspapers, but attention needs to be drawn to the fact that some person or persons unknown occasionally abstracts periodicals from the Library tables, and having made use of them, return hem just as mysteriously as they took them.

The reading rooms have been well patronized and there have been many visitors to the museum; very many more in fact, than in former years.

The reference room has become very popular with the pupils of the Collegiate Institute and also with many children from the various schools in the city. As has been the case in former years, however, no note of the numbers who have used it, or of the volumes that have been consulted, has been made, and it would be hazardous to make a guess in either case. The members of the Board may rest assured, however, that the reference library has done excellent service throughout the year.

In the reading department a great deal of useful work has been done and I am pleased to add that it has been done at smaller cost to the library than in any former years. 4,400 books were repaired and 31 magazines bound and made ready for the shelves.

The Library building has been made use of by many patriotic societies, chief among them being the Red Cross Society. The basement of the building is still being made use of by the ladies as a store house for some of their supplies.

The members of the staff have shown efficiency in their work and I have nothing but praise for the way in which they have striven to do their various duties.

The amount received in fines, etc., during the year was, as will be seen from the monthly statement, $174.38. In this amount must be included $11 for tickets purchased by borrowers living outside the city limits.

The Library has received at all times the courteous attention of the Review and the Examiner and the assistance rendered by these journals in disseminating information concerning its activities is not to be measured in words.

Before closing this report I would like to suggest, for the consideration of the Board, one way at least in which a very useful work might be accomplished, and that is in the teaching of classes in reference work. If the heads of the various educational institutions in the city could hit upon method whereby certain classes could be sent to do reference work along specified lines of work I think the Library would be in a very good position to aid them both with books and suggestions. Our Library committee is adding books of great value to this section every year and the training in seeking out information therein is bound to be of incalculable value to any who engage in it.

5,168 tickets have been issued since the Library was opened. During the past twelve months 630 tickets were issued, 169 of these were to juveniles and 46 to Normal school students.

On behalf of the staff and for myself I beg to thank the members of the Board for the kindness and consideration extended to us throughout the year, and remain,

Yours respectfully,
Fred M. Dela Fosse.

FANS ARE PRAYING FOR GOOD ICE FOR TUESDAY'S BIG GAME

The Peterborough Juniors and the fans generally are praying for good ice for next Tuesday night when Bowmanville will endeavour to lift the scalps of the local youngsters in the opening Junior O.H.A. game. A fast hockey cushion is all that is required to make the game a memorable one, judging by the form the Peterborough boys are showing in practice and by the reports that are coming from Bowmanville as to the class of Manager, Joe Hynd's team. The Bowmanville juniors are a new attraction as far as Peterborough is concerned, as they have generally grouped with other clubs. The team is said to be fast and clever this year, and Peterborough fans who have been following the junior's practices are looking forward to the clash with more than usual interest. Besides the loyal body of fans who turn out to see every hockey game the Juniors have a following of their own who like to see the youngsters perform. Altogether there will be a real old time crowd out for Tuesday's battle provided Jack Frost brings along some ice in the meantime. There is a good foundation on the rink's surface and a few hours of frost would provide the best of hockey conditions.

The Lindsay Post Says:—

Well, anyway, "Josh" Craig says his juniors are all home-brews. Josh has been working hard with his team for the past couple of seasons and deserves all the success he can grab.

"LESS PITCHING, MORE BATTING"

"Less pitching and more batting" is the latest baseball slogan. It was inspired at the recent National League meeting by Percy D. Haughton, president of the Braves, and augmented by others in that meeting but nothing was done to accomplish the end in view.

It was generally agreed that Mr. Haughton was right, that there should be "less pitching and more batting." There are too few hits, too many strikeouts and not enough base stealing. And baseball will never be improved as long as the pitcher is the master of the game. Seeing two pitchers in a 1 to 0 battle is why the strikeouts are more numerous than the hits is not calculated to attract enthusiastic fans to the ball game. They care little for such battles. They would rather see a pitcher hit rather hard, with lots of splendid fielding and base running, instead of the boxman mowing down the batsmen at the plate, leaving the remainder of the team inactive.

It has been suggested that the foul strikes be limited to one instead of two. This would place an additional burden on the pitcher and give the batsman an additional chance to hit safely. But a still better rule would be to send a batsman to first base on three balls instead of four. This would have a double purpose.

First, a pitcher would not be so liberal in pitching wide balls to enable the catcher to make an easy throw to catch a base stealer. Some pitchers have wasted as many as three balls in order to outguess the base runner.

Second, more batsmen would first base and hence there would be more of that spectacular part of the game, base stealing. The bases are empty too much. There is too much of the game when the whole attention is riveted on the pitcher and the batsmen.

The semi-balk could be eliminated to the advantage of base runners. This illegal delivery exists to a large extent and only the most daring and fleet footed men—such as Ty Cobb—can take liberties on the bases while a pitcher of this type is on the mound. Old-fashioned pitching, which was less effective than the modern style, and consequently developed more thrills, is lacking. And the tedious, deliberate style of present-day twirlers with its great effectiveness has prolonged these "pitchers' battles" until they become a bore.

Baseball may not be revised this winter or next, but a movement toward it was made when John K. Tener requested that all suggestions looking toward greater batting be sent to him so that he could place them before the Committee on Rules.

INDOOR BASEBALL

Last night the Senior Employed Boys' Class started the new term with the excellent attendance of twenty-two.

Harold Copp (Captain of the Tigers) with the good support which he received from his players, managed to defeat the Senators, under Capt. Brown in a game of baseball by the score of 4 to 1. In the course of this game Pitcher Brown's delivery was freely hit and Copp and Cottingham got some lucky hits. Catcher Stewart Thorndyke played a good game despite the fact that he received a foul ball in the face.

This game was followed by a game of basketball between the Athletics, under Nelson, and the Indians owned by McLeod. This game was won by the Athletics by the close score of 18 to 16. The stars in this contest were Nelson, Cavanagh and Gerald Thorndyke for the Athletes, and Eaton, Armstrong and McLeod for the Indians.

Next Monday there will be a basketball double-header. Tigers vs. Athletes, Indians vs. Senators.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

For the first time since the Brock Street Rink opened, three weeks ago to-night, there was no ice available for hockey practice last night, and as a result the 247th Battalion team did not have their usual work-out.

Robert Carney, one of the candidates out with the Peterborough junior club this year, has joined the big bunch of Peterborough hockey players playing the war game, and has become a member of the 24th Battery.

Peterborough fans will be glad to learn that Lornie Rose last year's Peterborough junior captain has caught a place with the champion Sarnia intermediates. He is announced as left wing in the Sarnia line up for to-morrow night's opening game. There was plenty of competition for places on the team and the Peterborough kid deserves credit for winning a place.

The 247th game with Lindsay scheduled for to-night has been postponed on account of the soft snap and will be played later on in the season.

Pte. Bobby Armstrong the big centre man of the soldiers had his knee injured in Tuesday's game but hopes to be alright for the next battle.

Owing to the ice conditions there will be no practice for the Peterborough juniors to-night.

BOWLING

A great game was played on the Water street alleys last night, when a team of five men went over the 2,700 mark. This game was played as a practice game with the intention of going to Toronto some time in January to try and lift the McCallum trophy with a five man team. Dawson was high man with a score of 624 Bishop, Cairns, Solomon, Nicolls and Fitzpatrick were all over the 500 mark, which goes to show that there were some good scores hung up. Another practice game will be played next week, and by then it should be seen how the team will look on the Toronto alleys.

The De Laval office will play the De Laval factory to-morrow night at 7.15. It will be remembered that the factory beat the office in a game before and this time all the men in the office team are out to beat the factory. A great game should be played between these two teams.

Choirmaster Is Wounded

Pte. Wm. Woodrow, the choir master of St. George's Anglican church, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, has been badly wounded in the arm according to news reaching the city to-day. Pte. Woodrow enlisted with the 93rd Battalion last winter and went overseas with the Peterborough unit, afterwards being transferred to another battalion at the front. He is the forty-third member of the 93rd to be hit since representatives of the battalion went to the front.

The Patriotic Fund

Those in charge of the Patriotic Fund need ready money for meeting the obligations of the work and are anxious that subscriptions in arrears be paid in. The Finance Committee has found it necessary to, in some cases, resort to the Division Court as a collecting agency, and if further response is not made to requests to meet the emergency the same expedient may have to be again adopted. The money is needed and there seems to be no doubt of the legal and moral obligations of subscribers to meet the obligations to which they have pledged their names. The Finance Committee desires to have the situation placed before those of the public interested in the matter.

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE DISCUSSES WATER RATE

Magistrate Dumble has addressed the following letter to the Peterborough Utilities Commission, Simcoe street, Peterborough, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I beg to draw your attention to an unfairness in the matter of assessing for water rates. I hold two lots, one of them is a corner lot, the other, the same size, is not. For the corner lot you assess me for both side and front measurements, 140 feet, for the next lot on its frontage 33 feet. Each lot is the same size, each lot will carry one house, each house will require the same quantity of water.

Now, the question is, why should I pay for the corner lot $1.12, and for the next lot only 98c? I know your answer. You say that the cost for pipe laying etc. on the corner lot is much greater than on the inside lot, and that somebody must pay for the carrying on the pipes, etc., and you lay the extra costs on the man who happens to occupy the corner lot. Now, at every corner there is a square in the centre, you may call it "No man's land." You have to carry the water pipes over this square, east west, north and south, and you charge the cost of getting over the corner to the general cost of the water system. The consumer pays his share of that in his general taxes, but what fairness is there in making the fixed amount of water used by the occupant of the corner lot cost three times as much as the occupant of the next lot pays for the same accommodation. Would it not be equitable to charge all consumers of the same quantity of water the same price and not charge the unfortunate man on the corner more than his fair share? Let every consumer pay the same price for the same thing.

I submit this to your consideration as I think the present method unjust.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE.

Bound To Be Involved

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—"I agree with Secretary Lansing or anybody else who says this war cannot continue without America becoming involved in it," said Senator Lewis in the Senate this afternoon. He said the United States could not proceed further in accepting apologies for injuries done by ship commanders, presumably referring to submarine commanders.

UPHELD CONVICTION OF POLICE COURT

In the Division Court this morning, Judge Huycke sustained the police court conviction of Mr. Perry of the United Cigar Store, who was fined $10 by Magistrate Dumble for selling cigarette papers to a minor. Mr. C. S. G. Spence laid the information. The appeal was dismissed with costs.

SPOILED CHILDREN FILL ASYLUM WITH PARENTS

TOPEKA, Kas., Jan. 5.—Spoiled children by refusing to care for their aged parents who are unable to support themselves are causing the state insane asylums to be filled with aged dependents not insane, it is charged in the report of Dr. Thomas C. Biddle, superintendent of the Topeka state hospital.

"Owing to the decadence of filial duty," says the report, "our people are much more inclined to transfer the burden of parental care to other hands or to the public than in the last generation. This may be the result of lax discipline with consequent disrespect that characterizes the modern family management."

The patients over 60 years old admitted to the institution every year he said, had increased from seventy-one in 1902 to 160 in 1916

FOWLER INDIVIDUALITY

The exceptional care, Dr. Fowler takes in making his "Peblo" Glasses fit the contour of the face, centering the lenses over the pupil of the eyes, setting them out sufficiently far to clear the eyeglasses and otherwise making them exactly suit the face, on which they are to be worn, is the reason why Fowlers "Peblo" Glasses have that distinctly individual appearance. Every pair is made for the wearer and the wearer only.

Coal Shortage One Reason For Cutting Service

One of the principal reasons—if not the principal reason itself—for the proposed reduction in the passenger train schedules, now being prepared by the various railway companies of the Dominion, on the suggestion of Sir Henry Drayton, of the Dominion Railway Commission, is the extreme urgency of the movement of coal freights to supply the munition factories throughout the countries.

Many munition factories with huge war orders yet to fill, and with new war orders acquired recently, have expressed their fears regarding the coal supply, and complaints have been made that the coal cannot be delivered fast enough to keep up with the heavy demands for fuel. If coal does not move more easily, it has been pointed out, there will be a great possibility of war orders not being executed on time, and the importance of the factories on schedule has recently been emphasized by Mr. J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the Imperial Munitions Board.

This is the phase of the question that is believed of Mr. A. D. MacTier, the general manager of the C. P. R. eastern lines, when he declared: "It would not be too much if the people were slightly inconvenienced for the sake of the Empire."

The railway companies are getting together on the principle of "fewer passenger trains and more freight trains." When the arrangements being made are finished and the proposed plan is put into operation, it is believed that no munition factory will complain of a coal shortage, or of delay in the delivery of munitions.

SCHEDULE NOT READY.

The new schedule has not yet been decided upon. In a general way each of the railway companies has agreed to render what service it can, and in a few days an announcement is expected regarding the trains that will be left off the regular schedule in future. The railway companies are not ready to announce the new schedule.

OBITUARY

MR. JAMES STUBBS.

Last night death released a patient and uncomplaining sufferer from a long and painful illness, when Mr. James Stubbs passed away at the family residence at eight o'clock. Mr. Stubbs, who was sixty-three years old, was born in Bridgenorth, Smith Township, but resided in Peterborough most of his life, having come here at seventeen years of age to serve his apprenticeship in the blacksmith trade with Wm. Yelland. He was a faithful member of the George Street Methodist Church. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, formerly Sara J. Donell. His only son, Mr. W. J. Stubbs, died only nine months ago.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the family residence, 661 Water street. Please omit flowers.

JAMES GEORGE ARMSTRONG.

James George Armstrong died at his residence, "Cherry Grove," lot 16, con. 4, Smith, last night. Mr. Armstrong's health has not been the best for some years, but this summer he showed such signs of improvement he resumed his activities about the farm. On Wednesday, however, he took a serious turn, which proved fatal.

Mr. Armstrong was born in Otonabee and was a son of the late Wm. Armstrong of that township. For many years he served as councillor and later as reeve and member of the county council.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Lillian Roseborough, one daughter, Mrs. Albert Garbutt of Smith, and one son, Mr. Albert Armstrong, residing on the farm.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon from the family residence to Little Lake cemetery, the Rev. Gledstone McKee officiating.

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, Jan 5.—Wave of selling by bear operators this afternoon drove prices on stock exchange down one to six points under yesterday's closing figures.

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Post & Flagg.—For the time being, the Street seems to have relegated the peace efforts, our foreign relations and the railway wage dispute to the discard and are revelling once more in the prospects of melon-cutting in connection with war profits.

J. S. Bache & Co.—A moderate reaction in the ordinary course due to technical reasons may be expected soon. We regard favourably the purchase of stocks on all recessions. The securities of these companies specialising in basic materials and commodities are to be preferred and of course the railroad stocks.

Bryant, Dunn & Co.—It seems logical to conclude, however, that peace a further down the lane than had been thought likely ten days ago. Yesterday's market was a story of a consistent rise in prices with the tone better than any that we have seen these two months.

Laidlaw & Co.—The market is largely professional and that the public has not generally come in as yet.

E. & C. Randolph.—The market was strong all day yesterday. It wants to go up and in spite of the uncertainties in the foreign situation, which cause apprehensions in many quarters, it will go up unless and until something of an alarming nature happens. Steel was the leader, and of course, it makes the best leader the market can have. The advance gives every indication of continuing.—Evans.

BIG RECRUITING MEETING AT THE ARMOURIES

PROMISING VICTORIES FOR THE ALLIES ON BOTH EAST AND WEST FRONTS

Berlin Admits That the British Penetrated Their Trenches North of the Ancre River and That the Russians "Heavily Reinforced" in the Riga District, Renewed Attacks and Drove the Germans Back on a Half Mile Front--Germans Continue to Advance in Roumania.

WAR NEWS FROM THE VARIOUS FRONTS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON (Bulletin), January 6.—Promising victories for the Allies on both the eastern and western front are admitted in Berlin. The German War Office states that the British penetrated their trenches north of the Ancre River, and the Russians, "heavily reinforced," in the Riga district, renewed attacks and drove the Germans back on a half-mile front.

GERMANS REPORT SUCCESS.

BERLIN, January 6.—The capture of Rimniceni, Tartaru, Olanesca, Guiliasca and Maxineni, in Roumania, and the penetration by German vanguards to the Sereth River line, was announced to-day.

The War Office claims that Galatz, one of the most important towns now in Roumanian hands, is within gunfire of German guns. It is believed here that Mackensen will press on towards Odessa in this direction.

Experts' Views On The International Situation

The American Administration is Believed to Be Wielding Anew its War Threat Club Against Germany to Force Her into Line on Making Peace Terms

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, January 6.—(By Carl D. Groat.)—The Administration is wielding anew its war threat club against Germany to force her into line on making peace terms, according to the views of experts on the international situation to-day.

Taken in connection with Secretary Lansing's recent "Verge of war" interpretation of Wilson's note to the belligerents, the Senator Lewis statement was regarded here to-day as a direct threat that the United States Government is convinced that it will have to break relations with Germany over the submarine question if peace manoeuvres fail.

It has been said that President Wilson is doubly anxious for peace, in order to avoid the consequences of being involved in the war over submarine activities.

Berlin Press Bureau Denies the Charge

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, January 6.—"Absolutely untrue," was denial of the Press Bureau to the report that a woman and thirteen-year-old boy had been shot as spies in Nasseln, Belgium.

The statement said no boy had been sentenced. The woman had been sentenced to death on conclusive evidence, but pardoned.

BERLIN SEES UNITED STATES DRIFTING TO ALLIES.

BERLIN, January 6.—Discussion in Congress at Washington on America's international relations following the recent peace notes, has resulted in the belief in some quarters that the United States and the Allies are gradually drifting together, rather than that the United States and neutrals are co-operating for peace.

Kaiser Hands Out More of the Old Line

Special to Examiner:

LONDON, January 6.—Kaiser William regards the Allies' "rejection of Germany's peace terms as an arrogant crime," and "the responsibility is upon them for further bloodshed," according to on order issued to the German army and navy.

"Hunger for power makes them desire the destruction of Germany," and he urges that the army and navy stand firm as steel to force the peace offered by Germany.

Canadians Score in a French Raid

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, January 6.—A special cable to the Star to-day says the Canadians have been very active in trench raids, recently taking more than one hundred German prisoners and capturing and destroying eleven machine guns and bombing twenty-three dugouts. General Byng has been warmly congratulated by higher officers on results the Canadians have recently achieved.

GARDNER SUPPORTED EMPHATIC CHARGE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Representative Gardner to-day supported his emphatic charge that there was a leak of advance information to Wall street on the Presidents' note to belligerents, they reading a despatch which was sent out by Dow Jones' news ticker service shortly after two o'clock of the afternoon before the note was released for publication.

Gardner made his declaration and read copy of the news tickers' report to the House Rules committee when it reconvened to-day.

SIR FREDERICK BORDEN DEAD

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

CANNING, Jan. 6. — Sir Frederick Borden, K.C., M.G., Minister of Militia for fifteen years in the Laurier administration, died here this morning. He was born in Cornwallis, N.S., in 1845, and was twice married. His only son was killed in action in South Africa in 1900.

HOME ON FURLOUGH, AFTER 14 MONTHS SERVICE IN FRANCE

Lieut. Claude H. Rogers Says Confidence Pervades the Troops and the British People of Approaching Victory.

WORK OF THE TRANSPORTS

After an absence of two years, fourteen months of which were spent in France, Lieut. Claude H. Rogers is home on a furlough of two months, and will be in Peterborough about five weeks. He spent ten days in England where, he stated, there is everywhere manifested an unshaken confidence and optimism inspired by the leadership of Lloyd George and the past year's successes on the western front. It was not the ground gained in the Somme advance, but the capture of 110,000 Germans, Prussians all, and reputed to be the pick of the enemy's forces, that has created the feeling of superiority among the men at the front.

Lieutenant Rogers is in charge of the mechanical staff connected with a divisional motor transport column. About two hundred motor cars and lorries have to be kept in repair by this group of sixty mechanics. At the time of the Somme push the men worked night and day. When cars were put out of commission going up and down from the front, Lieutenant Rogers had to bring them for repairs when the vehicles were not beyond the mechanic's aid. A large percentage of the motor ambulances were also hit and damaged. Shrapnel destroyed some of them and others were badly shattered. Some of them were blown up with their freight of wounded soldiers.

Lieutenant Rogers has been up and down the British lines in France during the past fourteen months. He was at the third battle of Ypres early in June last at which his cousin, Lieut. H. G. Rogers, was taken prisoner. Afterwards he was moved down to the Somme. Lieutenant Rogers speaks highly of the care and treatment of the soldiers. The food is of the best, and a complete system has been built up by which it is forwarded to the front. The prevailing opinion among the troops and the people of the Old Country is that the Boches are beaten, that they realize they cannot win and are undertaking movements by which they hope to hold as much as possible of the territory they have gained.

MR. ROWELL IN COLLINGWOOD

Special to The Examiner:

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Jan. 6. —N. W. Rowell, M.P.P., Liberal leader, spent a couple of hours this forenoon before leaving for Toronto on the eleven o'clock train, visiting the extensive ship yards and other big industries, of which the town is justly proud. During the inspection he had an opportunity of meeting the heads of these industries and many of the workmen. There are over 500 men employed in these works and these mechanics were much in evidence at Mr. Rowell's meeting last night, where they learned with satisfaction his attitude towards the cause of labour.

POULTRY SHOW WILL BE BIGGEST YET

Indications point to one of the biggest Poultry Shows ever held in the city under the auspices of the Peterborough Poultry Association next week.

Secretary Brault is a busy man these days. Entries close to-night, and judging from the large lists already received the full capacity of the Market Hall will be taxed to its limit. The beautiful window hangers are quite an attraction reminding the public of the dates of the show, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thurs, January 9, 10 and 11. Miss Yates, always of so much interest in her lectures, will be here again with an entirely new demonstration outfit supplied by the Department of Agriculture. Then something new here, is a sales class, where the breeders heave placed on sale overstock of Pure breds, which is a decided opportunity for those whose ambitions to get into the good ones at a reasonable price is possible.

Pte. T. E. Campbell, of The 93rd Battalion Has Been Killed In Action

Pte. D. J. McIntosh Another Former Member of the Peterborough Batt. Reported Wounded in the Head--Two Indian Members of the 93rd Wounded---Pte. Wm. Woodrow Loses His Arm as Result of Injury---Recruiting Meeting at the Market--To-day's General Military News.

Following on the announcement that two former members of the 93rd Battalion had been reported seriously wounded, comes the tragic news today that another ex-member of the Peterborough Battalion has been killed in action and still another wounded. So far six members of Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit have been killed or died of wounds in France, two have died of illness in England and thirty-nine have been wounded, a total of forty-seven casualties since the 93rd left Canada.

Mr. Wm. Cavanagh, R.R. No. 2, Indian River, was officially notified today that Pte. Thomas Edward Campbell, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was killed in action on December 22. Pte. Campbell enlisted here last February with the 93rd, and after going overseas, was transferred in a draft to the Mounted Rifles.

Mrs. McIntosh, 348 Stewart street, received word this morning that Pte. David John McIntosh was officially reported admitted to No. 26 Stationary Hospital, Fravent, December 18th, with a gun shot wound in the head. Pte. McIntosh, who joined the 93rd Battalion early last spring, was on the recruiting staff for some time and did good work in that capacity.

Indians Wounded.

Word has been received that two well known Chemong Indian members of the 93rd Battalion have been wounded in France. One of them is Pte. Isaac Taylor and the other his uncle, Pte. Chas. Taylor. Both went overseas with the 93rd Battalion as members of C Company and were transferred to other Canadian units at the front. Pte. Isaac Taylor is a son of Wm. and Mrs. Taylor of Chemong Indian Village, and has four brothers in France, all five going over with the 93rd Battalion. The other four are Pte. Will, Sam, Hiram and Horace Taylor. He is married, as is his uncle, Pte. Charles Taylor, who is reported seriously wounded. They are the first two Chemong Indians to appear on the list.

Lieut-Col. Glass, O.C., 252nd Battalion, Lindsay was in an automobile accident at Ottawa this week. The car was badly wrecked, but the Colonel escaped with slight injuries. He will not be able to resume his duties for a few days.

With the band of the 247th in attendance to supply music, a recruiting meeting was held at the market this morning in the interests of the 247th Battalion. Spirited speeches were made by Major O'Flynn, Capt. Belton and Lieut. Strickland, whose remarks were closely followed by a large crowd.

The public is again reminded of the big recruiting meeting in the armouries to-morrow night at 8.30 o'clock. Addresses will be given by Dr. J. W. Edwards, Federal member for Frontenac, and Col. Ponton of Belleville. The band of the 247th will supply music. There will be plenty of seating accommodation.

In connection with the announcement that Pte. Wm. Woodrow, choirmaster of the St. George's church, had been wounded, which appeared in last evening's Examiner, additional information has been received that Pte. Woodrow has suffered the loss of his right arm. It had to be amputated above the elbow as a result of his injuries. Rev. Jas. Price, rector of St. George's, received the bad news from Rev. Stuart R. Wilson, chaplain of the unit in which Pte. Woodrow was serving. The injured soldier went overseas with the 93rd Battalion.

Four recruits were taken on by the 247th Battalion to-day.

A number of Peterborough soldiers who have returned from overseas and have been discharged from the Canadian Expeditionary Force, have been making a practice of wearing their military uniforms, in spite of the fact that they are back in civilian life. It should be understood that this is contrary to the regulations.

PIANO BOX HOUSED MAN WORTH $6000

Strange Romance of Real Life Revealed by Death.

NEW YORK Jan. 6.—The death at the polyclinic hospital last Friday, of Darwin de Wolf, 76 years old, who lived in a piano packing box in the yard of the Kohler and Campbell factory, disclosed that the man had considerable money and that his manner of living was purely from choice. In spite of his age, de Wolfe came to New York eighteen months ago to study piano tuning and piano player repairing. His possessions were carried in a large handkerchief and he had walked from Kalamazoo, Mich.

He had been tinkering for some time on a kerosene and water combination burner, and it was while experimenting with this that he received burns that proved fatal. After his death an investigation showed that de Wolf had a deposit of more than $6,000 in a bank in Chattanooga, Tenn., and 27,000 shares in Colorado mining companies.

Increasing Confidence In The British Isles

Little is Heard About Peace—Sole Absorbing Pre-occupation of Everybody is the Big Allied Offensive That Will Be Launched in Spring.

DISTRUST OF GERMANY

by T. P. O'Connor

London, Jan. 6.—What does England really think concerning the German peace proposals? The answer in brief is; nothing at all. Little is heard publically or privately about peace. The sole absorbing preoccupation of everybody is the big allies offensive that will be launched in the spring especially on the western front. It is only on the ruins of a defeated German militarism on the battlefield that the Entente Allies will place any confidence.

Two feelings run side by side. First, the hatred and distrust of Germany and a disbelief in her professions of humanity which have been deepened daily by news from Belgium and Armenia, and a distrust of her abandonment of the gospel of military ascendency, which has been deepened again by the boastfulness of the Kaiser and the Chancellor and by the ravings of the Pan-German press. These feelings have reached such a boiling point that no sacrifice will be considered too great to finish once and for all time the devilish Prussian military machine.

The second feeling is one of increasing confidence that such a military defeat is now within the power of the Entente Allies. I never saw a more complete transformation of feeling between the deep dejection caused by Roumania's defeat and the almost exultant self confidence that has arisen as a result of Germany's whines.

Practically all of this self confidence comes from the stories of battles on the western front and from the knowledge that our big guns are better and more numerous than those of the enemy and from the palpable and pronounced decrease in German morale. These things all lead to the satisfying belief that we will be enabled to follow up the Somme victories by more powerful and more o ssive attacks.

Lloyd George has not been living much of late at 11 Downing Street, though that was his official residence. It is a big and expensive house to keep up, and even Ministers in these days feel the pressure of gigantic taxation. He has a little flat in Victoria street, close by. He now goes, of course to 10 Downing street—which has been occupied by the majority of Premiers, there have been few exceptions, since it was given as a present to the Government in the Eighteenth Century. The two houses are pretty much the same; they are of the good old Georgian architecture—very solid and very simple, utterly devoid of the new architecural developments which have been introduced in the last half century. For instance, just opposite to these two houses and a third—No. 12, which is occupied by the Whips—there are the great buildings which belong to the Foreign and the India Office. These abiding places of high departments are Byzantine in size and in adornment, with turrets and bows on the face and all the gradiose exaggestion of the great Empire. This juxtaposition brings into greater relief the simple, comfortable, roomy, old-fashioned character of the official residences of the two highest Ministers.

RECOUNT CONFIRMS ELECTION OF J. H. SMITH TO COUNCIL

Judge Huycke Counted the Ballots This Morning and Found that Former Returns Were Correct—Majority of Four Votes for Mr. Smith Sustained.

THE VOTE RETABULATED

Judge Huycke's recount of the ballots in the East City aldermanic contest confirmed the final totals announced on New Year's night, giving Mr. John H. Smith a majority of four votes over Ald. George Evans. The returns were as follows:

	Evans	Smith
Swanson's House	65	48
Hill's shop	50	59
Coon's store	34	46
	149	153

The ballot boxes were opened by Judge Huycke in the presence of City Clerk Armstrong, Mr. Smith and his solicitor, Mr. F. D. Kerr, and Mr. Evans and his solicitor, Mr. W. H. Moore. The Judge counted the ballots, found that everything was in order and certified accordingly. Mr. Evans pays the cost of the count.

NEWS PAPER STAFFS ARE SUBPOENAED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Subpoenaes were ordered issued for the entire Washington staff of the Wall Street Journal and Financial American to-day by the House Rules committee when it resumed its probe of the peace note leak to Wall Street.

Opening of the Royal Bank

New Building at the Corner of Geo. and Hunter Street Was Opened This Morning

The new, splendidly equipped quarters of the Royal Bank at the corner of George and Hunter streets, were opened this morning. The transfer from the old quarters on Hunter street adjoining the Bank of Commerce, was made between the Bank's closing hour yesterday afternoon and the opening, this morning. Last evening Mr. V. Eastwood, manager of the bank, and his staff had a busy session rearranging the fittings as they were moved from the old building to the new. The new structure is not quite complete, but the remaining portion of the work will not interfere with the transaction of business. It will be a matter of several days before the work is finally completed. The new building presents an imposing appearance, and will provide ample facilities for the ever-growing business of the Royal Bank.

CAMPBELLFORD CALLS A GUELPH MINISTER

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 6.—St. Andrews' Presbyterian church here has extended an unanimous call to Rev. C. F. McIntosh, B.A., of St. Paul's Church, Guelph. The Presbytery of Peterborough will deal with the call at a special meeting in Peterborough in the near future.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JAN. 6, 1917

MR. CHAIRMAN EASTWOOD.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, himself, the Board of Education and the citizens of Peterborough are to be congratulated upon his being unanimously elected to the honourable and responsible position of the presidency of the Board of Education. He has been for many years an active and intelligent member; has given good service, and will no doubt continue to do so in the new position he occupies. He has also for many years been active in the many important relations of citizenship. Mr. Eastwood's New Year's honours happily synchronize — his elevation to the chairmanship of the School Board coming very aptly with his occupation of the palatial new premises of the Royal Bank, of which he is the city manager. The Examiner joins with the citizens generally in wishing the greatest success in both capacities.

INTRIGUE AND PARTIZANSHIP.

British society is shocked by the revelations of feminine influence in British army appointments. As society was constituted before the war and, to a certain extent, is yet, it was bound to do something to create scandal for, as to certain phases and elements, scandal, to a greater or less extent, is the outcome of its existence. Idle, aimless, empty lives, especially as contrasted with the situation of this war, recoil upon themselves, and there must be some variation of the tittle-tattle, lap-dog existence of those who give themselves up to the strenuosities of avoiding boredom. Society, contrasted with the idea of usefulness in the national life, is at all times an intrusive element, and especially so at this time of war, when national safety, national interests, call for everybody to do something; call upon everybody to appreciate things as they are. Society, in its exaggerated form, tends to sap the life of the nation and develop and encourage the luxury of idleness and aimlessness that laid Rome low. Society, with nothing useful to do, naturally works the mischief that Satan provides for idle hands. We cannot wonder that it tried its hand in influencing appointments in the British army. But it is to the credit of the temper of the time, that its evil work got the reproof that it deserved. Society, as represented by one of its votaries, was talked to as if it had been a useful, loyal member of the community, who had forgotten duty. But in the perverted influence of society a greater evil in the regard of influencing appointments upon which a measure of military success, and the lives and limbs of thousands depend, a more evil thing than the political influence that interferes, and far more extensively, in the same way? Is there any reason to doubt that political influences and worse than they, partisan influences, have been factors in military and other appointments in Canada? If there is anything in the report of conditions in the medical service of Canada, there is need for subordinating all other considerations to efficient provision for the best treatment of Canadian soldiers in the hospitals. If it is true that some medical men who have received, and hold, appointments, are addicted to drugs and drink, should they not be replaced by sober, serious men, no matter what political or party influence they possess? Three years of war have developed only one society intermediary; but the canker of political influence, partisan favouritism, has not only impaired a good deal of Canadian efficiency in waging war, but has exercised a depressing influence upon the spirit of sacrifice and service of the people. Petticoat influence may have done some harm, but it is offset and extinguished by the splendid performance of petticoat citizenship, and is as nothing to the existence of partisanship in the administration of our war obligations.

CANADA'S NAVAL DEFENCE.

The true national policy for Canada in this time of struggle and test, is a supreme matter, even though it does involve considerations of party attitude. It is too big a thing to be made subject to anything of the kind, except in relation to the right point of view. A letter published a day or two ago from a member of the crew of H.M.S. Niobe, emphasizes the need of more energetic action in providing for the naval defence of Canada's shores.

It points out that the wreck of the Government steamer Grilse, showed that Canada has the right type of men, such as those that composed her crew, and also showed the unthinking character of the Government's policy in sending capable men to sea in crazy, make-shift crafts that cannot stand a capful of wind. It also shows that adequate measures have not been taken to provide for the sea defence of Canada's shores. Ample time has elapsed since the war began to provide something more adequate in the way of naval defence, Canada's shores, as far as her own ships are concerned, are practically undefended. If the Government, when the war broke out, had taken steps to purchase some speedy, staunch destroyers, and light cruisers, this defect would have been remedied in large part. The Borden Government takes refuge for inaction in this regard in deploring its inability to place three Dreadnoughts in the British navy. This is a lame excuse. Three Dreadnoughts, without crews or equipment, presented to Britain, would be of practically no direct service in meeting the urgent necessity, the naval defence of Canada's shores. We are helpless in the case, that is possible, of German submarines and commerce destroyers, appearing off our coasts, menacing our trade and our towns. What is needed is destroyers and light cruisers. These would be able to cope with any menace that might arise. Even the Rainbow, of the "tin-pot" Laurier navy, has justified itself during the war; and what would have been the condition if the Laurier naval act that provided for cruisers and other ships of the very class that is now needed for Canada's costal defence, had not been abandoned—bartered for Nationalist support? The proof is abundant that the Laurier naval policy was the true and manly way of meeting the situation—Canada meeting the demands of her own defence by her own action—our own navy, and manning her own ships with our own seamen.

The offer of 35 million dollars to build Dreadnoughts for the British navy was as futile—in regard to Canada's home defence as would have been in regard to repelling invasion of our territory and meeting our obligations of self help and self-respect—the sending of money to raise and equip two or three divisions in the regular army. Our furnishing our own soldiers for the defence of the Empire, and incidentally for our own defence, is the logical authority for building our own ships, manned by our own sailors, for the defence of the Empire, and incidentally and directly for our own home defence. If we expect to deserve the respect of the rest of the Empire, and the world, we must deserve our own self respect as an integral, autonomous, self-governing, self-defending, service-sharing unit of the great Imperial family.

THE PEOPLE MUST WIN.

The essence of the Hydro-Electric form of public ownership is the supremacy of the right of possession and control by the municipalities. It is popular ownership, not Government ownership in any sense. The extent of the Government's interest consists in a mere matter of financing—guarantees of the bonds assumed by the groups of municipalities. The people concerned are strong on assertion of the principle of ownership and control. All over the western part of the province the overwhelming majorities given in favour of the bylaws submitted emphasized resentment of Government interference and assumption of ownership. This almost unanimous vote of the municipalities is regarded as a notice to the Government that the legislation passed at last session arrogating, or reserving to the Government, the ownership of the new generating plant to be erected at Queenston, must be repealed.

There is no party politics in the Hydro-Electric, except what the Government has forced into it. The enemies of public ownership in the Government, at the last session, embodied in the power development bill provision for Government ownership and retention of control. This the municipalities resented. Mr. W. J. Lyon, a strong Conservative, protested against making the Hydro-Electric a Government "machine." The Liberals supported the protest of the municipalities and introduced and voted for an amendment providing that the municipalities be given permission to acquire the ownership of the power development at Niagara, on conditions similar to those upon which they are acquiring ownership of the transmission lines and distributing system. Mr. Rowell and all the Liberal members voted for this amendment, and all the members of the Government, except Premier Hearst, who was absent, and the majority of the Conservative supporters of the Government, voted against it, and for the Bill taking away the ownership by the municipalities of the proposed development work.

The popular vote on Monday shows that the electors of the municipalities have taken Premier Hearst at his suggestion. After the Legislature adjourned he was alarmed at the violence of popular protest, and promised that if the people would show by their votes that they wished to own the development works, on the same terms upon which they owned the transmission lines of the Hydro-Electric, the Act would be amended as to provide for municipal ownership. He has his answer in no mistakable terms. He will be compelled to act. While there should be no party politics in the Hydro enterprises, there would have been none in this case if the Conservatives represented by the Government in antagonizing public interests and wishes, had not compelled the Liberals to champion the popular cause. The majority of the Government members in their attempt to "play politics" with the Hydro-Electric, the Act would be so amended as to opinion, to act on Premier Hearst's pledge, and, incidentally, adopt the policy of the Liberals of the Legislature in the Hydro-Electric matter, as they were forced to do by public opinion in the matter of prohibitary legislation.

CANADA'S PRE-EMINENT NICHE IN THE MATTER OF NICKEL RESOURCES

During the last three years nickel has become a material of international interest, since the nations now at war realize that the side that could have controlled the world's production of this remarkable metal could before this date have won the war, or perhaps have stopped it in its pre-natal stage. Canadians are beginning to learn the importance of nickel in the scientific and industrial progress of this country, since there is not a single purpose to which it can be put in the dread business of war that cannot be applied in the industries of peace.

In the eighties of last century when the nickel-copper ores of the Sudbury district of Ontario were first disclosed by the picks and shovels of the construction gangs of the C.P.R., scientists were just beginning to demonstrate some of the new practical uses of the metal, but the supply was always short of the demand—an observation that applies to-day, notwithstanding the enormous increase in the output.

MONOPOLY OF SUPPLY IN CANADA.

No one knows what nickel deposits remain to be discovered, but the present situation is that there are no known mines that seriously compete with Canada in extent. It was in 1889 that nickel first appeared as a separate article of Canada's exports with over a third of the estimated production of the world. The chief nickel mines were in Germany, Norway, Sweden, and the United States. When Germany and the United States adopted nickel for coinage the price went up, and in the seventies it sold at $6 to $7 a pound. New Caledonia, the French penal colony in the South Pacific, then came into prominence, but the output of these mines has been fitful owing to the cost of separating the metal from the clay in which it is found, and to the patchy nature of the deposits, which for a number of years have yielded only 2,000 to 4,000 tons of pure metal of late the output being nearer the first-named amount. (It was 2,263 tons in 1912.) For some years no ore has been raised from the United States nickel mines the only domestic nickel produced there being about 250 tons, recovered from the "blister" copper ores. The deposits of Norway, which were out of business when war was declared, have produced from 240 to 600 tons annually since the war. There are deposits in the Ural mountains in Russia, which are said to be producing 600 tons a year, and there are deposits in Australia and South Africa producing a few tons each in 1916.

HISTORY OF PRODUCTION.

The accompanying table shows the eminence Canada has achieved as a nickel-producing country. The estimate of the production of 1916 is based on the record of actual exports for the nine months of the calendar year:

NICKEL PRODUCTION IN CANADA AND THE WORLD.

	Canada Tons	The World Tons
1840-60	.....	200
1860-70	.....	400
1889	415	1,500
1890	718	2,000
1894	2,453	5,000
1902	5,346	8,600
1906	10,776	14,300
1910	18,636	21,000
1914	22,759	30,000
1915	34,039	37,000
1916	42,500	46,500

With the exception of a small quantity refined at Thorold, all the nickel mined in Ontario is shipped abroad as "matte," containing the copper with the nickel, and the next stage in the industry will be to establish refineries in Canada which will carry the process of manufacturing in all their ramifications to the finished articles. The most interesting development in this branch is the acquisition of the properties of the Canadian Nickel Corporation, including the Murray mine, by the British America Nickel Company, which will establish both smelters and refineries in Ontario. The new company has a ten-year contract from the Imperial Government for a large quantity of nickel, but the important feature of their operations will be the use in Canada of the refining process worked out by V. Hybenette, and in successful use at Kristiansand, Norway, for the last six years. By this nickel is refined to a purity of 98.70 per cent., and at a cost of about 18 cents a pound the metal selling at 40 cents to 45 cents per pound. It is expected that these works will be in operation within a year, and the effect will be to establish the nickel industry for the first time on a Canadian foundation.—Globe Financial Survey.

WINTER WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Our Canadian winters are extremely hard on the health of little ones. The weather is often so severe that the mother cannot take the little one out for an airing. The consequence is that baby is confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms; takes colds and becomes cross and peevish. Baby's Own Tablets should be given to keep the little one healthy. They regulate the stomach and bowels and prevent or cure colds. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

"Miss M. A. Storey came to her death from shock and hemorrhage, caused by having her legs amputated while stepping from a G.T.R. train in motion."

UXBRIDGE, Jan. 6.—The above was the substance of the verdict found by the Coroner's jury inquiring into the death of Miss Storey, who died on Tuesday, Dec. 26th, as a result of having both limbs amputated when she fell from the steps of the moving train while endeavouring to disembark, on the same day as her death.

The inquest opened on Friday morning, and although only some six witnesses were examined, the case was not closed until 7 o'clock in the evening. Coroner Dr. Darling of Goodwood, presided; Crown Attorney Farewell examined the witnesses for the crown, while the company's interests were looked after by a Grand Trunk lawyer from Montreal, and Dr. Shier, G.T.R. physician. W. S. Ormiston was present on behalf of the relatives of the deceased.

The examination of Conductor Buller and his brakeman occupied the greater part of the day, while Thos. Harsell, A. J. Gould and Sam Smocku who witnessed the accident told what they saw. A. M. St. John, the local agent, was also examined, but from all these witnesses nothing new was added to the story told in a recent issue of The Warder. Witnesses connected with the family were examined.

Certain information was adduced to show that the conductor and his brakeman handled 700 passengers from Port Hope to Uxbridge on the train in question, which information caused the jury to add a rider to the verdict, recommending that the company carry a larger train crew when such large trains are operated, or use more efficient means to prevent passengers from boarding a train before all who wish to get off do so.

The jury was not long in coming to the verdict of accidental death. They also complimented the brakeman for his prompt action in stopping the train.

Miss Storey, it will be remembered, was returning home to Uxbridge after visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Beal, Lindsay.

All Must Sign Service Cards Board Is Told

The answering of the twenty-four questions on the National Service cards is obligatory, not voluntary, according to official information received yesterday. In a communication to the council which has been asked by Mr. R. B. Bennett, M.P., Director General of National Service, to assist in every way possible towards helping the Government to ascertain the man power of the Dominion, the secretary of the National Service Board states that apart from the fact that the filling in of the cards is obligatory, strong appeals have been made to all classes to comply with the request of the Government and that hope is entertained that the steps taken will be reasonably effective.

French Soldier Stricken With a Strange Lethargy in Marne Battle.

BORDEAUX, Jan 5. — The odd case of a man, 31 years old, who has been in a state of lethargy for twenty-seven months, has been described to the Medical and Surgical Society by Professor Verger. The patient was among the troops mobilized for the battle of the Marne. He disappeared, but was found soon afterward in Brittany, since which time he has been sleeping, eyelids closed, respiration regular, but pulse rapid. He is sensitive to excitement, such stimulation provoking a weak defense without, however, interrupting his sleep, and it is possible to administer liquid food.

Professor Verger concludes that the case is one of hysterical lethargy, and that it is likely the man will eventually awake.

Why do You ask Us for so Much Money

— FOR THE —

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND?

This question is often asked, by persons and by municipal councils, when the matter of liberal giving to the Fund is brought before them.

They are entitled to the most complete answer, for the Fund is the people's. They created it, and it is they who must maintain it.

Now for the reasons. There are 149,230 of them.

The Fund asks for so much money because Canada has given her men so lavishly to the Great Cause. Between 300,000 and 400,000 have volunteered. If their families need help, this Fund provides it. In October 53,693 families did need it. These families comprised 149,230 persons nearly all either mothers, wives or children. Is it any wonder that so Great a need requires so Great a Fund?

THE CANADIAN SOLDIER'S WIFE

Her husband is fighting for us, so that we may live in peace, comfort and security at home. Are we going to let his loved ones want?

HOW GREAT IS THE NEED OF MONEY?

The sum expended in October, 1916, was.....	$891,814.00
The average payment to each family was.....	16.29
The average payment to each person was	5.73
The cost of administration was.....	15,464.00

(In above averages, sums paid for broken periods not included.)

Pay special attention to the figures concerning cost of administration—including expense of campaigns for raising money. It is the ambition of the managers of the Fund to keep the cost of raising and disbursing it below that of any voluntary fund ever created in Canada. Their aim is to hand to the soldiers' families as nearly as possible one hundred cents for every dollar subscribed. They succeed in handing 99⅓ cents. The sum received in October as interest on moneys in banks was about $11,500. Take this from the cost of administration. The remainder is $4,000. And that, therefore, is all that had to be deducted from sums paid in.

That is to say, of every $100 subscribed and paid out from the inauguration of the Fund to Oct. 30, 1916, $99.46 reached the families.

Is not that economy which should give confidence to every subscriber?

Does the magnitude of the Fund, as well as its importance, begin to impress you, Mr. Citizen-who-is-being-asked-to-subscribe-$100, or you, Gentlemen of the Municipal Council, who are being urged to vote $100,000 for 1917? Does the REQUEST look as large as it did now that you know something more of the NEED?

Since the war began the people of Canada have subscribed to this Fund.....	$16,495,000
For 1917 they will be asked to give—and will give.....	12,500,000
Of this sum Ontario is being asked to guarantee—and will guarantee—at least.....	6,000,000

This is one million more than in 1916, but every dollar will be required for Ontario's families. Not much chance for individuals or counties to economize by cutting down their contributions, is there? On the contrary, the giving must be on a scale more generous than ever. And why not? If we can't FIGHT, isn't it a Privilege rather than an obligation to PAY?

One Word More:

No man should ignore his personal responsibility towards the families of those who are fighting for him, simply because his Municipal Council is taxing him slightly for the same object. He owes these people far more. Perhaps he is too poor to pay more. If not, it is up to him to give a generous cheque to his local Patriotic Fund Committee, or mail it to

Keep Mohmand's Back With Electric Wire

How Britain Deals With the Bad Tribesmen of Northern India

Peshawar, Northwest Frontier Province, India.—The Mohmands, a nominally independent and ever-turbulent tribe whose country borders on administered British territory in this region, having made themselves generally objectionable during the past few months, have come in for considerable attention at the hands of the British recently. The latest phase of the punishment being meted out occurred to-day, when thousands of troops engaged in a drive which resulted in the rounding up for internment of 400 Mohmands who were scattered about in villages just inside the Provincial domains.

The Mohmands have always been among the most troublesome of the tribesmen living in the independent territory between the northwest frontier provinces and Afghanistan. A year ago they made raids and committed murder in the Peshawar district. As a penalty they were forbidden to enter the province to trade. Angered by this they began to threaten war, and several fights actually did take place.

PLACE WIRE ENTANGLEMENTS

At this time there were large numbers of Mohmands living in British territory. After the declaration of hostilities by their brothers at home most of these Government guests were sent across the border. Sir George Roos-Keppel, Chief Commissioner for the northwest frontier province, then put up along the Mohmands border a line of barbed wire entanglements, intersected with strongly-guarded blockhouses. The Government of India at the same time imported a number of airplanes, the first ever seen in this part of the world, and manned them with experienced aviators from the western theatre of war.

For a time these new methods of warfare puzzled and worried the Mohmands and they kept to their hills, but recently they became more bold, and under cover of night succeeded in cutting the barbed wire at one or two places and committing small thefts. Then it was that Sir George Roos-Keppel played his trump card by ordering the installation of a live wire, which has been slung along the whole Mohmands frontier, a distance of about seventeen miles. The fact that this wire carries 4,500 volts and means instant death to anyone touching it has become known to the tribesmen, and at present they are contending themselves with holding pow wows in the mountains and making threats.

GIRL'S ROMANCE ENDS IN COURT

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—After several persons had appeared in the Yorkville Court to press charges against R. L. Peterson, living at the Marseilles Hotel, Magistrate Krotel turned the prisoner over to federal officers on the charge of having jumped his bail while awaiting trial on the charge of representing himself as a naval officer.

Peterson was accused of having represented himself to George W. Middleton, a silk merchant, as Lieutenant Beck, and soliciting a subscription of $100 for a naval home for tubercular sufferers.

As Mrs. Mary Meyers, of No. 630 Rogers avenue, Brooklyn, entered the court room to identify the prisoner she saw a slender girl, heavily veiled, arise in another part of the room and wave to the prisoner. She exclaimed, "That's my daughter!" and in a moment they had embraced and were crying together.

It was explained to the Magistrate that the girl, Lillian Meyers, had left her home several weeks ago and had been sought by her mother.

As Peterson passed Miss Meyers on his way from the court, when he had been turned over to the federal officers, he threw a kiss in her direction.

"Don't you dare throw a kiss to me, you wretch," she said, and Mrs. Meyers ran at Peterson, shouting, "Let me get my hands on him!"

The prisoner was taken to the Federal Building, wher he was held in $10,000 bail by Commissioner Houghton.

MRS. SHERRY'S RECITAL

Peterborough music lovers greeted Mrs. Helen Davies Sherry with an affectionate welcome last night in her recital at St. Paul's church under the auspices of Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. The occasion approximated a happy reunion illustrating the cherished truth that absence makes the heart grow fonder. And while the audience ardently manifested its delight in the renewal of a former pleasure and appreciation, Mrs. Sherry left no doubt that the cordial sentiment was mutual. With a few incidental changes dissolved in memory, last night's recital recalled the potent charm of voice and personality Miss Helen Davies exercised over her audience in those near yesterdays, a charm that subtly seised those who heard Mrs. Sherry last night. But the illusion passed not only in the realities of the present but in the realisation of the richer tones and deeper feeling in Mrs. Sherry's voice. Ranging from misty, velvety contralto to ringing, sparkling soprano its qualities were always appealing and its use notably effective. To variety of pitch and timbre was added an impressive responsiveness to changes of mood, and clear, carrying resonance with tonal exactness, characterised the lighter as well as the forte passages. In short it was a most satisfying recital reassuring, too, in the fact that former promise and fulfillment had been crowned by qualities that enriched their effect and accentuated their possession.

Mrs. Sherry's first number "Hear Ye Israel" from Elijah provided an expressive contrast to Greig's "With a Violet" and the same was true of the double number "Songs my Mother Taught Me," tender and reposeful, and the stirring "O Sea."

Mrs. Sherry was assisted by Miss Laura Logan, violinist and Mr. John Allan, solo organist, whose numbers completed the satisfaction the programme contributed. Miss Logan's "Legende" by Boehm was particularly good "The Romance" by Saint Saens played by Mr. Allan showed a fine appreciation of its melody. He also played the accompaniments for Mrs. Sherry and Miss Logan was accompanied by her mother.

The programme was as follows:

Organ Solo, Overture (Occasional Oratorio)—Handel.

Aria—Hear Ye Israel, (Elijah)—Mendelssohn.

Violin Solo—Legende—Boehm.

Organ Solo—Romance (Samson et Dalila)—Saint Saens.

VOCAL

(a) Mey Little Darling—Gomes.
(b) With a Violet—Greig.
(c) Two Brown Eyes—Greig.
(d) The Lark Now Leaves—Parker.

VIOLIN.

(a) Melody For G String—Friml.
(b) Reseda—Friml.

Organ Solo—Marche Militaire—Gounod.

VOCAL.

(a) Songs My Mother Taught Me—Dvorak.
(b) O Sea—Delibes.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Mrs. Sherry's encore numbers were: "'Tis the Hour of Farewell," by Lehman, and "Heigh Ho the Sunshine."

A Stock-Reduction Sale And The Reason Why

It Means a Great Deal to Oak Hall Managers to Have Their Stocks in Hand

In an advertisement of the Oak Hall Store in to-day's Examiner, a reason is given why a January sale this year need not be put on, and another reason is given why it is. Both are straightforward statements.

The first stated that the firm of W. E. Sanford & Co'y, who manufacture Oak Hall clothing and control Oak Hall stores, are not in need of money, and from their standpoint need not put on a sale, is undoubtedly correct.

But there is a reason for the sale and it is this. Oak Hall managers receive certain bonuses for certain accomplishments. One of these accomplishments is to have as light a stock as possible at the end of the fiscal year. This is for the purpose of carrying over as small a quantity of unseasonable goods as possible. While Oak Hall sales the past year have been away above anything in its history, purchases of stock have also been heavy and run into money faster than heretofore, consequently it was an easy matter to carry more stock, together with the temptation to buy knowing the market was going up in all lines of goods.

A merchant does not make money unless he turns over his stock, and a large part of the Oak Hall stock will be turned over at prices that are less than are now being asked by the manufacturers for the same goods for next fall and winter. However, the advantage will be with the buyer at the present time and next winter will have to be taken care of as occasion arises.

Mr. M. J. Maher, manager; advises the public to go seriously into the figures given at the Oak Hall Store during the January sale.

Maj., Chaplain, Davidson Now in France

A personal letter received from Major (Chaplain J. C. Davidson, says he is in France near the lines, with the unit formerly at the Island of Lemnos, in the Aegean sea. It is mentioned that Mrs. Douglas, "Nurse Douglas," of Peterborough, was with the unit at Lemnos and Bolougne till it moved a month ago. The letter speaks of the cheer and welcome given by and to the little boxes received from home—"a taste of home life." Mr. Davidson's new address is:

THE FAIR DIRECTORS IN A QUANDARY

The Annual Meeting to Be Held on January the 20th Will Decide 1917 Show—Lease Has Expired

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Industrial Exhibition is called for the 20th of this month, and just what the outcome will be regarding the continuance of the Fair it is hard to say. The option to purchase the present property expired the first of the year, and the prospect of permanent quarters appears farther away than ever. A number of the directors have been on the Board for a considerable length of time, have worked faithfully for the success of the Fair believing it was a good thing for the city and the surrounding country and always had in view permanent grounds and a longer Fair, opening on a Monday and closing on Saturday, giving four solid Fair days at least.

It may not be generally known, but the Peterborough Exhibition is one of the best of the smaller city shows, the trouble is that its buildings (the few it has), detract from the worth of the exhibits, and it takes greater effort and expense to give an exhibition that will attract the crowds than in smaller and less advantageous centres.

With the present equipment, the Directors have been gratified each year with the results obtained, from the standpoints of attendance and receipts from all sources, and they have every reason to feel sure that the general public has been pleased with the exhibits and the entertainments, and the exhibitors with the prize list, which is a very well balanced one.

The Directors feel that it would not be in the interests of this city and district if the Exhibition was discontinued, but they also feel that it is a waste of energy to carry on a Fair year after year on leased grounds, where no permanent improvements can be made. However, the annual meeting will decide a lot, and the situation, so far as 1917 is concerned, may result in the Fair being held in the present grounds in the hope that a solution, so far as permanent grounds is concerned, will be worked out satisfatcorily before the end of the year.

The President, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Mr. Roland Denne, ex-President, J. H. Garbutt and others, both on and off the Board, have put forward good propositions that would altogether likely have materialized any other time but war time.

There is a vacancy on the Board through the death of the late J. J. Turner, Sr.

ROUMANIAN PICTURES

Gipsy Settlements and Harvest Scenes

(By the Queen of Roumania)

Artilge 3.

(By the Queen of Roumania.)

More lovely than the monks of which Thane spoke are the Roumanian shepherds, who spend whole months alone with their dogs upon desolate mountain tops. Theirs are the limited horizons, the shifting clouds, the silence and the sunsets, the sunrise and the mountain flowers, the storm and the rain, and the days of impenetrable mist. They wear enormous sheepskin mantles and are almost as unkempt as their dogs. Wherein I have met them they have seemed the lonely personification of solitude.

There is a wandering people known in every land—a people surrounded by mystery. Wherein they stray, the gipsies are looked upon with distrust and suspicion; they are known by their dark faces and flashing teeth, which attract and repulse. There is a nameless charm about them; yet aliens wherever they go, every man's hand is against them; nowhere are they welcome, ever must they move on—homeless, despised and restless.

Yet there is a place in Roumania where those gipsies have settled down on the outskirts of villages and towns. There, in the midst of indescribable filth and disorder they are massed together in tumbled-down huts and dugouts, half-naked, surrounded by squabbling children and savage dogs. Their hovels are covered with old tins, broken boards, rags, clods of earth, torn stripe of carpet; no words can render the squalor in which they swarm. More picturesque are the gipsy camps, pitched in all sorts of places—on large pastures on the edge of streams, sometimes on islands in the midst of riverbeds, or on the border of woods. Along the road they come, in delapidated carts, drawn by lean, half-starved horses, mules or donkeys. With an indescribable jumble of poles, carpets, tent covers, pots, pans and other implements whole families—mothers, children, old grannies, and greybeards—they stop where they can or where they must. With much noise and strife the tent poles are fixed into the ground, discoloured rags are spread over them each family erecting the roof beneath which it will shelter.

Many and many a time have I roamed about amidst the tents of these jabbering hordes, beset by hundreds of brown hands asking for pennies, surrounded by dark faces with brilliant eyes and snow-white teeth. Half-cringing, half haughty, they would demand money, laughing and shrugging their shoulders, fingering my clothes, slipping my fingers into my pockets. On going back they have nearly pulled me from the saddle, overwhelming one with strange blessings. One wish that they cried after me was the wish of "good luck" to my horse. Being nomads they appreciate a good mount.

These people at all ages are inconceivably picturesque. I have seen old hags crouching beneath their tents, tending open steaming pots, wrapped in faded rags and with gaudy bands of shawl wound turbine wise round their heads. Generally a white-clay pipe was stuck in the corner of their mouths.

These old crones are the respected counsellors of the tribes. Their loud curses call the young ones to order, and throw a certain awe amongst the rowdy, quarreling, half-naked children, little savages the colour of the earth.

Most beautiful of all are the young girls; upright, well grown, with narrow hips and delicate hands and feet. Whatever rag they twist about their graceful limbs turns into a becoming apparel. They will deck themselves with any discarded finery they may pick up by the way. Sometimes valuable old pieces of embroidery will and their days upon the bodies of these attractive creatures, enhancing their charm, giving them the air of beggared queens.

Ont art above all others belongs to the gipsies; they are born musicians, and the violin is their instrument. Some are musicians by professions. In groups of three and four they will wander from village to village to play at marriages and funerals or on feast days.

They have also strange shaped lutes, and a flute composed of several reeds. The wandering minstrels adopt hideous old clothes that others have cast off and look infinitely more mean looking in this accoutrement. But their music is both sweet and melancholy, strident and weird; there is longing in every note and the gayer the tunes the more is one inclined to weep.

In towns the gypsies are employed as masons; one finds them in groups wherever a house is being built; men, women and children bringing with them their disorder and filth. In the month of lilies handsome gipsy girls wander through the streets carrying wooden vessels filled with snow-white flowers.

The season of harvest shows Roumania in all her glory. The earth having given her utmost, man woman and child go forth to the fields. Sometimes, rain, hail or drought undoes man's work. I have known months at a time when no drop of rain has fallen, months of straining anxiety and hopeless waiting. The rivers had no more water; dust covered all things as with a shroud.

But grand indeed are the years of plenty. In oceans of ripe gold the corn lies beneath the immense face of the sun. In groups the peasants work from early dawn to sunset, unabashed by the pulsing heat. Midday gathers them round their carts for frugal repast of polenta and onions. Dogs guard the carts, beneath the shade of which vehicles, the labourers take a short hour's rest alongside of their grey bullocks. Only on rich estates is machinery used, and then mostly for threshing the corn; nearly all the cutting is done by hand. At sunset the peasants return home, their scythes over their shoulders. Along the roads the carts drawl in a haze of dust, and on still evenings the dust remains suspended in the air, enveloping the dying day in a haze of mystery, or set aflame by the sinking sun.

The maize harvest comes later in the year; sometimes in October the peasants are still gathering the ripe fruit. Nothing is more glorious than the Roumanian autumn. The sky becomes intensely blue; all the stands up against it appear to acquire a new value. The trees dress themselves in wondrous colours — golden, russet, flaming red. Amongst the man-high maize plants giant sun flowers bend their heads; like prodigious stars their saffron petals shine against the azure vault. Beneath the shade of these giant plants peasants, seated in circles round piles of maize ,separate the fruit from the leaves. A pretty sight also are the peasants met either in large barns or court yards to unsheathe the grain of maize from its cob.

Laughter and work mingle joyously, long yarns are told and love songs are sung. The old gipsy "Lautar" or wandering minstrel, is sure to come limping along, a shabby, disreputable, sordid figure, but his music makes all hearts laugh or dance or weep."

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Mystery in Death Of Former McGill Man in Boston

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 6.—A sensation has been caused in university and police circles here by the strange death of Alphonse Gomez, of the Boston Technical School, and formerly, it is said, of McGill University, Montreal. Gomez was found in his room in a semi-conscious condition, by a fellow student, and before medical assistance could be called he died. There is a rumour that the dead student's mind had become deranged through overstudy and that he took his own life, but the police are not fully satisfied that this theory is correct and are working on the case.

The student's home was in Medellis, Colombia. He lived while in Boston in the same house with two other Tech students who came from Colombia.

According to the authorities at Tech, Gomez was found ill in his room by one of his classmates. A physician was summoned, but the student was dead before he arrived.

Gomez's body is at the morgue awaiting advice from relatives. It is said that he has relatives living in New York. His father, however, lives in Medellis, Colombia, and is said to be wealthy.

Gomez was studying chemical engineering. He entered the institution in September, 1915. He was rated as a sophomore during his first year at Tech, as he had previously completed a year of study in the engineering school at McGill University.

Gomez was a member of several club lift at Tech. He was elected president of the Latin-American Club. He was also a member of the Cosmopolitan Club of Tech, which is one of the social organizations connected with that institution.

THE CONCLUDING MEETING OF THE WEEK OF PRAYER HELD IN TRINITY CHURCH

There Was a Large Attendance and a Deep Interest Was Manifested in the Meeting—A Stirring and Inspiring Address Was Given by the Rev. Robert Pogue, Pastor of St. Paul's Church—After the War Problems—The Doctrine of Immortality.

The concluding meeting in connection with the week of prayer was held last evening in Trinity Church. The attendance, as it has been every night of the week, was large, and the interest deep. The Ministerial Association made a wise choice of subjects. They fixed the minds of the people upon the war, and guided them in their prayers to pray for those things, which ought to be the burden of all our petitions until the war is over. The Rev. R. Pogue of St. Paul's Church was the speaker at last night's meeting. His subject was "Our Preparedness for After the War." He referred to the changes of a moral, social and religious character which are sure to take place, and are even now taking place, as a result of the war, changes which will emerge in a new order after the confusion. Great changes have already taken place in the thought, life, outlook and ideals of the people. Already they are turning to the churches to see what word of light, guidance and comfort they can speak. They have come to see the meanness and smallness of life as once they lived it, that life is not to be an idle thing of pleasure or frivolity or self-aggrandizement, but a sacred gift surcharged with the deepest meaning, a gift to be used for God and the social well-being in sacrifice and service.

After War Problems.

The speaker referred to several of the problems which will confront us at the close of the war, principally in connection with the return of the soldiers. The darker side was first touched upon. Many of our soldiers will return just as they went away without religion, and without God, with less regard for the Sabbath and things sacred than they had before. Some of them will come home the slaves of drink. And some too, will come home bringing with them the seeds of vice and disease contracted in the old land. We ought as churches, as Christian men and as physicians, be getting ready to deal with this genuine menace to our national life, and to the health of our women and the unborn children of coming generations.

The Brighter Side.

That is the darker side. The brighter side is that the vast majority who come home will come home with new thoughts and experiences on the subject of religion. Many are finding Christ in the trenches who failed to find Him in our churches. They will wish to belong to the church when they return. The church must create an atmosphere in which they will feel at home. She must seek a deeper spiritual experience if she is to be on a par with these men to whom God has become real. She must seek a deeper prayer life, for the men at the front are learning to pray. Will they find an atmosphere of prayer among the men of our churches when they come back?

The Border Lines.

They will come home with the feeling wrought into a conviction that our denominational rivalries are unholy and must stop. These men are standing side by side in the trenches. They are singing the same hymns. They are getting a new sense of the value of things, of what is essential and what is non-essential. They are singing the same hymns, and worshipping the same God and Father of us all. When they come home they will rebel against the denominational barriers that separate them as disciples of Christ, and they will bring home with them such a spirit of unity as will seek to efface the border lines which have separated us, and which mean so little at the front. We ought to be getting ready to take a great forward step in the union of all branches of the Church of Christ. The man who does not feel in his very bones this new spirit of union that is abroad in the world to-day is incapable of interpreting aright the spirit of the times in which he lives, and incapable also of hearing the Divine voice when it speaks. If ever God spoke to the churches and bade them forget their petty rivalries and cease calling prejudices principles, cease working more as battalions in opposing armies, it is to-day. God is saying to us, "Get together, stand together, and fight together for one great object of overcoming the Kingdom of darkness."

Immortality.

The speaker referred also to the questions which our people and soldiers are asking on the doctrine of immortality, and asked if church members could give the answer of the New Testament on this doctrine. All the light we need is found there. They will also come home with new ideals of life and heroism, and the church must be ready to give them something to do which will be the moral equivalent of war, something which the church ought to stand. energies, and will call out their highest heroism. Our soldiers will have little use for the kind of life many of us lived before the war. A young officer returned from the front found his mother playing at bridge and complaining that the war had interferred with the social engagements of her circle. The young officer, in almost indignant protest, said: "Mother, how con you talk like that? I have learned out there that there is only one thing that really matters, and that is God." We shall have many men of that type return, men who have been hardened in the fierceness of conflict to recognize the ultimate realities, men of conviction, of moral earnestness, of the heroic, rather than the drawing-room type. The church ought to be preparing herself so as to be able to stand on the same high level with these men, and to use them in doing the heroic things that they will wish to do, and for which the church to stand.

How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition, especially in the present day when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you should happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, do not try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one pound a day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in the original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00, by money order, or registered letter. Stamps will be sent in plain wrapper. Address D. J. Kittle Drug Co., Box 2000, Montreal, Canada.

SPLENDID ADDRESS BY DR. NEAL ON PRACTICE OF MEDICINE AS CALLING

The Y.M.C.A. Sunday afternoon meetings will be resumed to-morrow at 4.15, a special opening service having been prepared. An address will be given by Hughson Johnston and special music will be furnished by the Loader Brothers and John James of the 247th Battalion Band. It is expected that this will be one of the best attended meetings of the season. Every man and soldier boy is invited.

The Y.M.C.A. Collegiate Club resumed its weekly sessions last evening and listened to an excellent vocational address on the Practice of Medicine as a Calling, by Dr. Frank Neal. This is one of a series of vocational talks which has been planned for the Senior Collegiate Club for the one thing prominent in the minds of these young men is what to do after leaving school. Dr. Neal convinced the boys that the practice of medicine is one of the most useful and altruistic of the professions. He said that is was impossible for a man to entirely master the study of medicine and surgery, but regardless of how busy a man be in his profession, he must continue as a student. There is no calling in which a man must so rely upon himself, his own ability, knowledge and observation as in the practice of medicine. He says that some people are unreasonable in their criticisms of a physician. They come to the doctor's office, listen to his advice, secure a bottle of medicine and go home and forget all that the doctor said do as they please and expect that the medicine is going to make them well. People have the idea that the practice of medicine is very profitable. The Doctor admitted that there was a possibility of a good living in the practice of medicine, but he said it was an unusual man who could get rich as a doctor. Surgical instruments and books and the general equipment used by a physician were the most expensive, and the progress of surgery and medicine made it necessary to constantly renew equipment to keep up to date. It is fatal to the success of a physician to get behind the times.

At the close of Dr. Neal's address the young men present passed a unanimous vote of thanks for his excellent address and the advice and suggestions given.

The next meeting of the Club will be held Friday evening, January 12th and a discussion of "Cheating and Graft" will be conducted by Mr. Hone.

Quick Work In Painting Buildings

Toronto Firm Beats Records

MR. F. G. Roberts, President Fred G. Roberts & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Three new large buildings in Toronto recently completed, furnish a new record in painting and decorating.

The Robert Simpson Co. mail order building on Mutual street is eleven stories high, and contains 93,000 panes of glass. The painting in this large building was completely finished in sixty days.

The Sherourne House Club, 88 Bleeker street (rear of late Senator Cox's home) contains 127 bedrooms 14 lavatories, dining-rooms and kitchens, halls, etc., etc. These were stained and rubbed to a piano finish, and walls and ceilings decorated throughout, in 30 days.

The Ford Office and Service Building at Dupont and Christie streets, required 50,000 yards of painting, and was completed in 30 days.

This is marvellously quick time in which to complete the painting, etc., of large buildings like these, and establishes a new record in Toronto.

Mr. Fred G. Roberts, the president of the Fred G. Roberts & Co., Limited, Toronto, is justly proud of this accomplishment, as it was his company which was awarded the contracts and notwithstanding the present labor difficulties, all were completed in the above record time.

Mr. Roberts was educated in Peterboro, Ont., is a director of Foresters Hall, Limited, and a member of the Toronto Board of Trade.

His company has secured a great many of the recent large painting and decorating contracts. In addition to the above the company has successfully completed four C.P.R. Buildings, Process and Press Buildings at the Exhibition Grounds, Bell Telephone Building, Molson's Bank, and the Bank of Commerce at Waterloo, Ryrie Building, St. Charles Hotel, West End Y.M.C.A., Canada Foundry Building, three Carnegie Libraries, Peterboro Baptist Church, Peterboro Carpet Works, Grasselli Chemical Co., Hamilton, Brennet's Apartment House Hamilton, three large buildings for the William Davies Co., Toronto, York Knitting Mills, Toronto, and the Robert Simpson Co., stables and wagon sheds.

It Cures Others It Will Cure You

About six weeks ago I met with an accident and since that time have been unable to raise my arm above my elbow due to injury and rheumatism that set in afterwards. I have been under the Doctor's care ever since but have been unable to receive any benefit from the use of liniments etc. A few days ago I received a treatment from your demonstrator. That night my arm felt much better and after the third treatment I could use my arm freely.

I am very thankful for the benefit I have derived from your Generator as I would otherwise have had to leave my battalion (170th) which is going overseas shortly.

I purchased a Branston Violet Ray Generator and used it for rheumatism. It certainly has done me good, as I have been troubled with it for 14 years or more and am now practically cured.

I am deriving a wonderful cure for falling hair with your Generator. I can see a change every week.

It Cures Others It Will Cure You

It is only fair that I should write and tell you that the Generator I purchased from you a few months ago has entirely cured by Neuritis. The best Doctors and high priced specialists treated me without success, and I can confidently state that I owe my restoration to complete health and strength to the Branston Generator.

I purchased one of the Branston Violet Ray Generators and I am happy to state that I have received great benefit. It has saved me from going to the Hotel Dieu for an operation.

I was suffering intense pain with Rheumatism in my left ankle and it was very much swollen. After three or four applications of the Branston Violet Ray the swelling was greatly reduced and the pain has entirely left.

At present my ankle could not feel better and I am able to walk on it for hours with no pain or swelling at all. This I consider very remarkable as I could not put my foot on the floor before without suffering a great deal.

What Is An Internal Bath?

By R. W. Beal

Much has been said and volumes have been written describing at length the many kinds of baths civilized man has indulged in from time to time. Every possible resource of the human mind has been brought into play to fashion new methods of bathing, but strange as it may seem, the most important, as well as the most beneficial of all baths, the "Internal Bath," has been given little thought. The reason for this is probably due to the fact that few people seem to realise the tremendous part that internal bathing plays in the acquiring and maintaining of health.

If you were to ask a dozen people to define an internal bath, you would have as many different definitions, and the probability is that not one of them would be correct. To avoid any misconception as to what constitutes an internal bath, let it be said that a hot water enema is no more an internal bath, than a bill of fare is a dinner.

If it were possible and agreeable to take the great mass of thinking people to witness an average post mortem, the sights they would see and the things they would learn, would prove of such lasting benefit and impress them so profoundly that further argument in favour of internal bathing would be unnecessary to convince them. Unfortunately, however, it is not possible to do this, profitable as such an experience would doubtless prove to be. There is then, only one other way to get this information into their heads, and that is by acquainting them with such knowledge as will enable them to appreciate the value of this long-sought-for health-producing necessity.

Few people realise what a very little thing it necessary sometimes to improve their physical condition. Also, they have almost no conception of how little carelessness, indifference or neglect can be the fundamental cause of the most virulent disease. For instance, that universal disorder from which almost all humanity is suffering, known as "constipation," "auto-intoxication," "anto-infection," and a variety of other terms, is not only curable, but preventable through the consistent practice of internal bathing.

How many people realise that normal functioning of the bowels and entire intestinal tract make it impossible to become sick? "Man of to-day is only fifty per cent. efficient." Reduced to simple English this means that most men are trying to do a man's portion of work on half a man's power. This applies equally to women.

That it is impossible to continue to do this indefinitely must be apparent to all. Nature never intended the delicate human organism to be operated on a hundred per cent. overload. A machine could not stand this and not break down, and the body certainly cannot do more than a machine. There is entirely too much unnecessary and avoidable sickness in the world.

How many people can you name, including yourself, who are physically vigorous, healthy and strong? The number is appallingly small.

It is not a complex matter to keep in condition, but it takes a little time and in these strenuous days people have time to do everything else necessary for the attainment of happiness but the most essential thing of all, that of giving their bodies their proper care.

Would you believe that five to ten minutes of time devoted to systematic internal bathing can make you healthy and maintain your physical efficiency indefinitely? Granting that such a simple procedure as this will do what is claimed for it, is it not worth while to learn more about that which will accomplish this end? Internal Bathing will do this, and it will do it for people of all ages and in all conditions of health and disease.

People don't seem to realise strange to say, how important it is to keep the body free from accumulated body-waste (poisons.) Their doing so would prevent the absorption into the blood of the poisonous excretions of the body, and health would be the inevitable result.

If you would keep your blood pure, your heart normal, your eyes clear, your complexion clean, your head keen, your blood pressure, normal your nerves relaxed, and be able to enjoy the vigor of youth in your declining years, practice internal bathing and begin to-day.

Now that your attention has been called to the importance of internal bathing, it may be that a number of questions will suggest themselves to your mind. You will probably want to know WHAT an Internal Bath is, WHY people should take them, and the WAY to take them. These and countless other questions are all answered in a booklet entitled "THE WHAT, THE WHY and THE WAY OF INTERNAL BATHING" written by Doctor Chas. A. Tyrrell, the inventor of the "J.B.L. Cascade," whose lifelong study and research along this line made him the pre-eminent authority on this subject. Not only has internal bathing saved and prolonged Dr. Tyrrell's own life, but the lives of multitudes of individuals have been equally spared and prolonged. No other book has ever been written containing such a vast amount of practical information to the business man, the worker and the housewife. All that is necessary to secure this book is to write to Dr. Tyrrell at Room 115 168 College Street, Toronto, and mention having read this article in the Peterboro Examiner, and same will be immediately mailed to you free of all cost or obligation.

Perhaps you realise now, more than ever, the truth of these statements and if the reading of this article will result in a proper appreciation on your part of the value of internal bathing, it will have served its purposes. What you will want to do now is to avail yourself of the opportunity for learning more about the subject, and your writing for this book will give you that information. Do not put off doing this, but send for the book now, while the matter is fresh in your mind.

"Procrastination is the thief of time." A thief is one who steals something. Don't allow procrastination to cheat you out of your opportunity to get this valuable information, which is free for the asking. It is unnatural to be sick. Why be unnatural, when it is such a simple thing to be well?

ters of the country. Many people prefer the old system to the new; they think it becomes better the rese the conscious and yet not self-sufficient spirit of a great democratic Empire. Behind both the Houses there is a spacious garden, with very little grass, it is true, but with some trees. Here now and then the Premier gives a garden party—of course in the summer time. The gardens are a welcome oasis in the heart of London. The rooms in both houses are roomy, almost vast; the windows are large, and the furniture has been made modern by successive Premiers—notably by Disraeli, who shared the love of his race for comfort and splendour.

But it is not at Downing Street that the intimates of Lloyd George see the most of him. He does see a lot of people there it is true, but the interviews are of a rather hurried character, for they usually take place at breakfasts at a quarter past nine. Though I am an intimate friend of Lloyd George, and am always enlightened enormously by a talk with him, I have struck at the breakfast, unless I have an American friend who is anxious to see the great man, and can get no opportunity of doing so except at the breakfast hour. It was at breakfast that Lloyd George first met Mr. McAdoo, the present Secretary of the Treasury of the United States; and there also he made the acquaintance of Colonel John W. Stewart, the famous Canadian contractor. That breakfast was the introduction of Col. Stewart to the valuable work he is now doing on the front in railway construction. I nearly always refuse the breakfast except in such exceptional circumstances; I retain the old journalist's habits of late nights and late mornings.

It is at Walton Heath, however, that you can get a real glimpse of the man. He occupies there a modest house of but two stories. Walton Heath was chosen partly because it has excellent and bracing air — it stands 700 feet above the sea level, partly because it has one of the best golf links in England. The house is very comfortable in Spring, Summer and early Autumn, but it is like all houses in Walton Heath—very cold in Winter; and I am sure that the average American or Canadian would shiver in the absence of the radiator.

Lloyd George, however, seems to be quite impervious to cold, and is oftentimes quite unconscious that the room in which he is talking or dining is like an ice-chest. Regard for comfort of surroundings in any form is not one of his passions.

He tries as a rule to get down to Walton on Friday evenings; this gives him three days in the country air, and these days make him a new man. He has both the physique and the temperament of the typical Celt; he goes down quickly under over-work; but he rises with extraordinary rapidity, and the depressed and tired man of Monday is very often the alert youth of Tuesday. In these days his visits have often had to be put off till Saturday—sometimes even till Saturday evening. As a rule he does not see many people on Saturday. If the weather be fine he goes out golfing, his companions being often Sir George Riddell, a great newspaper owner, and Robert Donald, the editor of the Daily Chronicle; at one time Charles Masterman was another invariable companion, but Charles Masterman was then a Cabinet Minister, and could afford a house in Walton. The house had to be given up, and Walton Heath nows Masterman no more. Lloyd George does not golf on Sundays; he has too much respect for the traditional love of a quiet Sunday among the Nonconformists of Wales, to whose general view of life he has remained quite faithful.

On Sundays he receives his friends either at lunch or supper—sometimes at tea. He generally takes a little rest between lunch and tea time; often, if you are a privileged visitor to the house you have to talk to Mrs Lloyd George or one of the two daughters, while the master of the household is still finishing his nap. Lloyd George, like so many other great men of action, has the gift of sleeping anywhere or at any time. I have seen him fall asleep almost while he was talking in a railway train; he is a very poor companion when motoring for he falls asleep within five minutes of the start of the machine. When he is at home all he has to do is to sit on one chair, and stretch his legs on another, and in a few minutes he is started on a sleep of a couple of hours. As a rule, he does not suffer from sleeplessness at night; though he has had his hours—under the stress of a great sorrow or a great anxiety—when he had to read through the black bleak hours of the night. Now and then he awakes too early and resorts to his state papers, and thus begins a day, sometimes at five in the morning.

At Walton Heath you see the absolutely unchanged simplicity of his character and tastes. He keeps a very modest table; he rarely touches any form of alcohol; and for his friends he usually has either a glass of whiskey or a light cheap wine. His table is just that of a well paid artisan, with a joint, a homely pudding, and a bit of cheese. It is scarcely necessary to say that you find no trace in him at Walton or any place else of "side." He is simple, unpretentious, hearty, frank, almost to indiscretion.

I had a small cottage during the Irish negotiations at an earlier part of the year. Once I rang him up to say there were with me some of the Irish leaders, and asked him whether we should go up to his house. It was late in the evening, and his house was about a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes away from mine. Not at all he said; he would come down to us. And at nine o'clock, with a cigar in his mouth and one of his sons by his side, he walked in. I know statesmen who are so full of themselves that they would regard it as a derogation of their high position to visit instead of being visited. Lloyd George may have some strange experiences in his now omnipotent position; one change he will never undergo; he will never get the swelled head.

THE TEA MARKET— WILL IT ADVANCE

A recent issue of the London Times says: "The prices of Indian tea advanced substantially in the London market on a reported intimation to the tea trade that a reduction in the freight space available for tea must now be expected. The question of freight is now the dominant factor in the prices of many commodities, not merely because of the high freight rates, but also because of the scarcity of tonnage."

The Value of Brains

Business success is the result of a careful and proper combination of CAPITAL and BRAINS and the lives of such men are a valuable asset to every Company, and as such should be adequately insured.

In proof of above Elbert Hubbard consulted a New York Financier who agreed to take a Bond issue for $100,000 at par, provided he held a Life Insurance Policy on Mr. Hubbard's life for a like amount. Why? Because Mr. Hubbard's brains were the CHIEF ASSET of the "Raycrofters." His mind was the THINK FACTORY, and the product of the business was the direct result of Mr. Hubbard's ideas. With Hubbard alive success was reasonably assured, but with Hubbard gone his loss would not be considered for a moment.

John Wannamaker and his son Rodman carry large amounts of Business Insurance, because it strengthens their credit and banks are beginning to require it.

Have you ever SERIOUSLY CONSIDERED what YOUR POSITION would be should your FIRM or Partnership lose through DEATH the BRAINS that have been the means of bringing success to your Institution. For a small sum you can guarantee again such misfortunes.

NEW DANGERS OF CONSTIPATION

A recent issue of the New York Times says:

"Recent researches of Prof. Metchnikoff and others have led doctors to suppose that many conditions of chronic ill-health, nervous debility, rheumatism and other disorders are due to poisoning set up by unhealthy conditions in the large intestine, and it has been suggested that the lowering of the vitality resulting from such poisoning is favorable to the developments of Cancer and Tuberculosis.

"At Guy's Hospital Sir William Arbuthnot Lane decided on the heroic plan of removing the diseased organ. A child who appeared in the final stage of what was believed to be an incurable form of tubercular joint disease was operated on. The Lower Intestine, with the exception of nine inches, was removed, and the portion left was joined to the Smaller Intestine.

"The result was astonishing. In a week's time the internal organs resumed all their normal functions, and in a few weeks the patient was apparently in perfect health."

The Lower Intestine does never get into this condition if Internal Baths are used. The "J.B.L. Cascade" cleanses the Lower Intestine its entire length thoroughly with pure warm water, and removes all the poisonous waste, which is such a menace to health.

This is a sample, only of many hundreds of letters we have in our files:

Dept. Public Works.
Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 31st, 1916.

Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, Toronto:

Dear Sir,—

Words, I can assure you, quite fail me to express my satisfaction and gratefulness to you for inventing such a humane and common sense remedy for stomach troubles as the "J.B.L. Cascade." For the past 15 years I have suffered from such and have never had the permanent relief from medicines as I have had from your "Cascade." I consider it the best investment I have ever made, and would not be without it for one hundred times its cost. I consider that those who are afflicted as I was are making the mistake of their lives to be without one of your Cascades.

Wishing you every success in your efforts for suffering humanity.

I am, dear Sir, yours truly,
"Grateful."

P.S.—Name and address will be furnished if requested.

It is Nature's own cure for Constipation and is now being used by over 500,000 Canadians and Americans with great success.

The "J.B.L. Cascade" is now being shown and explained by the Warne Drug Co., of Peterboro, where a most interesting booklet called "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient," is given on request. If you prefer, write to-day for this book to Chas. A. Tyrrell, M.D., 168 College Street, Toronto.

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Bryant, Dunn & Co. — As we go along now the corporations' statements make their appearance. It will be demonstrated that most of these properties are in a remarkable position, and the investment demand is likely to continue large. Speculatively the logical market should be a smaller affair for the time being.

E. & C. Randolph. — The market shows about as much indecision as does the administration in its foreign policy, and Wall Street apparently is absolutely confused. I still think that the tendency of the market at present is towards higher prices, but the fluctuations are violent and stocks should only be bought when weak and traders should be satisfied with some small profits.—Evans.

Laidlaw & Co. —The latest report from Washington on the Mexican situation would indicate that the President was preparing to withdraw our troops from that country, and this was construed bullishly, presumably on the theory that it would strengthen Carranza and help him in his efforts to establish normal conditions.

LAST COLLECTION OF THE NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS

Monday is the last day for National Service Cards to be returned to the Post Office.

All having cards which are not filled out as yet or whose cards were not ready when the carrier called for collection will either hand them to their carrier on Monday or drop into Post Office or letter boxes on the street before Monday p.m., in order to be in time for the final check of the city.

After Monday p.m. all cards not returned will have their names and addresses forwarded to Ottawa, as refusing to sign name.

The last district will be collected Monday consisting of Water street from Brock street south; also all the west side of Stewart street, and west of the river from Charlotte street to Wolfe street; also Rubidge and Reid streets from Sherbrooke to Charlotte, and King street to Park street.

You can greatly assist the carriers in the final results and save your name going to Ottawa by having your card ready and handing same to carrier as he passes along the route, or by dropping the card in street letter boxes not later than Monday.

Kindly give this your very careful attention. If those not yet receiving cards will apply to the various carriers for same they will gladly furnish you with them.

Be sure to have them in on Monday.

LAFLAMME OR WHITEHEAD TO REFEREE TUESDAY'S JUNIOR O.H.A. GAME

Line-up of Peterborough Team Will Be Announced on Monday—Squad Is Down to Ten Regulars and There Has Been Keen Competition For Places—Bowmanville Team Strongly Touted on Lake Front

The line-up of the Peterborough junior team for the opening junior O.H.A. game of the season on Tuesday night at Brock Street Rink, will be announced on Monday. The junior squad is now down to ten regulars and there is little to choose between the bunch. All have been showing good form in practice and the line-up has therefore been left undecided until practically the last moment. The squad is composed of Murray, Montgomery, McIntyre, Graham, Cherrett, McFee, Bartley, Frost, Kennalley and Park. Although Kennalley will return to St. Michael's College next week he has signed a Peterborough certificate and will be available when called upon.

The Bowmanville team who open the Junior season here, are strongly touted down the Lake front, and with the knowledge that a win over the Petes here would give them a big edge in the district race, they may be counted on to give the red, white and blue sweatered youngsters a merry tussle for the honours. The change in the weather makes the outlook very favourable for good ice conditions, which is what both teams want. It is expected that either Dr. Jerry Laflamme or Lawson Whitehead of Toronto will handle the bell. Either man knows how to keep the game moving, and there will be few dull moments around the Brock Street "ice box" next Tuesday night.

Cobourg Will Be Stronger For Monday's Game With Soldiers

The Peterborough fans will have an opportunity of seeing the 247th Battalion team perform under better ice conditions on Monday night, when Cobourg will visit Brock street Rink for an intermediate O. H. A. game. Although Cobourg were sadly beaten at Lindsay the fans should remember that the Lakeshore seven went to the Arsenal town with a makeshift team. They will have a greatly strengthened line-up ready for the Soldiers on Monday night, and it should be a lively engagement all the way. The band of the 247th battalion will play before the game and between periods.

LESTER A. SMITH
with "Mother Love" at the Grand next Tuesday.

A few years ago Mrs. Le Moyne appeared in a play entitled "The Greatest Thing in the World." Considerable curiosity was aroused as to what the dramatist considered "the greatest thing in the world." After the opening performance it was discovered that Mother Love was the basis of his theme. Since then "Madame X" was built upon the same foundation, as is J. Hartley Manner's play, "The Harp of Life," in which Laurette Taylor is now playing in New York.

However, Mr. Lawrence's play is unlike any of them. It is said to be more intensely dramatic than any other play that has yet been written on the subject. After a short preliminary Canadian tour embracing Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, Peterborough, Kingston, and Ottawa, "Mother Love" will be seen in New York for an extended engagement.

The sale for the local engagement on Tuesday next opened at the Box Office this morning.

HOCKEY CHALLENGE

The Expressmen challenge the livery car-drivers to a game of hockey to be played at the Brock Street Rink on Thursday night, December 11th, between the hours of 10 to 11 o'clock.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

What Canada needs to-day is strong, pure, God-fearing girls and women. It is the duty of every girl and woman to learn every practical thing she can, to make her strong of mind and body, and above all also spiritually. The talks at the Sunday afternoon service help to start the week stronger and better fitted for the daily task.

The gymnasium girl knows that the erect head and well-poised body means greater respect for one's self, and a broader outlook upon life. In fact, the entire being is changed through judicious physical training. An invitation is extended to girls to visit the gymnasium through January. After the 1st of February the classes will be preparing for the exhibition and will be closed to visitors.

The Club girls know that a jolly evening in the club room, or green room, the open fire, popping corn, or toasting marshmellows helps not a little to promote good comradeship.

Hotel Employee Got His Liquor From Montreal

Albert Allen, an elderly employee of a local hotel, was fined $10 by Magistrate Dumble, this morning, for being drunk in a public place. He was gathered in by the police, last night.

Asked by Chief Thompson where he got his liquor Allen replied that it was handed to him. Pressed for the name of the person who gave it to him Allen said he didn't want to tell.

"It's jail if you don't," remarked the Magistrate.

"Rather hard lines," was the reply, and, after hesitating a few moments, Allen said he got it from John Page, 218 Argyle street. Allen said that he and Page had arranged to buy a case of Corby's rye whisky from Montreal. He forwarded a money order for $8 in Page's name, the case to be delivered to Page, who is employed by the G.T.R. Page received the whiskey, Allen stated, and handed over three bottles, in the basement of the hotel. The other three bottles belonging to Allen are still in Page's possession.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Having seen the discontented letters of the soldiers' wives, in your paper, I, too, thought I would like to express by views, as a soldier's wife. I notice they mention the Government's pay they receive, but omit to tell how much patriotic. My husband only assigned me $15, as that was all he was allowed to do when he enlisted, and my separation is $20, like the rest, and the Patriotic Fund gives me enough to pay my rent. I have three children, and with economy, I can manage very nicely, but with my husband away fighting for our freedom, and having to put up with all kinds of hardships. I don't expect to live in clover, the same as if he were here to care for us; still, believe me, I am sincerely thankful for the patriotic fund and I think it a shame when people are so ungrateful and discontented when every one is doing their best to help us.

Another Soldier's Wife.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly give me space in your valuable paper to correct several things which occur in the account of my talk on Woman Suffrage, in this Evening Examiner?

First, I did not say that "suffrage goes back to the beginning of the world." What I did say was that to understand the woman movement properly, one must study conditions which have existed in all stages of the world's history. Olive Schreiner's wonderful book "Woman and Labour" shows clearly that the woman movement, as it now exists, is simply the result of evolution.

Second. In speaking of friction in the home I did not say "there is lots in it now." What I said was that if the matter of the vote would cause friction in any home, one might be sure that in that home friction would exist because of other things of much less importance.

Third. I did not say that "Peterborough hates anything new." Incidentally I mentioned that a resident of Peterborough had told me with pride that Peterborough hated taking up any new idea, and I said that I hoped these words would not be proved true with regard to the work for woman suffrage.

Fourth. The reference about the venerable clergymen and the corkless man (not men) was given as a quotation from a suffrage writer of wide repute.

There were other misleading statements in the account, but as they are of minor importance I shall not refer to them. I feel sorry to have to write at all, but feel it only right to do so in order that people may not have a wrong impression of the movement for which I am earnestly working.

I think if an address can not be taken down word for word it would be well that no part of it should be written in the first person.

I appreciate fully the difficulty there is in giving a satisfactory synopsis of any address such as mine, and regret having to ask you for space for this letter.

Yours truly,
Alice Roger Collins.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir—Referring to 'Mothers of Soldiers' I was reading in your paper. Where no mother of a soldier should need to be in want, that the Patriotic Association would not allow any woman to suffer if any of them were answering their country's call; all they were to do was to explain matters to Mr. Dobbin. But he would just say that "a son does not have to leave any money to his mother if he did not want to; and just take what is given and be satisfied."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

A Soldier's Wife.

OBITUARY

MRS WM. CURRANS.

Helen Mary Stanton, beloved wife of William Currans, entered into rest at Nicholls Hospital this morning, at the age of 86, Mrs. Currans, who was previously Mrs. Jas. Haggart, had been for about sixty years a resident of Peterborough, and vicinity, and was known and highly esteemed for her kind and gentle disposition by many friends. Thirty years ago she was married to Wm. Currans, and lived with him on his farm in Smith, until a few years ago when her failing health made it seem best for them both to make a home for themselves at the Protestant Home, where Mrs Curran won the respect and affection of all connected with that institution. Mrs. Currans is survived by two sons of her former marriage. James E., of this city, and John S. of Detroit; also by a grandson, here, Fred Haggart, who recently returned wounded from active service overseas.

The funeral will be held from the Protestant Home to Little Lake cemetery, on Monday, January 8th, at 2.30 p.m.

Buckhorn Man Wears Hair Long Otherwise Queer

County Constable Moore was back in the woods again yesterday, but on this man hunt it was in the Buckhorn neighbourhood on what is called the "Oregon" Road. He arrested Herbert Love, an eccentric individual, deep in the woods. Love was said to be "queer". He lived alone in a shack by the roadside. He affected long hair favoured by the circus wildmen, and badly needed the attentions of a barber. Love is said to have had a rifle as his constant and sole companion, and evidently some of the neighbours grew alarmed at his strange behaviour. He was remanded for a week.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

FOWLER INDIVIDUALITY

The exceptional care, Dr. Fowler takes in making his "Peblo" Glasses fit the contour of the face, centering the lenses over the pupil of the eyes, setting them out sufficiently far to clear the eyeglasses and otherwise making them exactly suit the face, on which they are to be worn, is the reason why Fowlers "Peblo" Glasses have that distinctly individual appearance. Every pair is made for the wearer and the wearer only.

DEALERS IGNORED QUESTIONS ASKED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—Moyneur Limited, wholesale product merchants of Ottawa, have come under the displeasure of Commissioner O'Connor, whose duty it is to supervise the new cost of living regulations recently made by the government. The above firm simply ignored the question sent to it in connection with the prices of potatoes, eggs, bacon and ham, meats, etc. The firm has now been notified that the question was seriously asked and that serious answers were expected. It is stated that several coal dealers are liable to find themselves in a like predicament.

HARVEY TOWNSHIP'S GIFT TO ITS CLERK.

After holding the office of clerk for the township of Harvey for sixteen consecutive years, Mr. David Weir has resigned, as he has sold his property in Harvey and is moving to a farm near Omemee. At the last meeting of the township council reference was made to Mr. Weir's long and valuable services to the township in the capacity of clerk, and a grant of $50 was made to him.—Lakefield News.

NEW RUSSIAN NEWSPAPER.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4. — The first number of a big Russian daily newspaper, founded on capital collected from various industrial firms by M. Protopopoff, now Minister of the Interior, has appeared. During the period of preparation the paper was repeatedly violently attacked mainly because of its connection with Protopopoff. The paper is called Rusakia Volia, (Russian Liberty.) The staff included a number of progressive and democratic writers, and its aims are described as liberal. Protopopoff as Minister has declared himself an enemy of the Liberals, and the position of the new organ and its contributors was considered highly anomalous. It is said, however, that Protopopoff severed his connection with the Rusakia Volia, and the first number contains long, violent attacks on its initiator.

Says Figures Show Germany's Hunger

Keeley Cites Berlin Tageblatt's Complaints Against the Food Dictator —Meat Rations Reduced—Milk Available Only For Babies and the Sick—War Allowances to the Well-to-Do.

CHICAGO, January 6.—James Keeley, editor of The Chicago Herald, publishes the following article in that paper:

Writing recently in The Herald, I pointed out the seriousnes of the food situation in England and France created by the sinking of ten ships a day—a recent editorial in The Daily Mail puts the figures at eleven—by German submarines. In the article I spoke briefly of the food conditions in Germany and Austria, stating that they were worse than in the allied countries. To this statement a few readers of The Herald took exception.

To-day I offer evidence from the Berliner Tageblatt of the accuracy of my quotation. In it are these pregnant facts:

Potatoes—Original rations of one and one-half pounds a day reduced on Jan. 1 to three-quarters of a pound a day.

Meat—Ration reduced to less than half a pound on meat days.

Butter—A trifle over two ounces a week.

Milk—Extremely scarce and price rising.

The Government has been forced to make war allowances to persons with an income of $1,126. Originally aid was extended only to those whose incomes were $600.

The highly significant Tageblatt article insists that the auxiliary service law (to secure ammunition) must be followed by a war nutrition law to secure a supply of food. It then says:

"After the experience of six months it is hardly possible to imagine that the War Nutrition Office is capable of performing its task any better in the future than in the past. Shall one point to the fact that the potato rations, which originally were intended to be one and one-half pounds a day, have already been reduced in Berlin to six pounds a week, and that a general reduction of the daily ration to three-fourths pound will take place on Jan. 1? Is one to call attention to the disturbing fact that at present even the bread ration of 1,900 grammes (about four pounds) a week can in many cases only be obtained with difficulty? Is it possible to overlook the inadequate supply of meat for the people? Again and again the hope that the meat ration could be increased has been disappointed, although game, and to some extent poultry, can now only be obtained by ticket. Why, in many places one can no longer obtain even 250 grammes (about one-half pound) of meat, but only 200 grammes or less.

MILK ONLY FOR SICK CHILDREN.

"If one is lucky, one gets sixty grams (a little more than two ounces) of butter a week. For months past cheese has become something almost unknown for the mass of the people. Milk is applied at best only to little children and sick persons. Every now and then the War Nutrition Office issues a consoling communication, but generally the words are not followed by deeds. On the other hand, it is one's almost daily experience that foodstuffs which hitherto could be obtained have vanished from the market. And all that can still be bought costs impossible prices."

The Tageblatt article then goes on to demand the setting up of real control for the whole empire, the breaking down of agrarian privileges, and, in particular, compulsion of all the States to abandon their special right. The Vorwarts published simultaneously an article called "The Net Result of Long Speeches," containing bitter criticism of the Prussian Diet debate and saying that the only new features is the insistence by the agrarians upon the fact that the food difficulties will continue long after the conclusion of peace.

The life of Herr von Batocki, the "Food Dictator," is not a happy one. Less than a month ago he received a deputation from all the associations of German officials, who asked that the servants of the State should have additional rations of bread, potatoes and fats. Herr von Batocki expressed much sympathy, but said that, as regarded bread and potatoes, the most he could offer was the prospect of additional bread tickets in specially deserving cases. As regarded fats, the outlook was unfavourable, and there was no prospect of increased production of milk and butter until the return of warm weather.

Ten days before Christmas the German papers devoted a great deal of their space to the food question, particularly to a projected rise in the price of milk and the impending reduction of the rations of butter and fat.

The official explanation is that there has been "a surprising falling off" in the production of milk, the reason being that the supplies of fodder with which the farmers endeavoured during the past year to maintain their stock of milch cattle are now exhausted, and this year's fodder has been so spoiled by the wet Summer that, although the cattle "look splendid," the quantity of milk is decreasing. A second reason is aid to be that the farmers need large quantities of skim milk, which is now the only food for calves. There is said to be no prospect of any considerable quantities of skim milk being available for the towns.

A series of questions to be asked in the Hessian Diet by the Deputy for Mainz are interesting. They assert that the daily supply of milk to the town of Mainz has been reduced since the beginning of December from 14,000 quarts to 4,000 quarts, whereas the normal consumption before the war was about 40,000 quarts, and at least 18,000 quarts a day are necessary in order to secure the fixed rations of whole milk for sick persons, nursing mothers, and little children alone.

The cold fact is that food is scarce in Germany and Austria, and, judg-

The Cattle Market.

A shortage of supplies early in the week, with an active demand for all classes of live stock for the wholesale butcher trade, sent prices up with a sudden jump, and also brought visions of an early inauguration of unofficial "meatless days" on the part of a worried public. The latter part of the week, however, brought in many belated cars of cattle, and the sharp advance in prices was at least temporarily checked, though holding steady at the advances gained right through to the closing market. The average advance over last week's prices for choice heavy and choice butcher cattle was about 50c. Sheep and lambs also held strong at the advances for anything of choice quality, while heavy sheep eased off a little.

The hog situation seemed to be a puzzle to the packers during the whole of the week, but prices persisted in steadily advancing.

Union Stock Yards, 208 cars, with 2,842 cattle, 998 calves, 7,368 hogs, 1698 sheep and lambs and 2,951 horses.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, biliousness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble

CANADA IS TO HAVE HER OWN WESTMINSTER ABBEY

Plans Prepared For Storing of Banners and Colours in New Parliament Buildings and Paintings to Make Heroic Deeds Live

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT APPROVED THE IDEA

OTTAWA, January 6.—Canada is to have a Westminster Abbey of her own. Under the interior plans for the reconstruction of the Parliament Buildings arrangements are being made by Architect Pearson for commemorating the exploits of Canada and the allies in the present war, and for the housing of the banners and colours of the various regiments of the Dominion who have so gallantly participated in the great struggle. The new Senate chamber will have no galleries on the sides. Accommodation for the public will be arranged at both ends. The walls are to be utilized for the portrayal of paintings typical of the cause for which the various allies are at present fighting.

If present plans are carried out painters from the different countries engaged with Great Britain in the present war will be invited to come to Canada to do this work. The paintings will be in accord with the general colour scheme of the chamber and may, of course, take years to complete. It is understood that his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, prior to his departure for England, declared himself as enthusiastically in favour of this artistic and patriotic plan, and promised his assistance. Arrangements in the plans are being made for a "Hall of Fame" running the depth of the building. Along this wide and spacious corridor niches for the accommodation of statues which may from time to time be erected will be provided.

An entirely new arrangement is in contemplation for the library.

A huge "stack room" will be built into the cliff overlooking the Ottawa River, and in this all the books will be kept. When a member desires a book it will be sent on an elevated system from the stack room to the library proper. As at present contemplated, the woodwork and book shelves of the library will be taken out. In their place will be provided accommodation for the banners and flags of the regiments that have been engaged in the great war. These will hang in the base of the dome.

BETTER FARMING METHODS ARE FINDING FAVOUR IN COUNTY OF PETERBORO'

Activities of the West Peterborough Board of Agriculture Bear Fruit in the Form of Increased Production—Two Meetings Were Held This Week—Interesting Addresses by a Departmental Representative

During the past week two meetings have been held in Peterborough County under the auspices of the West Peterborough Board of Agriculture. The President of the Board is Mr. J. A. McGregor, while the duties of Secretary-Treasurer are very ably performed by Mr. Allan B. Mann. Both of these men are practical agriculturiste and, like a good many more farmers in Peterborough County, are convinced that greater productivity must, and can be, obtained by the application of scientific methods which are expounded by the departmental representatives sent to address these meetings. The chief speaker at the meetings referred to was Mr. R. E. L. Harkness of Iroquois, Dundas County. On Thursday afternoon, at a meeting held in the Temperance Hall, Smith Township, Mr. Harkness spoke on a variety of subjects. He pointed out the advantages that would accrue to the soil in growing clover, and admonished the farmers not to grow corn twice in succession on the same field if they would avoid the deadly smut. (Mr. Harkness believes that the land in Peterborough County is suitable for the production of alfalfa. He gave instructions as to how the seed should be planted, and the best methods of harvesting and curing the crop.

Fruit Production.

Peterborough County. He said that the farmers of Peterborough County were well advanced in the matter of stock raising, but they were behind in the matter of growing fruit. There should be an orchard and a garden of smaller fruits on every hillside in the country. Land devoted to fruit growing would double in value and yield a rich return on the capital invested. Orchards should be thoroughly cultivated, pruned and sprayed at the proper seasons.

One acre of strawberries will, when intelligently handled, give a return of $1,100 a year and three men can set out the plants on one acre in ten hours. The vines in order to bring the best results should be protected during the winter by a coating of straw. Asparagus, raspberries, currants, gooseberries, grapes and muskmellons should be raised on every farm.

Closing Meeting.

During the course of the evening Mr. Allan B. Mann gave a brief address and Roland Scott favoured the gathering with a recitation. The final meeting of the Board for the year was held at Buckhorn on the following day.

One discouraging feature about such meetings is the slim attendance. This, however, would be no justification for holding fewer meetings as the few farmers who do attend usually represent a wide area of country and the information they carry away will eventually find its way to some of their neighbours. The meetings are held at different periods throughout the year and one only has to travel throughout the County to see evidence of the good that has been accomplished.

Peace Request For Europe

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The Senate yesterday adopted by a vote of 48 to 17, a resolution endorsing Wilson's request that the warring nations state terms of peace. Senator Lewis, who is close to Wilson, said that the note is for us as well as a peace request for Europe.

GERMAN PAPER CALLS FOR CHANCELLOR'S RESIGNATION

LONDON, January 6.—Demand that Imperial Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg resign immediately because of the rejection of Germany's peace proffers was made yesterday in the Berlin newspaper Neueste Nachrichten, known as the Krupp's organ.

The newspaper declared that "Germany regards the Chancellor as a weakling and Europe discredits him because of his blundering remarks as to Germany's guilt in invading Belgium."

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 Per Cent. In One Week's Time In Many Instances

A FREE PRESCRIPTION YOU CAN HAVE FILLED AND USED AT HOME.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eyestrain or other eye weaknesses? If so you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through a principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind and could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems real clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and the expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Optic tablets. Drop one Bon-Optic tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes from two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and the inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. Note: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Optic is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists, and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen the eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in Peterboro by Warne Drug Co.

Iron Acts Wonders on a Week, Run-Down Nervous System

Puts Roses in Pale Cheeks

Give you pep, vigour, and 100 p.c. more strength in 10 days.

Dr. Malmgrine of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, run-down, anaemic and nervous, to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking Iron for their blood. It has always been an understood fact that Iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, and coating effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the iron with phosphorus which forms a new iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bonized Phosphorus with Iron. Dr. Malmgrine finds this 5 to 6 fold in action. It charges the system with new blood, strengthens, gives greater strength and a new vitality. Your stomach will now be ready for a big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and note

Phosphorus with Iron if you are thin, pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, etc., and in ten days you will be full of pep, bright, vigorous, alert, attaining the glow of happiness. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicines, cheap laxatives, for what you imagine with sure kidney troubles, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. What you want is good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all these everyday complaints.

Bonized Phosphorus with Iron, as spoken of here does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them; while Bonized Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up, strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by one druggist in each city. Agents for Peterborough is F. O. Weber, Charlotte Street.

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

She threw a dressing gown about her, and slipping her small pink feet into small pink slippers, crossed idly to the window. Then with a face that in an instant went white with a premonition of disaster, she wheeled on Julie and her voice came in an agitated whisper.

"What are they calling extras about—get me a paper quick!" When a few minutes later a sheet still damp from the presses lay before her she needed only the flaring headlines to corroborate her fears. With throbbing temples she swayed unsteadily as she made her way to a chair and sank down, gripping the paper tightly in her clenched fist. Four words were hammering themselves into her brain and heart: "Stock Exchange in a Frenzy"....Her apathy of inactivity lasted only a few moments. Then she came to her feet and instead of panic resolution sounded through her voice. "Dress me, Julie," she commanded—"Dress me quickly. I must be downtown at once. 'Phone for the car. Don't waste an instant." At least she would be there where the battle was raging.

"But, mademoiselle, in an hour you are due for a fitting—your wedding-gown."

"Don't stop to talk—hurry!"

Her wedding gown! She wondered if she would ever need it.

As her car neared the business district she could feel in the air such an electric tensity as one might expect to find at the verge of a battlefield.

At first it was only a spirit of heightened excitement in the street crowds; and the way the men ran to meet the newsboys half-way. Then it was humanity jostling about the doors of a bank with the excitement of swarming bees. Across City Hall park came a glimpse of surging throngs at the bulletin boards, and the unpleasant chorus of voices as fresh bulletins went up.

Hamilton Burton had reached his office that morning at eight thirty, and was ready upon their arrival to had ordered to be with him at nine. Len Haswell appeared with the lackluster seeming of a jaded spirit and though Burton had on past occasions chosen him as leader of every fierce assault on the floor, because of his quick brain, his commanding physique and the voice that could boom out like a heavy gun over the pandemonium of a frenzied exchange, he now eyed his gigantic broker dubiously. This was no day for his lieutenants to carry into that Gehenna which he meant to participate senses dulled or hearts cast down. This morning's work called for such spirit as carries forward a tide of bayonets thirsting for blood back of the trenches they charge. There must be the ferocity of barbarians bearing knife and torch, of the hordes of the Huns and Vandals. There of course was Hardinge, a man who, had he not been a broker, might have made a headquarters detective, so hard and devoid of humanity was the fashion in which he went about his work. His nature was that of a cock tossed into the pit or a bull turned into the ring. Such men Hamilton wanted now, for into the five hours of the Stock Exchange day he meant to crowd such a sum of mad disaster and panic conflagration that the history of the money world should be beggared for a comparison. They had tauntingly named him the Great Bear, but this day should demonstrate that heretofore he had been only a gentle and playful cub. Cash—cash—cash! Such had been his watchword and he had stamped on the world of finance a belief that his command of gold was endless. Even should he reach the end of his resources with his task unfinished, he knew that his tremendous nerve was in itself unlimited backing. The nature of the trading on the floor precluded any discovery, during the length of the session, of a depleted treasury—and left open the path for onward charges. But before his treasury was depleted the whole structure would lie in ruins.

He glanced out of the window, and smiled. It was the sort of a day which the men in police circles describe as "suicide weather." Coroners will tell you that on such days their calls are most numerous and history will tell you that on such days the greatest financial disasters of the world have visited stock exchanges and bourses. Burton's jaws were set and his eyes ablaze with a fiery tenseness which was hardly sane. His loins were girded and to one focal object was every power dedicated. He was going to mete out death and destruction. He would grapple with enemies who had taught him the art of death and destruction. As he ended his instructions to his brokers he looked at his watch; it was nine-forty-five. "Cut loose!" he almost shouted. "Railway Generals closed at 175. By noon I want them down to 50. When Malone's gang begin pegging the market break their pegs. Don't spare Coal and Ore. Keep them too busy with self preservation to think of rescuing others. Give them slaughter—an unshirted hell!"

* * *

The light that rains down from the ceiling of the Stock Exchange is a softened, benevolent light, even when the outer skies are lowering. The gentlemen inside play their game in a well appointed gambling parlor.

It would not be fitting that they should seem pikers. Above them there stretches a ceiling of soft color scheme in delicate pink and blue and from this canopy sixty-two ceiling lights shed down a tempered radiance from globes suggestive of inverted golden blossoms. The great bronze framed windows, too, at the east and west make a greater part of the wall area as receptive of brightness as does a studio skylight—for the world's cleverest financiers must be cheered by brightness and protected against gloom.

To-day the great interior cube of space needed all the light that could flood the area between its marble walls—for despite the sixty-two inverted blossoms it was to see black hours.

Of that there was of course no suspicion at first.

The assembled brokers chattered carelessly, and between them sedately passed the floor employees in cadet gray, and boys carrying green watering-pots with which, when many feet had pounded the boards into dust, they would sprinkle this hot house of Finance, as they might have sprinkled a bed of thirsty geraniums.

Then from the marble balcony, where is placed the president's chair, sounded the clang of the opening gong. The session had begun.

Hamilton Burton's lieutenants meant to waste no moment of the five-hour session. Another day meant the drawing of new lines, and time for tallying and rallying, but what was done to-day was immutably done. Hardinge and Haswell stood near the post at whose head hung the sign, "Railway Generals." About them lounged a handful of dilatory brokers. Railway Generals had closed yesterday strong at 175, but quotations from London where by reason of the difference in time there had already been several hours of trading, reflected an unaccountable nervousness over-seas. So the stock opened five points off.

Every game has its traditional rules—it is a cardinal by-law of the Exchange that until the gong peals every man on the floor must maintain an unruffled and blase composure, although when the clamor of the big bell unleashes their restraint whosoever chooses may leap into the frenzy of a madhouse.

A voice at the Railway-Generals post drawled out "170 for any part of 5,000 Generals," and on the instant Hardinge's deep basso boomed a challenge and a battle cry as he yelled back, "Sold!"

The bidder was Jack Staples, and he bore the credentials of J. J. Malone. For just an instant he eyed his vis-a-vis and his prominent lower jaw seemed to protrude more aggressively, as his indolent manner dropped from him and his eyes kindled. He brushed back the white lock on his forehead and defiantly shouted, "168 for part of 10,000," but before the words had come to conclusion on his lips the rifle-like retort had met him from the throat of Hardinge, "Sold!"

"168 for any part of 10,000"—"Sold." This time the deep-lunged monosyllable burst volcanically from the lips of Len Haswell, and it ran across the floor and echoed between the walls like a thundering battle in the cliffs of a mountain gorge.

Instantly crowds surged forward and elbowed their ways to the Generals post. Where five minutes back there had been scant dozens there were now full hundreds who shouldered and shoved and fought, struck by a sudden wild realization that a fight was on. At the centre of the vortex they could see the steady head of Len Haswell high above the crowns of other men and in his face they read the gage of battle. No longer was this the heartsick face which of late had avoided the gaze of his fellows. It was the fighting face of one who hurls himself into the thick of a struggle, seeking forgetfulness in the ferocity of combat.

"163 for any part of 10,000"—"SOLD!"

With each repetition the unchanged formula took on an added ferocity—a deeper meaning. It was a three-cornered duel. Jack Staples leaned eagerly forward, his eyes burning and keen with aggressive alertness like a boxer facing opponents in a battle royal. Len Haswell seemed bending to meet him, his long arm raised and his face afire, while Hardinge, whose place had been for the moment preempted, moped his brow, already perspiring, and smiled grimly like a relay racer waiting his turn.

But what gave an undercurrent of terrific force to the battle of these three men was the thing which every broker present, understood—that one of them was the floor spokesman of Malone and Harrison and the old invincible order of Consolidated—and that two voiced the message of the new power and in the name of Hamilton Burton were declaring a war to the death.

"160 for any part of 20,000"—"SOLD!"

Generals had broken fifteen points in ten minutes and were slumping as though their foundations floated in thin air. A yell went up over the floor through which sounded demoniac notes of panic and rage. Men surged around the Generals post, struggling as cowards might struggle to leave a burning theatre, collars tore loose and eyes glittered like those of a wolf-pack. The blackboards at north and south burst into a hysterical flashing of white numbers, and a word went out which set the cylinders of printing presses whirling. A Burton raid was on, and the Street was in panic-making excitement!

But close around the post three figures still dominated the picture. Staples with his tigerish teeth to the crowds fought the two men who carried Burton's orders and who with implacable monosyllables still hammered the market with sledges of mighty resource. What had been the orderly floor of an artistically designed mart of trade was now a hell of pandemonium. With the sweat pouring down his face, his hands clenched above his head, and his deep voice strained into a hoarse bellow, Jack Staples of Consolidated fought as a man fights death, to breast and stem and turn the tidal wave of disaster.

Other stocks followed suit, and while Haswell, forgetting in his excitement that he had been officially superseded, brouched face to face, battering his opponent, Hardinge fought his way like a madman out of the maelstrom and declared war on Coal and Ore. Voices blended into a frenzied Walpurgian uproar. Frantic telephone calls made the blackboard one flickering, waving, confusing area of black and white where no spot was white for any consecutive minute and no spot black.

For an hour it raged so, down!—down!—down!—with no moment of recovery and no instant of changing tide. When now and again the din subsided for a few moments of recovered breath, while traders "iverified," faces streaming sweat looked as haggard as though it was blood that was pouring from them. Voices cracked with hoarseness as men stood panting like dogs torn from the embrace of battle and waiting only for the leash to loosen and free them again for renewed battle. Underfoot they trod the confetti-like scraps of torn papers. Among them went the men with green watering-pots. Outside newsboys called yet new extras. The market had been open an hour and the Street was seeing the most delirious day of mania in its history. Then in one of the lulls came that sound which between the hours of ten and three is never heard save as the clarion of disaster. The great gong in the president's gallery sent out its strident and metallic voice, and in the dead silence that followed its command an announcement was made.

"The Western Trust Company announces that it cannot meet its obligations."

The weakest barrier had fallen, and it was only the beginning.

DRESDEN'S SHORT RATIONS

Two Americans who returned recently on the liner Nieuw Amsterdam after living for three years in Dresden, said that the living conditions in the Saxon capital had become very trying in the last six months.

Cards were issued for butter, meat eggs and sugar, but the goods are not given out according to the scale. The card of each adult calls for one pound of meat a week, but only four ounces can be obtained. One pound of sugar is supposed to be given out weekly to each adult but what is really served is one pound every fifteen days. One egg a week is allowed on the card but often the holder gets only one in two weeks.

The passengers said that the poor people suffered the most as they had no money to buy meats or chickens or butter when it could be obtained from Denmark. They line up for eight blocks to get a weekly dole of four ounces of potcheese. Beef is 70 cents, lamb is 90 cents, and pork 80 cents a pound in Dresden, and bacon is $2.15 a pound, when it can be obtained. Broilers weighing a little more than a pound cost $3.25 each in the market and are very difficult to obtain.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

Epilepsy. During all the ages of recorded history there has been reference of the terrifying fits of people subject to Epileptic seizures. I presume that as much study, thought, and earnest research has been devoted to the fearful malady as to cancer, and until the present day the results, so far as a cure has been concerned, have been about equal.

Dr. Wm. Held has devoted many years to the study and treatment of this disease and of his results I will let him tell you. The interesting feature about Dr. Held's method, which he offers freely to the profession, lies in the fact that he offers to treat, free of expense, one hundred cases for the Home Health Club. He does this in order to prove to the world that his simple, safe and sane and harmless method is a real cure for the dreaded scourge. I will be glad to hear from any sufferer and to send Dr. Held's offer to any of my readers. Dr. Held's article will appear in several installments, the first of which follows:

"The interest in the subject of epilepsy is, in many respects, a social one. The epileptic problem effects a figure outside of the domain of the medical profession and is not only important from the standpoint of science, but its features ramify into the legal, moral, and social sphere more than any other similar condition. There is for instance, a very vital medico-legal connection as in the relation of epilepsy and to crime; there are moral and hygenic considerations as suggested by the fact that several states have enacted laws prohibiting the marriage of epileptics; then there are the precautions taken by those States who have established "epileptic" colonies for the protection of both the epileptic and society.

Apparently in full possession of their physical and mental faculties, in the midst of their occupation, while at work or at play, waking or sleeping, in church, in school, and on the street, sometime with and again without warning, the patient is suddenly seized, bereft of consciousness and thrown into the epileptic fit, which may vary in degree from a slight, fleeting unconsciousness to the most violent convulsions, spoken of as the epileptic fit.

The epileptic problem engaged the attention of ancient healers, and it seems as if the problem were staring at us like an oppressive memory from that time, with the same sphynxlike attitude as in the misty past. Sphynxslike, because in the light of accepted standard theories the problem has remained unanswered. The spectacle of the convulsive fit so impressed the ancients as some thing uncanny and weird, that their earthb imagination soon ascribed supernatural significance to the disease. They looked upon it as a dispensation of the gods and termed it the "Sorbus Sacer" or holy sickness. The medicine man of the dark ages insisted that the patient was possessed by an evil demon.

From the conception of such cause for the disease to the inauguration of a treatment befitting his superstition, was but a short step. And so we find that the sorcerer, as an expedient in the treatment of the epileptic patient, employed red-hot irons and other forms of tortures. The wailings of the wretched victim were answered by the announcement that it was the evil spirit within the patient who was writhing and crying out in agony and not the patient at all. We may now, in our much vaunted superiority, look back with horror upon the past, and perhaps smile pityingly at so much superstition and ignorance, but while we do so, let us bear in mind that everything is judged by comparison, and that the magnitude or smallness of a thing is only relative. We no longer beat our patients insensible with a physical club; we have advanced too far, and methods have changed with our advancement. We now employ scientific and subtle acting sedatives and suppresives, but are no less fettered by superstitions than were our forerunners. The modern treatment of epilepsy is as useless and disastrous for the patient as was the torture of the ancient sorcerer. While we no longer resort to inflicting physical tortures, the treatment is as maddening as was the remedy of the dark ages. The modern superstition in the treatment of epilepsy is the bromide superstition. Other drugs are also used, but the chief one and most nefarious is bromide. Bromide brutalization continues despite the fact that it has never cured, never benefitted the epileptic. The patient and those who have given much time to the earnest study of epilepsy, have long ago come to the conclusion that it was better to have epilepsy than bromism. Bromism is a form of intoxication resulting from the prolonged ingestion of bromide.

Club Notes.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor: Will ask you for advice concerning our little boy of ten years; also a little girl 12 years old. They both sleep with their mouths open more or less, and snore. Both are thin. A doctor told us they had a growth in their nostrils. He said he could cure them, but all the doctors talk operation. J. B.

(Answer). Whenever the children sleep with their mouths open there is always a suspicion of adenoids, that is, certain growths in the nose, and the only means of cure recommended by most of our doctors is an operation. There are many Club readers who have treated their children very effectively by other means and I believe that every case of adenoids can be cured if the Home Health Club methods are followed for a sufficient length of time. These methods have been explained by me in detail on a number of occasions.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A Sleepy Time Story That Tells of Good Deeds Done.

SAVING AN EMPEROR'S LIFE.

Kindly Act of a Poor Man Grows Into a Remarkable Series of Adventures. Other Things of Interest to Little People.

Children, said Uncle Ben to Polly Ann and little Ned, I am going to tell you about

THE BEGGAR'S PENNY.

A generous man gave a beggar a penny. The beggar went on his way until he came to a baker's shop. He was just going to buy some bread with the penny when an old man came up with a pilgrim's staff in his hand. The pilgrim was selling pictures of the city of Jerusalem in order to get money to ransom his brother, who had been taken prisoner by the Turks at Jerusalem.

The poor beggar was moved by the story of the pilgrim. He gave him the new penny and told him its story. The baker saw this kind act of the lame beggar, and as a reward he gave him more bread than he could have bought for the penny.

When the pilgrim came to Jerusalem he went at once to the Turkish governor and offered him all the money he had gathered for his brother's freedom. The governor, however, wanted more money and would not let the brother go.

The pilgrim said. "This is all that I have except one copper penny," and then he told the story of the penny. The governor asked to see the penny that had done so many good actions. "I will keep it," he said, "and wear it next my heart, and perhaps a blessing will go with it." Then he gave the pilgrim all his money back again and let his brother go free.

Soon after this the Turkish governor was in battle. An arrow struck him on the breast, but it glanced off without hurting him. It had struck against the penny, and thus his life was saved.

When the war was over the governor went to his master, the emperor, and as they talked together he told how his life had been saved by a penny. He showed him the penny and told its story. As the emperor gazed at it he exclaimed again and again: "It is wonderful! It is wonderful!"

The governor, seeing his delight, gave him the penny, and the emperor fastened it with a golden chain to the hilt of his sword. One day soon after this the emperor was about to drink a cup of wine when the empress asked to see the hilt of his sword. As he held it up the penny dropped into the cup of wine. When he took it out he saw that the copper had turned to a green color. Some one had mixed poison with the wine, but the change in the color of the penny warned the emperor, and his life was saved.

Then the emperor had the penny put in his crown, surrounded by diamonds and jewels of great value.

THAT SUNBURN.

How to Cure This Ache of All Thin Skins.

Sunburn is often extremely painful. In many cases where a girl has been out in the sun practically all day the skin blisters and causes very real suffering. It is a wise girl who knows how to care for her own sunburn, for she will save herself a good bit of pain by doctoring it at once.

When you return to the house after a day in the open and find your arms, neck and face all rose colored from the sun don't stop to question why, but start in treating it at once. The burn never hurts the first day, and sometimes it does not the second day, but you will certainly get it the third unless you are very careful. Don't wait until the skin begins to itch and smart before you put on a cream, but at the first sign of rose color where white usually is start your doctoring at once.

Cocoa butter is excellent to take the sting out of sunburn, and witch hazel cream is another fine emollient. Rub either one in well at the first appearance of the burn and then again the next day, and you will not be bothered so much by the pain and itch.

Entire Wheat Bread.

Use three and one-half pints entire wheat flour, a pint of good white bread flour, a handful of salt, butter half the size of an egg, one-half cupful of molasses, a compressed yeast cake, a quart warm water. Mix dry ingredients together first, then rub in butter. Take one-half cupful of water from the measured quart and dissolve yeast cake in this. Add to dry ingredients, then add molasses, then rest of water. Knead about twenty minutes, using enough white flour to form a soft but not a sticky dough. This might need about an additional pint of white flour. Cover well and put in a warm place overnight. In the morning, when it has risen to top of bowl or pan, turn out on a well floured board and mold into loaves. Allow to rise until leaves reach top of pans and bake in a hot oven thirty-five or forty minutes. When done turn from pans and with a small piece of paper spread butter over top crust of each loaf.

Fashion's Realm

The features that one notices most strongly in the styles for the winter are, first, the one-piece dresses, which hang straight from the shoulder but are held in submission by a belt of the same material or by one of suede or leather, says McCall's Magazine.

Sometimes the straight line of the one-piece dress is interrupted before it reaches the bottom of the skirt. Just below the hips, lower sections are pleated or gathered to the side sections of the waist and form a heading of their own, as is the case in the Princes dress illustrated on the opposite page.

Then there are the blouses which are worn outside of the skirt. These are sometimes of chiffon, often of silk and batiste, and more often of heavier materials to form the blouse to a costume. This style has made the middy particularly popular and brought it up to a degree of smartness that the sport-loving blouse of a year or so ago never dreamed of. Many of these blouses are without fulness across the front and are slipped on over the head.

The skirts one sees, whether gathered, pleated or made with yokes, hang with less flare than they have for a couple of years. In other words, the new silhouette demands straighter-hanging skirts, and the demand is provided for.

Almost all dresses have collars and vests of some contrasting material usually of white. White flannel collars, pinked or pleated around the edges, are the favourite of the women; white satin, taffeta, Georgette crepe and batiste are standbys not to be disregarded.

Capes and scarfs are not to be forgotten this year. They are of velvet, satin or fur, in full, short and medium length. Plush, too, is used to make these attractive wraps, which are vastly becoming to the majority.

The change that has come about in the silhouette for winter is not revolutionary. On the contrary, it is so subtle that perhaps only the most discerning will recognise that there has been a change at all. Skirts are every bit as full as they were before the some are longer, but the exaggerated flare that marked the skirts of last winter is gone, and along with it have disappeared hoops and crinolines. In their places we have straight-hanging skirts and soft draperies, which, appear in afternoon and evening dresses.

For daytime wear, the jumper dress that hangs from the shoulder has gained an enormous following. The low-waisted effect is seen in some of these models, which are frequently worn with loose girdles

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

CHILDREN'S DIET.

What Makes Up a Good Mixed Diet For Small Growers.

"My child eats everything."

This exclamation has a good and a bad interpretation. If "everything" means pickles, cucumbers, meat, coleslaw, pepper hash, kidney stew, cheese, coffee and beer and the child is under eight years of age or even slightly over that mark the mother should be ashamed to say it.

If, on the other hand, she merely means that the child eats everything which she wisely selects for him and is not "finicky"—that is, will eat well cooked cereals, vegetables, fruits, nutritious desserts—if this is what "everything" implies, then the mother has every right to be proud, for such a child has been sensibly fed.

A child should be trained to eat everything you put before him, but do not put "everything" before him which you yourself eat.

A child's stomach is much smaller than yours; therefore he should have less heavy and more frequent meals than you do. In the middle of the morning or afternoon a child should have some milk, with bread or toast or a saucer of cereal. A child not only must keep his body warm, but must build up new muscles, new bones and increase his strength. You should not attempt to increase the strength of his back by asking him to carry a trunk to the third floor. But are you sure you are not asking his stomach to perform just as remarkable a feat by feeding it twice as much as the size of it will allow and its small strength digest?

Your digestive system has had many years of practice in assimilating all kinds of food; your child has only three or four years of such experience behind him. How, then, can you expect him to digest the same foods which you do—meat, cheese, pickles, coleslaw, coffee and other foods so difficult for a child's stomach to handle?

A Bit of Spanish Influence.

Bait trimming of silk or woolen floss in brilliant colors is used to trim the brim and crown of a new sport hat which is very popular just now at the country meets. Leghorn or Milan hemp is chosen for the hats, which have rather high crowns and flaring broad brims.

FASHION HINTS

HOW THE SKIRTS AND SUITS WILL PRESENTLY LOOK.

The foremost tailors of America have never advocated great widths in in suit skirts. In fact, the greater the flare of the jacket the less pronounced has been the spreading line of the skirt—this so that one might act as a foil for the other and a more gracious silhouette be the result.

Certain tailors insist on a comparatively narrow skirt to accompany the new three quarter length coat. The latter are very wide and the effect of a wide skirt would be cumbersome in the extreme. To be sure one can never tell just what will be the accepted mode. A process of selection and elimination is always gone through after the models are brought from Paris.

American women may be slaves to Paris ideas. Nevertheless they have been known to express themselves quite firmly on the matter of dress in declining to endorse this model or to accept that one. The extreme ideas seldom appeal to the average American woman, that is, not when they are in their first season.

Almost in the same breath with which one is told that Josephine modes are to be revived we are assured that for suits Louis XIII effects will be used for demi-costumes. This of course insures a very good prospect for rich brocades, embroideries and other more or less regal garnitures. The incompatibilities of fashion are again demonstrated by the fact that along with first empire dresses Louis Seize costumes are recommended and hats such as were worn by the ladies of the court of Napoleon III and his consort, Eugenie.

Three piece suits have already been advanced for another season of popularity. As a matter of fact, the dress with its coat complement is now accepted as a matter of course. Bullos has advanced one of the earliest models which associates chiffon cloth with velvet and employs fur as the trimming for the jacket.

It is interesting to note that the waist is normal in both the dress and the coat. After all, it is the normal line that is the most generally becoming and doubtless it will be one that will be finally accepted no matter what favor may be tentatively shown to the high waisted and long waisted effects.

"Motorwomen" on the Paris street railways will soon be a reality. Perfect of Police Laurent has issued an order authorising the employment of women. They will first undergo training and then be placed on the lines where the traffic is the lightest. This is only one of a number of steps necessitated by the war for the employment of women labor. Women are now also replacing baggagemen at some of the railroad stations, notably the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean stations. Although the luggage of the travellers they are compelled to carry is sometimes exceedingly heavy, the women are fulfilling their duties uncomplainingly.

Morris Braff of New York, was fined $25 for speeding his automobile along Jackson avenue, Long Island City, by Magistrate Conway, Thursday. Evidently Braff expected such a fine, for with a smile he laid $25 in dimes upon the clerk's desk, with the remark that he wished it was pennies. Then the clerk started to open one of the rolls. The first coin proved to be a Canadian ten cent piece, and the next two were very badly battered. That was enough for Magistrate Conway. The fine was raised to $30, and the dimes returned. Braff then spent some time in the pen while his friends got together and contributed thirty dollars in bills to pay the fine.

A Talk On Rheumatism

Telling How to Actually Cure This Painful Malady

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism who wants to be cured, not merely relieved—but actually cured. The most the rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or linament ever did or can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when this poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new rich blood which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. The truth of these statements has been proved in thousands of cases throughout Canada, and the following cure is a striking instance. Mrs. F. M. Simpson, R.R. No. 1, Blenheim, Ont., says: "For a long time I was confined to my bed, and actually crippled with rheumatism. The trouble first located in my ankle—which was much swollen. I thought it might be a sprain, but the doctor said it was rheumatism and advised me to go to bed so that the trouble would not be aggravated. I did as directed, but instead of getting better it spread first to my right knee, then to my left knee, and then to my arms. The limbs were much swollen, and if I moved them caused me considerable pain. I seemed to get weak in other respects and fell off in weight from 156 to 110 pounds. I had no appetite and seemed to lose interest in everything. One day while reading a paper I came across the case of a rheumatic sufferer cured by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to try them and sent for three boxes. By the time these were gone I had certainly began to improve, and with help was able to get up. Continuing the use of the pills I was first able to go about with the use of a crutch, which, later I discarded for a cane, and then through the use of the pills I was able to throw aside the cane as well, and go about as briskly as I had ever done. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a blessing to me, and I strongly recommend them to other similar suffers."

You can procure these pills through any dealer in medicine or get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Believes She Was Saved From Stroke of Paralysis

All One Side Was Cold and Powerless, when She Began Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced. In this way it is different to other cells of the human body. But feeble, wasted nerve cells may be restored and herein lies hope.

In this fact is also a warning to take note of such symptoms as sleeplessness and loss of energy and ambition, and restore the vitality to the nervous system before some form of helplessness results.

Nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis are the natural results of neglecting to keep he nerves in healthful condition. The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when you suspect there is something wrong, will soon restore vitality to the nervous system, and thereby prevent serious developments.

Mrs. Merritt Nichols, R. R. No. 3, Dundalk, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you the great benefit I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was so nervous I could not sleep, and found it hard to get my work done at all, but, having no help at the time, had to do the best I could. Finally my left arm became powerless and cold, and this continued to get worse until my whole side was affected, head and all. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the first box helped me so much that I used several, and believe that this treatment saved me from having a paralytic stroke. It has built me up wonderfully, and I can recommend it most heartily, believing that if more Nerve Food were used there would be much less sickness."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures in nature's way by nourishing the feeble, wasted nerves back to health and vigour. Fifty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE-PIECE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Here is a model in a one-piece frock that just snaps with smartness, and one that has utility value also.

The frock pictured is of serge; the blouse, or waist, is gathered to a yoke front and back; aside from this, the garment is on the long, loose lines so becoming to all figures and so much the vogue for winter. The front closing is made decorative with loops and buttons, as shown. The waist line has normal placement in this dress, but one may choose a slightly raised waist line.

The collar, of course, claims attention, for isn't it of the latest cut and attractive enough to make the cuffs on rather full sleeves of the same material. The patch pocket at either side corresponds and so does the belt, which brings the fulness into graceful folds.

Many such dresses show fur trimming on collar and cuffs, and all wool poplin, trimmed with brown beaver cloth would be a good choice. When satin or like weave makes the dress for afternoon, then fur around the bottom is excellent, because it suggests warmth. Serge with satin is serviceable and stylish too, if the combination idea is liked. By using the pattern to make this you can have a dress of style and quality at a bargain price.

The dress pattern, No. 8,031, cuts in sizes 36-42. To make in size 36 requires 6¾ yards 36 inch material, with ⅞ yard contrasting goods: or 6¼ yards all one material.

To obtain the pattern send 15c to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

SAYS FIGURES SHOW GERMANY'S HUNGER

ing from the German papers, it is going to be scarcer before the harvest is reaped next year.

BRITISH PRICES SHOW LESS INCREASE.

Prices for food in Great Britain show no sign of falling, but it is alleged that Englishmen are paying less than their enemies for the necessities of life. The English Board of Trade in December claims that, whereas the average increase is the price of staple foods in the United Kingdom since the war began was 84 per cent. on Dec. 1, the corresponding percentage for Berlin had already reached 109.4 in October, and in Vienna it will be as high as 176.7 in mid-November. The London Times, in discussing the report, says:

"The figures are the latest available, but as prices generally are rising in all countries, the difference in date is important in any comparison of relative positions. It has also to be remembered that the figures for Berlin and Vienna no longer afford any index to the state of supplies, and being based on artificially fixed maximum prices, are not comparable with figures which are mainly based on the prices in a free market. The consumption of the principal foods in Berlin and of most of them in Vienna is strictly controlled by a system of rationing."

In England the largest increases in prices have occurred in the case of eggs, sugar, fish, potatoes, and frozen mutton, all of which are between two and three times as dear as they were in peace times. Margarine, milk, and tea show the smallest increases. Among sixteen articles of food for which figures are given in The Gazette butcher's meat costs 9½ cents to 12 cents per pound more than in peace times, according to the cut.

The whole of the ordinary family expenditure has not risen to the same extent as the price of food, and it is estimated that the average increase in the cost of living to the ordinary working class family (including food, rent, fuel, clothing, and light,) is about 60 per cent.

In Berlin prices fell 4.6 per cent. during September, mainly owing to Government action in reducing the maximum prices of war bread, rye, flour, potatoes, and beef. So-called "coffee" was nominally 36 per cent. cheaper, but was a mixture containing only 25 per cent. of genuine coffee.

Rice cost over five times as much as the peace price; eggs and lard more than four times; bacon more than three times, and beef, mutton, veal, pork, split peas, and haricot beans more than twice as much.

In Vienna, by mid-November, margarine was six times as dear as in peace time; bacon and lard more than five times; beef, eggs, and haricot beans more than four times, and pork and foreign butter nearly four times as dear. Potatoes, however, were cheaper than before the war.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

St. John, 11th chap., 28th to 35th verse:

And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister, secretly, saying, The Master is come and calleth for thee. As soon as she heard that she arose quickly, and came unto Him. Now, Jesus was not come into the town but was in that place where Martha met Him. The Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforteth her, when they saw Mary that she rose up hastily, and went out followed her saying "She goeth unto the grave to weep there." Then when Mary was come where Jesus was and saw Him she fell down at His feet, saying unto Him, Lord, if Thou hadst been here my brother had not died. When Jesus therefore saw her weeping and the Jews also weeping which came with her, He groaned in the spirit and as troubled, and said, Where have ye laid him. They said unto Him, Lord, come and see. Jesus wept.

Continuing our subject: Jesus and His disciples were still in the same place. Martha had got a little comfort from that sweet word of Jesus, I am the Resurrection and the Life. Her faith had been revived by the question, Believest thou this? The swelling tide of sorrow in her breast was calmed, for when she had so said she went her way and called Mary.

Those who know Jesus best and have been comforted by His love and care, are the only true friends who can comfort others. We know this by our own experience. Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort, who comforteth us in all our tribulations that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforteth of God. (1st Cor. 3 and 4.) The Lord leads His servants through many trials and troubles that they may be able to help and comfort those who are in trouble.

The last time Jesus was in Judea, the Jews took up stones to stone Him to death. They stoned Paul; they stoned the first martyr, or Stephen, because he said, I see heaven open, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God, and kneeling down praying for his enemies. Perhaps some of these very Jews were bitter enemies of Christ; Martha therefore came in and whispered softly into Mary's ear, The Master is come and calleth for thee. She feared the Jews. Mary was sitting sad and desolate in the cottage at Bethany. It was now the fourth day from the funeral, and yet no comfort had come. Lazarus' seat was empty and his place was vacant now, and Jesus had not yet come. He had sent them the message, This sickness is not unto death yet why does He tarry beyond the Jordan. Has He forgotten to be gracious? Suddenly her sister whispers, The Master is come and calleth for thee. Christ was near the cottage before she knew, so it was on that morning at the Lake of Tiberias, when Jesus stood on the shore and the disciples did not know Him, or that evening when the two disciples went to Emmaus, and Jesus drew near, but they did not know Him. So will He come to us in our dark hours of sorrow and bereavement. Mary arose quickly. It was evident that she was deeply affected for she had sat still in the house; she felt the absence of Christ; she believed His word, but her heart was nearly broken. It is a deep sorrow when natural and spiritual sorrow come together. We can only bear affliction under the sustaining hand of God. Why does the mourner suddenly rise upward and dry her tears, and with eager step leave the cottage door. The Master is come. And such is the presence of Jesus to all His friends when in trouble and sorrow.

When Jesus comes and calls us, our soul revives, and there is health and peace, for He said, In Me ye shall have peace; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Verse 30.

Jesus was still at the same place. Perhaps He had travelled far that day —a long journey and on foot, until He came to the Mount of Olives, and halted beneath the trees that skirt the village of Bethany. Perhaps, he was hungry and thirsty, as He was that day when he sat beside Jacob's well and said, Give Me to drink. The Lord of Heaven and earth travelling the weary wayside of this world, hungry, weary and faint, sitting by Jacob's well. His meat and drink was to do the will of Him that sent Him, and to finish His work. Those that have most of the mind of Christ and the love of God in their hearts will deny themselves the pleasures and the comforts of life for the joy and the satisfaction found in the service of God.

The Jews rose up and followed Mary —they thought she was going to the grave to weep there. This act was the means of bringing some of them to Jesus, for many of the Jews believed on Him.

How wonderful are God's ways of leading men to Christ! One soul is lead like Zaccheus to see and hear a stranger passing by, and salvation comes to him and his house, and he entertains the Lord of Glory. Jesus' name is wonderful, His grace is wonderful. Keep company with the godly and with the saintly. They may lead you to Christ. Mary hurried on over the rocky path. Jesus was standing in the same place where Martha met Him, and as she drew near He bent His compassionate eye upon her. Mary saw and fell at His feet. She wondered why He had not come sooner. This was a mystery to her. She knew that He was her saviour and the Son of God, and that he loved her, and yet she fell at His feet. It is sweet to be able to take Mary's place. The saintliest believers are the humblest and the lowiest. Paul said, I am the chief of sinners. I am less than the least of all saints. The nearer you live to God the more you will see of your own imperfections. Mary utters the same words as her sister said, Lord, if Thou hadst been here my brother had not died.

From this it is plain that the two sisters had often been conversing about Christ's absence, and they were agreed that if Christ had been there, their brother had not died. When Jesus saw her weeping and the Jews weeping, He groaned in the spirit and was troubled; His eye affected His heart, when He saw her weeping — her whom He loved so well—an eminent believer, one whom He had justified. When He saw the Jews weeping (mere wordly friends) He groaned within Himself. So when He saw the widow of Nain he had compassion on her. When He saw the multitudes of Galilee, like sheep without a shepherd, he had compassion on them. He asked, Where have ye laid him. He wanted them to lead Him to the grave. When He saw the cave, and the stone, and the weeping friends, Jesus wept. Sublime and yet human tears. Such a scene earth never looked on the like. Language fails to describe it. Angels would have wondered and would have wished to be present in that weeping gathering; earth will never look upon the like again. Jesus wept, because His heart was deeply touched. He knew that He was to raise him from the dead, and yet He wept because others wept. He wept as our example to teach us to weep with one another, and to show us what was in Him.

We have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities but was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. Heb. 4th, 15th and 16th.

Look to Him who once was willing
All His glory to resign
That for thee the law fulfilling
All His merit might be thine.
Strive to follow day by day,
Where His footsteps mark the way.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland,
352 1-2 Water Street, Peterborough.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

Two Important Conferences Are In Progress

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Interest centred to-day in war, not in peace. Two conferences, the one by the allies, the other by the highest officials of the Central Powers, were cited to indicate that both sets of belligerents intended to make answer to the various peace notes with the force of arms. The Allied conference was at Rome. It was a meeting of the Prime Ministers and Cabinet officials of the Entente nations. It was taken here to forecast a more vigorous prosecution of the war. The German conference was reported in despatches emanating from Vienna, detailing an "important conference" at the field camp of Kaiser Wilhelm.

Colds or Cough SHOULD NEVER BE NEGLECTED

If They Are, Some Serious Lung Trouble Are Sure To Follow

A cold or cough, if neglected, will sooner or later develop into some sort of lung trouble, so we would advise that you get rid of it before it becomes settled. For this purpose we know of nothing to equal Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This preparation has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and has always given universal satisfaction.

Mr. Erwell Bolton, Wilton, Ont., writes: "Last winter I was caught in a storm and had to stay in a barn all night. I caught a severe cold which several medicines failed to cure. I went to some of the best doctors but these failed to do me any good. A friend advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I used three bottles and they gave me instant relief."

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get the genuine, put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and bearing the name of The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 25c and 50c.

The NEW EDISON

Of all the wonders Edison has achieved, none have brought more unalloyed joy than his artistic triumph in the Re-Creation of Music. To think of it!—Through his patient experimenting and study, the world's greatest interpreters of music will never cease to charm the ear. Every shade and tone is preserved for immediate Re-Creation at your will. And this claim, by the way, comes from the most unprejudiced sources—

"Not Possible to Distinguish One from the Other"
—DETROIT FREE PRESS

This is the tribute of a noted critic, and is but one of the many enthusiastic endorsements of the press. It is convincing testimony of the vast difference that lies between the New Edison and the hundreds of makes of "Talking Machines" on the market. Only the New Edison could survive the supreme test of singing and playing in direct comparison with the living artist.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHEN THE HUNT WAS UP

By EDGAR D. PRICE

There had been a painful scene and they had parted forever. Geraldine had carried herself well and had returned the ring with an air of such positive relief that Arthur could not contain himself, and had rushed from her presence to find a place where he could give free vent to his feelings. His man David was packing, and he proposed returning to New York with the dogs, and from there—oh, hang it all, what was the use of planning? His life was blasted.

In another part of the Southampton "cottage" a girl sat dabbling her red eyes with cologne water, while her hostess vainly offered consolation.

"It's quite the thing in fox hunting, I assure you, Jerry," she said helplessly.

"It may be quite the thing to be cruel and cut—cut the poor little helpless thing's t-tail off, but the man that did it shall never m-marry me," declared Geraldine with momentary spirit.

"But the fox was dead before he did it, you know," said the good lady.

"Yes; killed by a pack of horrid dogs urged on by people who will have m-much to answer for hereafter," wept the girl. "Don't ask me to see him again; I'm going to take the afternoon train to New York and leave him here to revel in b-butchery."

The cause of all this woe was a Shinnecock hills fox hunt, with a real fox instead of an aniseed bag. Reynard had led the field a glorious chase, doubling and twisting times without number, only at last to succumb to the hounds. Foremost in the hunt had been that ardent fox hunter, Arthur Chamberlain, who at the death had dashed in among the dogs and secured the "brush" in the most approved fashion, to lay it at his ladylove's feet. The lady so honored unluckily had no appreciation of the act. In fact, her sympathies were distinctly with the fox, and there had been a warm scene, with the results as above noted.

No Geraldine appeared at lunch. Shortly after that Arthur took leave of his hostess, who discreetly forbore to tell him his ex-inamorata would leave on the same train, and, whistling for the two foxhounds Toby and Dan, he moodily strode off to the depot. He was taking his seat in the chair car when a carriage dashed up and a lady alighted and entered the same car. Their eyes met. The lady primly inclined her head and deliberately turned her chair until only the top of her head was visible. The young man ground his teeth.

Miss Geraldine lived up town on the west side of New York in a street numbered among the sixties. Mr. Chamberlain lived on the next block. In fact, the backs of Miss Geraldine's home and the gentleman's bachelor apartments almost faced each other. The block was a solid rectangle built up with brownstone dwellings on the side streets and business places on the avenues, and the roofs, separated by low parapets, were famous places for clothes drying and star gazing.

Arrived in New York, the young gentleman hesitated in doubt of what course to pursue. But Miss Geraldine solved his difficulties by calling an electric hansom and bowling off without a look in his direction.

She found no one home but a servant or two, and after a dismal dinner she sought her apartments to water her couch with tears. Arthur after a tour of the clubs returned to his dwelling with three other desperate souls and proceeded to make a night of it at poker. Toby and Dan, stowed by the thoughtful David in a packing box on the roof, snuffled and yapped in lazy content.

The hours passed; the rattle of chips sounded continuously in the hot room, and David was kept busy making and passing around cooling drinks. Over the silent roofs a late moon rose and bathed them with soft light, the dividing parapets casting black shadows. Into this scene of peace came a smaller shadow, trotting across the lighted spaces and leaping the obstructions. In an instant the dreaming hounds were astir. In another instant a black streak was making along the roofs with the two hounds after it in full cry.

The poker party came to a sudden end, and the youths frantically made for the roof.

"It's a cat! No, by the Lord, it's a fox!" cried the doughty fox hunter as the black streak with the hounds in pursuit, having made the four sides of the block, came sweeping past.

Laughing and stumbling, leaping parapets and catching chins in invisible clotheslines, the four madly followed the chase. Roused by the trampling on the roofs, heads appeared at windows and tremulous cries were made for the police. Far below in the streets plunged in darkness a shrill whistle was heard. Once again pursued and pursuers made their way around the block. The eager hounds were closing fast upon their quarry, when suddenly fox and hounds disappeared.

There were policemen on the roofs now, revolvers in hand, searching for the cause of the uproar. By common consent the four fox hunters abandoned the chase and made a silent return to Arthur's quarters, wondering at the swallowing up of the hunt. Their wonderment was of short duration, for repressed screams were heard coming from the other side of the block, and the bell connected from the street door to the bachelor apartments rang violently. Arthur sprang to the speaking tube and called, "Who's there?"

"It's Anne—Miss Geraldine's maid," an agitated voice replied. "Oh, Mr. Chamberlain, come to our house quick! There's a terrible animal in Miss Geraldine's room and two great mad dogs"—

Arthur had heard enough. In an instant he was flying downstairs four steps at a time and running madly to the opposite side of the block. The house door stood open, and the cook and waitress were whimpering on the steps. No need to ask where Miss Geraldine's room was, for from above came a pandemonium such as two maddened and baffled hounds alone could make. Rushing in, Arthur descried the two dogs making wild efforts to seize a dark object showing gleaming white teeth from the top of a wardrobe. Tipping the heavy piece of furniture, the dark object slipped unwillingly to the floor, where the two hounds pounced on it, and in another instant a dead red fox lay on the floor.

"I trust you will pardon this intrusion, Miss Geraldine," said Arthur wickedly, kicking the dogs away from the fox.

"Oh-h, Arthur, is it you?" said a tearful voice under the bedclothes. "Take care! The horrid thing will bite you!"

"The horrid thing is 'only a poor little helpless fox,' and he's dead as a doornail. I'm going to cut his tail off," declared Arthur heartlessly.

"Cut the brute's head off if you want to," came the unexpected reply. "And now, Arthur, dear, please go away and—and call and see me in the morning."

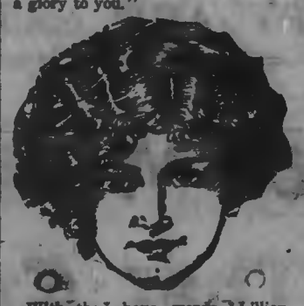
"Where did the creature come from?" asked the blushing Geraldine the next morning. There had been explanations, and Arthur was holding a hand on which a certain ring again sparkled.

"From a bird and animal store around on the avenue. A man called to see me bright and early this morning with a bill for 'one red fox, $30;' cheap enough," said the happy Arthur. "Oh, by the bye," fishing in his coattail pocket, "I've brought you the brush!"

"We'll have it mounted for a souvenir," said the hater of fox hunting.

The Crown of Womanhood

"Uncared for hair cannot be beautiful. There is no part of the human makeup so revengeful as the hair. It cries out: Look at me, care for me, or I will disgrace you! Treat me with consideration and I will be a glory to you."



With the above words, Lillian Russell, an unquestioned authority on feminine attractiveness, places no uncertain value on nice hair as a beauty asset. Unkempt, uncared for hair not only cannot be attractive but is actually a disgrace.

But why have ill-kept, untidy hair? By devoting a few moments regularly to brushing and intelligent application of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, the hair may be made to yield wonderful returns in increased personal charm.

Dandruff is the direct cause of more hair trouble than anything else. The hair becomes thin, harsh, uneven and falls out in quantities. It looks dead and lifeless; there is no luster. The scalp itches.

HERPICIDE will remove the dandruff which is causing all the trouble, clean the scalp, give the hair life, snap and luxuriance. The hair stops coming out, the itching ceases almost at once and withal there is a most gratifying sense of cleanliness.

To the woman who wishes to make the most of nature's gifts by having fluffy, beautiful hair, NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is a toilet necessity. It is exquisitely perfumed and is a delightful hair dressing.

In 50c and $1.00 sizes. At drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere. Guaranteed by The Herpicide Co.

Applications at the better Barber Shops and Hair-Dressing Parlors.

Send 10 cents for sample bottle and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich.

Pharaoh's Palace.

The Museum of the University of Pennsylvania has made public a report from Dr. Clarence S. Fisher, leader of the Eckley B. Coxe, Jr., expedition to Egypt, in which he tells of what appears to be the discovery that Meremptah had in his palace at Memphis an archeological museum something like those of the present day. Meremptah was the son of Rameses the Great, and by many is identified as the Pharaoh of the Oppression as described in the Book of Exodus.

The palace was discovered early in the present year, the report said. It was large and elaborately decorated, but at some time was destroyed by fire, traces of which are abundant. The palace was about 180 feet long and 100 feet wide and contained about 20 rooms. The throne room was a magnificent chamber of about 60x40 feet.

In describing this room the museum announcement stated that "it is probable that this throne room, if not the same, is similar to the one in which Moses and Aaron confronted the Pharaoh, demanding that the people of Israel be permitted to go. The authorities in Egypt admit that a great discovery has been made."

In the rooms were found gold ornaments, scarabs, vessels, and vases. The most interesting find, the report stated, was a collection of relics, partly of the Stone Age and partly of the Sixth Dynasty (about 4500 B.C.), which indicated that Meremptah was a collector much like modern men or nations. The stone implements included knives, razors, sickles, and arrow heads.

BUYING COMMISSIONS.

Bad Old System Now Abolished in Great Britain.

Forty-five years ago the system of purchasing commissions in the Army was abolished by Royal Warrant, signed by Queen Victoria, after the House of Lords had rejected Mr. Cardwell's Bill for the "Abolition of Purchase in the Army." Previous to that first appointments in any branch of the service were purchased, and a regulation price had to be given the Government for same. The system may be said to have arisen from the mode by which many regiments were originally raised. During the great wars with France, when the army was largely increased, the Crown contracted with gentlemen of standing, who received a bounty for every recruit and were appointed colonels of regiments. In some cases, instead of receiving bounty money these gentlemen had the privilege of nominating all the officers, and made good their outlay by selling the commissions, a mode which had indeed prevailed from very early times. Gradually the Crown took the matter into its own hands, raised regiments at its own expense, and recouped itself by the sale of commissions, obtaining a regulation price, which varied from time to time, for each step up to that of lieutenant-colonel, above which there was no purchase. When abolition of purchase was carried Parliament voted a sum of money to compensate the officers holding saleable commissions in order that they might not lose anything through the destruction of the old system.

A regulation price was eventually fixed by the Government, which ran from £420 for a first commission, or ensigncy in the line, to £1,200 for the same position in the Guards. Each step was higher in price, and the lowest that a lieutenant-colonelcy could be obtained for was £4,200 in the line and £9,000 in the Guards. In addition to the Government price, what was termed an over-regulation price had to be paid to the retiring officer. This latter fee sometimes exceeded the regulation price, and had been established by custom, although it was contrary to law. When an officer retired the Government handed over to him the price of his commission, and his successor paid him the over-regulation fee. There were, however, at all times a number of commissions given free to sons of distinguished officers, especially of such as had been killed in action, and a certain number of nominations were in a similar manner made by the Sovereign. In theory the system of promotion by wealth was absolutely indefensible. The hardship of an officer, unable to find money to purchase his next step, being superseded by a junior with more wealthy parents was altogether repugnant to a sense of justice, and the clamor raised in consequence brought about its abolition in the year 1871.

Canadians in London.

The Canadian element is very predominant in London nowadays. Canadian Red Cross ambulances meet one in every street, Canadian nurses pass along every thoroughfare or are to be seen in every teashop and place of amusement or utility—Canadian soldiers throng the streets and the buses, while the "Canada" badge and maple leaves so large as to rival the breadth of an ordinary teaplate, adorn the frontage of women of all ages and types. As for the Hotel Cecil, one jumps straight into the Dominion the moment you step over the threshold. Canadian uniforms predominate entirely here and the soft Canadian drawl which has so familiar and so homelike a sound meets one at every turn. Here General Carson and his staff have their permanent abode and here the Canadian officer on leave or stationed in London lives and entertains and generally infuses Canada and Canada's optimism and spirit into the atmosphere.

Orders for Canada Car & Foundry.

Advices from Montreal report that the Imperial Munitions Board has awarded a contract to the Canadian Car & Foundry Co. for 100,000 steel billets, to cost $700,000. Negotiations on the Russian car order are still pending, owing to the fact that the questions of delivery, in view of the present large demand for other orders, is being discussed.

THE FOLLOWING FIRMS WILL GIVE YOU PROMPT AND SATISFACTORY SERVICE

The City Is Well Provided With Good Roads And Streets That Are Well Cared For

Good Roads have Come to Stay and the Need for Continual Improvement is ever before the Public. Peterboro has Seventy-Two Miles of Concrete Sidewalks. Permanent Paving in Peterboro Totals Four and Two Third Miles. City has an Excellent Engineering Department.

ONE of the first and most lasting impressions left upon a visitor to a city is the character of its streets and walks. In this respect, Peterborough is well to the fore. Its streets are well cared for and it has walks extending to every section of the city, including the more sparsely districts. These are kept in good repair by competent men in the employ of the Board of Works department of the city. During the past year the sum of approximately twenty-two thousand dollars was spent by the Board of Works department. This is not as large as in former years, because of the need for economy owing to the war and the consequent demands made upon the various departments of municipal life. While the needs of the men and their dependents have first call, there must be economy in other ways, and upon the Board of Works department fell some of the need for retrenchment.

Thoroughfares Are Kept In Excellent Condition

In spite of the abnormal strain placed upon the finances of the city, the work carried on during the year 1916 represented an expenditure of about twenty-two thousand dollars. Several new sidewalks were laid and repairs made to a number of walks already laid. This work extended over the summer months and gave employment to a large number of men. Repairs to the roads was another large item. This, together with the liberal use of road oil on most of the streets throughout the city, put the main thoroughfares in excellent shape. A number of streets in the outlying districts were not oiled for the reason that the appropriation was insufficient to provide enough oil to treat all the roads in the city. The main thoroughfares were treated, and in many cases a second application was provided. The Board of Works undertook to oil all roads that had, in previous years, been watered.

City Has Seventy-Two Miles of Concrete Walks

Up to the present time the permanent pavement laid in Peterborough totals four and two-third miles. The pavement consists of a concrete base with an asphalt wearing surface. It is hardly likely that additional pavement will be laid this year owing to the large financial outlay involved and the difficulty of securing help. Peterborough has over seventy-two miles of concrete walks. That this is a big asset to the city goes without saying. Paving a street and laying curbs and sidewalks invariably result in a consequent rise in land values. It also leads to clean, well-kept lawns and leads to the development of a better community spirit. Good roads have come to stay, and the need for continued improvement is ever before the public. Peterborough has made a good showing in this branch of civic improvement, and the future will even see greater efforts in this direction.

The Outfall Sewer Was Completed During Year

In addition to the above, the year 1916 was marked by the completion of the outfall sewer. This work was started over a year ago. Many engineering difficulties hampered the completion of the sewer, including quicksand, which was encountered nearly the whole length of the line. The sewer, which is one and three-tenths miles in length, will serve the entire west-end of the city, north and south. The size of the pipe varies from twenty-four to thirty-three inches in diameter. The sewer was completed at a cost of about seventy-five thousand dollars. It runs for a large part of its length down Park Street, and in the course of time will be linked up with the sewage disposal system which the city is preparing to instal. The matter of acquiring certain lands for the erection of the sewage disposal plant is still an issue between the city and adjoining municipalities, but an early settlement is in prospect.

Programme For This Year Will Not Be Extensive

The programme for this year's Board of Works will be along the same lines as last year. Little new work will be undertaken, but every effort will be made to maintain in a proper state of repair, the streets and sidewalks of the city. For the past year or two it has been the policy of the Council to delay the construction of new work until such time as the war is over and the boys return. The money market will then be easier and more work will be available for those who return from active service. The Board of Works Committee is one of the most important committees of the City Council. At one time the Board was made up of the whole Council, but a good move was made a year ago, when the membership was cut down to six. This resulted in fewer meetings, more business and less oratory. In City Engineer R. H. Parsons, the Board has a valuable man, and his services are a worthy acquisition to the civic administration.

Success For The Russians

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 8.—The Russians have made a big win in Central Roumania.

Admits Russians Were Successful

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—The War Office admits that the Russians launched a counter attack along fifteen miles of a front in Central Roumania and gained some ground.

First, Second and Third Line Trenches Entered On Two Thousand Yard Front

Stormers Entered the Trenches Almost Unopposed—The Germans Did Not Receive Reinforcements or Artillery Aid—The Teutons Disappeared When They Saw the British Coming—Raid Followed a Smashing Bombardment.

DID NOT SEE SINGLE GERMAN

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), January 8. — Patrol engagements in the Bouchavesnes region and the forest of Parroy were reported in to-day's official statement. Elsewhere it was said there was nothing important.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, January 8. — One of the strongest incidents of the war was the Scotch-English raid southeast of Arras on Saturday.

First, second and third line German trenches were entered almost unopposed.

The stormers declared to-day that despite "S.O.S." flares, the Germans did not receive reinforcements or artillery aid, therefore, those in the trenches suddenly disappeared in the dugouts which the British bombed and blew up along the 2,000 yards of front involved.

A Scottish officer who participated in the raid declared he did not see a single German, and did not hear a single machine gun nor a sniper's rifle, although he sat on the parapet of an enemy third line trench, smoked a cigarette, and strolled leisurely back to his own trenches.

The raid followed a five-hour smashing bombardment and was executed under cover of a smoke as well as a shell fire barrage.

GERMAN ATTACKS WERE REPULSED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The Germans launched a fierce attack against the French positions in the Verdun sector, last night, but were repulsed everywhere with heavy losses. French air squadrons bombarded enemy aviation fields at Hencourt, and store houses at Athies.

WHEN TIBETAN BATHES.

Soakes Himself For Hours Removing Several Layers of Dirt.

Near the ancient wall across the road at Yatung, Tibet, there are some remarkable hot springs the water in some cases registers boiling point.

Many Tibetans congregate around these springs to bathe, and the water, which is highly charged with sulphur, is considered specially efficacious in cases of skin disease.

Bathing is a simple proceeding on the part of the Tibetan. All that is considered necessary is to scoop out a depression in the deposit around any spring, and this filled with water, makes the bath. A tent is sometimes thrown over it, and the whole family — men, women and children sit for hours in the steaming water, and they look a different colour after a prolonged immersion, the process removing several layers of dirt.

FORTUNE-TELLER FINED.

London Magistrate Also Advises Deportation.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Madame Elmire Brockaway of Chicago, who was arrested in London last month, charged with fortune telling, was found guilty at the West London Police Court. She was fined £50 and costs, and recommended for deportation.

Madame Brockway, who is known as a psychic demonstrator, came to London several weeks ago to assist in the organization of a new British College for psychic science, and was taken into custody during a general round up by the London police of persons found to be telling fortunes.

She is a woman of 60, with independent means. A son is a captain in the French army, and has charge of all the ambulances of the American Red Cross on the western front.

DR. ADLER TRIED SUICIDE

Man Who Assassinated Austrian Premier Cut Down.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Dr. Friedrich Adler, who assassinated Premier Stuergkh of Austria, has attempted to hang himself in his cell, according to a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, quoting the Kreuz Zeitung of Vienna. Dr. Adler was cut down in time to save his life, but the incident may possibly delay the trial.

Income Is Million a Month; Salary Thousand a Year

DETROIT, Mich., Jan 8.—There isn't a hod carrier in this city who would be surprised as he looks out the window of his limousine en route to and from work to behold traffic policemen in uniforms of cloth and gold. There isn't a washer-woman in the county who would be surprised to see the deputy sheriff, who serves her with a summons because she can't pay for her diamond dog collar, flash on her as his badge of authority a diamond shield carried by four large Ethiopians.

In the first place, Horace E. Dodge, who to-day accepted the position of Under Sheriff here at a salary of $1,000 a year, announced that he would add $800 to that amount and purchase a badge of office. Mr. Dodge can do this because he is a stockholder in the Ford company and, according to recent testimony in court, he is making in the automobile business $1,000,000 a month. Some day, when his income is sufficient, his friends hint, Mr. Dodge may run for Alderman.

Mr. Dodge is the second man of enormous wealth to get into the peace preserving business. A few months ago James Cousens accepted the office of Police Commissioner. Mr. Cousens, according to his friends, could, if he got all his wealth together, pay several million dollars for his badge.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Imperial authorities will send an Aviation Corps to Canada to instruct aviators.

QUESTIONS NEW GERMAN ARMY

Italian Says it is Impossible to Put 2,100,000 Men In Field.

ROME, Jan. 8.—Prof. Colajanni publishes official statistics proving that in the year 1879 only 900,000 males were born in Germany, and since it is well known that 21 per cent. die before the age of 20 it follows that the number of men now available for military service cannot exceed 700,000, of whom in all probability less than 600,000 are fit for military service.

The statement that Germany will have 2, 100,000 new soldiers ready to take the field next year is therefore unfounded, even admitting the possibility that 300,000 men now employed in mines, munition factories, etc., can be sent to the front.

PRESBYTERY WANTS COALITION GOVERNMENT

Gravity of Situation Demands It, Say Manitoba Presbyterians.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 8. — The Presbytery of Winnipeg has adopted a resolution declaring the "gravity of the war situation" to be such that "there should be formed in Canada a coalition Government."

The resolution approved of such a readjustment of our Dominion administration as to remove as far as possible all asperities of party politics.

RIVER TURNS THE SPINDLES FOR 400 ACRES OF MILLS

LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 8. — More spindles are turned in the mills of Lawrence by the power of the Merrimac river than are turned by any other river in any other city in the world. Four hundred acres of mills, employing 40,000 hands, put out 2,000,000 tons of woven fabric each day.

TWO BROTHERS KILLED ON WESTERN FRONT

WINSTED, Conn., Jan. 8.— Max Spiller, of Norfolk, recently returned with Connecticut troops from the Mexican border, where he lost a thumb by the explosion of a gun, has just received word of the death of two brothers in the Western war theatre of Europe; also that of his father, in Sweden, resulting from shock of his sons' death. In all Spiller has lost six brothers in wars, two having been killed in the Boxer uprising, one in the Boer war and one in the Spanish-American War.

BIG INCREASE IN INDIAN OCEAN FREIGHTERS

Teas during the past seven weeks have advanced at the auctions in London, Calcutta and Colombo, from six to ten cents a pound. In addition to this, sea freighters have advanced two and one-half cents a pound. Inevitably this means dearer tea for the consumer, but "BALADA," so far, has only advanced five cents a pound, and whatever the price at any time, the quality will always remain exactly the same.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hiles, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

For an excellent furniture polish mix together half a quarter each of turpentine, paraffin, vinegar and methylated spirit in a pint bottle. When in use shake well and sprinkle a little on a soft rag and well rub on the furniture. Polish with a soft duster.

Ducks Flew 1500 Miles in 50 Hours

From Kingsville, Ont., to Mobile, Ala., in Their Winter Migration

SANCTUARIES NEEDED

Mr. Jack Miner, who maintains the famous sanctuary for wild geese and ducks near Kingsville, Ont., reports a remarkable flight of black and mallard ducks. For years he has attracted these birds to ponds on his farm by providing food for them as they past to and fro on their annual migrations. The ducks he decoys into a shed tags them with aluminum bands and sets them free again. On Dec. 14th last, in the evening, 42 ducks, warned doubtless by instinct of the approaching cold weather, rose from the ponds and resumed their long journey southward.

They were fat, in good condition, fit indeed for "the big jump" across the United States. On the morning of the third day, Dec. 17th, three of these ducks were shot in the Big Bateau, near Mobile, Alabama, by Dr. S. C. Frederick of that city. The bands on their legs bore the post office address "Box 48, Kingsville, Ont." The reverse side of the first band read: "God Loveth a Cheerful Giver." The second carried the message: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The third was blank. It may be explained that Mr. Miner, who is a deeply religious man as well as a general naturalist, has a passion for the adaptation of Scripture texts to all possible occasions. The flock from which Dr. Frederick bade his bag of three included 12 or 14 birds out of the 42 that had left Kingsville less than three days previously.

The distance between Kingsville and Mobile is 1,400 or 1,500 miles if the voyage was made in a straight line and the birds may have been in a straight line, and the birds may have been in the Big Bateau several hours or even half a day before they fell to the sportsman's gun. To make the passage in 50 hours, without stopping for food or rest they would have to travel at an average rate of 30 miles an hour. The probability is that they made the journey at 50 or 60 miles an hour, with over-stops at convenient points. The flock which left Miner's on Dec. 14th had experienced guides, for it contained the famous black duck, Delilah, which was tagged in 1912, and has returned every season since, and several birds tagged in 1913. Mr. Milner labelled 54 in 1915 and 53 this year. Only 20 of the tagged birds visited him this last season.

The Miner farm was visited by 52 wild geese this fall. All left for the South on the evening of Dec. 15th, after enjoying the owner's hospitality. Geese are not readily caught or decoyed and as a result Mr. Miner has been able to tag only 11 out of the hundreds that come annually to his place. Of the tags attached to the 11 no less than six have been returned from points as far distant as Hudson Bay and the State of Georgia. The hunter is busy everywhere and if the country would preserve the most interesting of the feathered species it must have more birds sanctuaries together with a deeper and more general regard for the timid wild things which are at home in the heavens.—From Toronto News.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER XXIII

When Mary Burton presented herself in the anteroom of the suite whose ground glass doors bore the legend, "Edwardes and Edwardes," and asked for the banker, a man with a pale and demoralised face gazed at her blankly. Could any one seek to claim except on the most urgent business, one minute out of these crucially vital hours? They were hours when the real target of the whole panic-making struggle for survival, into each relentless instant a separate that fell softly about her shoulders. "I

"I am Mary Burton," she said simply; and the man stood dubiously shaking his head. His nerve-racked condition could only realise the name, Burton—and in these offices it was not just now a favoured one.

"As he stood, barring the way to an inner office marked "private," the door opened and Jefferson Edwardes came hurriedly out. He looked as she had never seen him look before, for deep lines had seared themselves into his face, aging it distressingly, and the mouth was drawn as that of a man who has been called back from the margin of death. But his eyes held an unwavering fire and his jaw was set in the pattern of battle. Mary remembered a painting of a solitary and wounded artilleryman leaning up against a shattered field gun amid the bodies of his fallen comrades. The painter had put sternly into the face an expression of one who awaits death but denies defeat. Here, too, was such a face. The man, hastening out halted suddenly. Then he stepped back into his own office, silently motioning her to follow.

"It has come," he told her quietly. "We should have expected it, yet we were taken by surprise. To-day tells a grim story."

"What does it all mean?" she pleaded. She stood close with her face almost as dead white as the ermine against the light at his back, somehow read the papers, and I came at once—to be near you in these hours. What does it mean?"

"I can't explain now," he answered in the quick utterance of one to whom time is invaluable. "Now every minute may mean millions—even human lives and deaths. I told you he must trample down the innocent and the ignorant to come within striking distance of me. He is doing it. The bottom has dropped out of everything—pandemonium reigns. Each minute is beggaring hundreds—each half-hour is sending old houses to the wall, and shattering public confidence. By this afternoon the country will be in the lockjaw paralysis of panic—unless we can stem the tide. Will you wait here for me? I must go to Malone."

"And there is nothing I can do—nothing?" Her voice was agonised, and with his hand on the nob, he abruptly wheeled and came back. He caught her fiercely in his arms, and held her so smotheringly to his breast that her breath came in gasps. She clung to him spasmodically and the lips that met his were hot with a fever of fear and love. "Nothing I can do," she whispered, "though I am—the Helen who brought on the war?"

"Yes," he spoke eagerly, passionately, and she could feel the muscles in his tensed arms play like flexible steel as her hands dropped to rest inertly upon them. "Yes, there is something you can do—something you are doing! You are giving me a strength beyond my own strength to fling myself on these wolves and beat them back. You are giving me a battle lust and a hope....Now I must go."

She released him and forced a smile for his departure, then sank into a chair—his chair by a paper-littered desk—and her eyes, very wide and fixed, gazed ahead—at first unseeing. Yet, after an interval, they began to take in this and that detail of the place, where she had never been before.

This was his office, the workshop in which he carried on his affairs and the affairs of the concern which had its foundation in unshaken ideals and high honor. In an intangible fashion its inanimate accessories reflected something of himself. On one wall from a generous spread of moose antlers, hung a rifle and a pair of restrung snowshoes: reminders of the open woods he loved. There were autographed portraits of many men whose names were men of achievement and one, in a morocco frame, surmounted by a gilt crown, attested the personal regard of a reigning monarch. With clenched hands and a grim determination to divert her mind from the danger of madness, she went about the walls, reading those brief tributes to the man she loved. Then she came back and picked up a gold frame which rested on his desk, where as he worked, his eyes might never be long without its view—and she was gazing into her own eyes. She glanced out across the steep-walled, fog-reeking canons where Finance has its centre and whence its myriad activities palpitate through arteries of masonry and nerves of wire. He was out there somewhere, in the max of that incalculably destructive machine, fighting its determination to grind him between its wheels and cogs, and teeth. Mary Burton shuddered, and tried by the pressure of her fingers to still the violent throbbing of her temples.

Then her eyes began absently studying the inscriptions on the windows of the next building, beyond an intervening court, and she smothered an impulse to scream as a sign across several broad panes flared at her in gold-leaf.

"Hamilton Montagu Burton." A bitter fascination held her gaze there. She saw offices teeming with the fevered activity of a beehive—and another window showed a room—where the electric lamps shone on emptiness. After she had watched it for a time, a solitary figure came into view, and stood by the ledge looking out. It was her brother, and though, through the gray fog, he was silhouetted there against the light at his back, something in the posture revealed his mood of Napoleonic implacability. It was as though he were, from an eminence, actually viewing the battle whose secret springs his fingers controlled, and as though he were well pleased.

Jefferson Edwardes had hurried out with a feeling of renewed strength—it was to him as though a promise of hope had been vouchsafed in a moment of despair. At Malone's office he met Harrison, Meegan, and several others. The old lion of the Street himself was slamming down the telephone as the newcomer entered.

"I've been talking with Washington," he announced, and his voice was one of steel coolness. As such an hour as this Malone wasted no minim of strength in futile anger. That belonged to other moments. "We have done what we could. It is not enough. We must do more. We have pegged those stocks where the slump would be most demoralising and already this high-binder, Burton, has smashed those pegs like match-stems. We have sent money to a dozen banks that seemed hardest pressed, and scores are sending out calls for help. Good God, gentlemen, it's like sweeping back the sea with brooms."

"Why did you send for me?" demanded Edwardes, though he knew.

"To ask your aid," came the crisp reply. "This is a general alarm. The next few hours will roar to the continuous crash of falling banks—many of them banks that have a close relationship to you, Edwardes. Once more we must go to the rescue, and it will take fifty additional millions. Otherwise—panic unparalleled. We expect you to stand your pro rata."

"Gentlemen," said the latest comer, bluntly, "this raid is aimed primarily at me—its principal object is my destruction. Already I am hit for millions. I, too, was about to call for help from you. When this succession of crashes comes, Edwardes and Edwardes may be among the ruins."

The bushy brows of Malone came together in astonishment. "Great heavens, man! Edwardes and Edwardes is a synonym for Gibraltar."

"And under heavy enough artillery—" Edwardes spoke with bitter calmness—"Gibraltar would be a synonym for scattered junk. What news from Washington?"

"Washington has called Burton on the telephone. The Secretary of the Treasury has failed to connect with him. He does not acknowledge telegrams. He is ignoring the government and treating the President with contempt. He wants to have to-day for his massacre—and to talk about it to-morrow. We have sent repeatedly to his office. He cannot be reached."

"That effort may as well be dropped." Edwardes shrugged his shoulders wearily. "He will have his day—and leave to-morrow to itself."

"And by the Immortal!" For an instant a baleful fire leaped into Malone's face. "We will have to-morrow. Every sinew of American finance shall be strained against him. But to-morrow may be too late. Can you hold out?"

Edwardes smiled grimly. "I'm trying like all hell," he said. "I've not laid down yet."

* * *

It was two o'clock and the Stock-Exchange was a shambles. Every security in the Street was down to panic figures and plunging plummet-like to further depths. At shortening intervals over the hoarse shriek of the floor's tumult boomed the brazen hammer blows of the huge gong, which should sound only twice each day. At every recurring announcement of failure a wall shaking howl went up and echoed among the sixty-two golden blossoms of the ceiling.

The faces of the men to whom these cracked and hoarsened voices belonged had become bestial and wolfish. Where the morning had seen well-groomed representatives of Money's upper caste, the afternoon saw a seething mass of human ragamuffins, torn of clothing, sweat-drenched and lost to all senses save those twin emotions of ferocity and fear. Back and forth they swirled and eddied, and howled like wild things about carrion. At one side, panting, dishevelled and bleeding from scratches incurred in the melee, bulked the gigantic figure of Len Haswell. He had no need now to bellow in a bull like duel of voices and ferocity. The stampede had been so well put into motion that the floor was doing for him his deadly work of price smashing. Telegraph wires were quivering from every section of the United States to the tune of —"Sell—cut loose—throw over!"—A universal mania to get any price for anything was sweeping the land like a conflagration. To-morrow would bring those reflexes from to-day when banks and trust companies from the Lakes to the Rio Grande would topple in the wake of their metropolitan predecessors. Ruin sat crowned and enthroned, monarch of the day and parent of a panic which should close mills, and starve the poor and foster anarchy — but Hamilton Burton's hand was nearer Edwardes' throat.

Staples and his twenty co-operators fought on doggedly, grimly, to turn the tide before the close, but the nation was made and the men who fought and clamored here in this pit of its bowels were the most violent maniacs.

Are You Intoxicated?
The question is not as impertinent as it sounds. You may be a real teetotaler and yet be "intoxicated"—that is, poisoned by the gases that come from imperfect digestion. The products of food putrefaction are taken up by the blood and often poison the entire system. Cut out meats and starchy foods for a while. Eat Shredded Wheat with milk or cream for breakfast; eat it with stewed fruits and green vegetables for dinner or supper. It will cure auto-intoxication and make a new man of you. All the meat of the whole wheat in a digestible form. A perfect meal at lowest cost. Made in Canada

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. S., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children often drank a whole bottle if they were permitted."

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headaches, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.B., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

DISINFECTION.

DISINFECTION means the destruction of infective agents. It includes the various measures employed during the course of a communicable disease or after the patient has recovered or died. Examples of disinfection used in the course of an infectious or communicable disease are those employed in disinfecting sputum from open tuberculous cases, stools of typhoid, or cholera patients, or the secretions from the mouth and nose of a patient ill of diphtheria. It is especially important that the family be made familiar with the means of carrying on this form of disinfection. The tuberculous sputum and secretions from mouth and nose of diphtheria cases should be burned, the stools are held in vessels to which milk of lime has been added, and then buried a foot or two under ground, away from any source of water supply. Most important it is that the hands of nurses and attendants should be washed after each contact with the patient. Other members of the family should avoid kissing the sick person and the patient's food utensils should be boiled after each use.

On the recovery or death of the patient the room occupied by him should be thoroughly renovated and disinfected. Many people think that such disinfection means fumigation by the gases of sulphur or formaldehyde. Of much greater importance are removal of curtains and carpets, their exposure for a few days to outside air and sunlight, the scrubbing of floors and woodwork with hot water and soap, and the wiping of walls and ceiling with cloths wet in 1 in 20 carbolic acid solution, or 1 in 1000 bichloride of mercury solution. Fumigation would be of value in destroying infection in rooms if it were thoroughly carried out. In many cases it is so badly done that it is a useless expense, and is not advised by the Health Department unless carried out under the direct supervision of the M. O. H. In most cases it is not required. Many municipalities such as New York, Brooklyn, and Toronto have abandoned fumigation as a routine measure.

Other means such as those outlined are quite as effective and are comparatively inexpensive.

The Provincial Board issues a pamphlet giving full directions regarding disinfection. It is sent free to anyone who asks for it.

PNEUMONIA AND THE BABY.

Many mothers are afraid to let their babies out of the house after the first spell of cold weather. We know of children in our schools who are "sewed up" in their clothes when the first snow falls and remain sewed until the spring comes; but we know, too, that a considerable number of Ontario mothers keep their babies indoors all winter. Fresh air and sunlight are two important needs of the baby—and he needs them in the cold as well as in the warm weather.

The baby must have some fresh air every day. He may sleep outdoors in the dry days of winter and summer, if dressed warmly and sheltered from the wind. If necessary, a hot water bottle or a heated brick may be placed in the carriage. If the weather is bad or severely cold, dress the baby as for going out and place him in his carriage or crib in his room. Open the window, preferably one with the sun shining in and on the side of the house sheltered from the wind, and let the baby have his afternoon sleep in the fresh air.

The window in the baby's room should be left open at night—if only a little, even on the coldest nights. A baby who has plenty of fresh air is not liable to catch a cold when the slightest draft blows on him.

Do you know that during last year (1916) nine hundred and twenty-one (921) Ontario babies, one year and under, died from pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia? Pneumonia in the baby usually begins with a cold. Try to prevent your baby catching cold:—

Do not let the baby near people who have colds, because colds are spread by contact with those suffering from them.
Never allow the baby to be kissed on the mouth.
Keep the baby out of drafts.
Do not let the baby play on the floor in winter. Remember the floor is the coldest (and usually the dirtiest) part of the room. The baby will be safer in his crib or in a large box or clothes-basket because the sides will protect him from drafts.

If the baby does catch cold, the best treatment is to give him a dose of castor oil. Put vaseline or lanoline in the nostrils, and rub it on the outside of the nose freely. Wrap him up warmly and give him plenty of fresh air and sunshine. Cold weather cannot hurt a baby if he is warmly dressed.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LOVE'S INTUITION

By MARY WOOD

Above the shrill wail of the crickets rose the hum of feminine voices. Under the green apple boughs the hammock convention was in full swing. Miss Maybrick called it a hornets' nest and preferred the doubtful coolness of the piazza. But, then, she was a college professor, too superior to appreciate the joys of the younger set.

Jane Carew, however, sometimes agreed with her. This afternoon she hid her face behind a book, while girlish fancies carried her far above the swaying leaves up into the perfect blue of the July sky. How lovely nature was this summer, how full life of new delights!

Miss Maybrick's name brought her back to earth again: Miss Maybrick, the one cloud in her sky.

"Oh, yes, she approves of him," saucy Madge was saying. "She can put up with his sunburned face, roughened hands and the general boorishness of a farmer. But I suppose at her age any man is acceptable. To tell the truth, I have almost reached that condition myself in this man forsaken spot." And she shook her head in mock despair.

"Jane agrees with her," some one added a little maliciously. "She never seems to mind sharing his attentions with her."

A book went down with a crash and angry spots of scarlet glowed in Jane's cheeks as she said defiantly: "John Staunton is not a boor; he is a gentleman. Just because he scorns to talk the twaddle that men usually think good enough for us girls you vote him a boor. He often makes me ashamed of the little I know, and the books he lends me have opened up a new world, a world bigger and better than all the flirting and shams and heartaches that go to make up society. No wonder he likes to talk to Miss Maybrick. She's worth the whole lot of us when it comes to knowing the things that are worth while!"

The girl stopped short with a gasp as she realized the horrified hush which had fallen on the circle. "Oh, what have I said?' she cried and buried her face in her cushions.

But Madge's gay voice was tender as she stroked the brown head. "You've read us a lecture, Janie, dear," she said gently, "but I fancy we needed it a bit. It's horrid to talk about one of your friends the way we talk about Staunton, and we ought to ask your pardon. As for Miss Maybrick, she's a stuck up old thing, and you're ever so much nicer than she in spite of all she knows. Just wait till Cousin Alex comes next week, and see the new world that he opens to you. He is really literary and writes things for other people to read."

Jane's face was still hidden. She was battling to overcome her tears and even harder to drive out of her heart the unreasonable jealousy of the older woman that somehow had crept into it. The time had been when she would have scorned her as a rival, but love had made her humble. Youth and beauty seemed of small weight to cast into the scales against years of scholastic training and study.

Cousin Alex came. He was a slim, dapper young man, with an important manner rather at variance with his size. But he had a way of retailing old jokes that made them seem new and a stock of compliments suited to every age and was therefore greatly in favor among the guests at the sleepy old farmhouse. As befitting his pretensions as a journalist he rattled on unceasingly about books and literature. He knew this man and that book, and, above all, he was one whose name should some day stand foremost in the world of letters. The date was not yet set, but he spoke of "his novel" mysteriously, even reverently, and his feminine audience was accordingly impressed.

More or less unwillingly Jane was compelled to listen to many of these predictions, for "Cousin Alex" at once developed a fondness for her society. Perhaps certain glances that Staunton cast in his direction added zest to the chase. Perhaps it was the elusive fashion in which the girl received his advances. Certain it is that a week's time had earned him the very fitting name of "Jane's shadow."

Yet to Jane herself each day seemed to bring more unhappiness. Staunton came as often as ever, but at sight of Alex by her side he left the laughing group to chat with Miss Maybrick in intimate aloofness. And as the girl saw the door to the beautiful new world closing because the hand of him who held it open was withdrawn the pain and weariness of her old frivolous life seemed almost past bearing.

Her eyes were more wistful than she knew one evening as she saw a tall, muscular figure swing up the walk with the easy, confident stride of the man who was master of his fate. Staunton's face softened as he met them, and, though Cousin Alex Hamblin was on hand, as usual, he settled himself on the top step with the air of a man who had come to stay. The brown eyes were downcast now, but a shy blush of pleasure still flushed her cheeks.

There was always a visible air of constraint between the two men, but Hamblin rose manfully to the occasion. Here was a most longed for opportunity to prove to Miss Jane that Staunton was but a boor of a farmer, after all, and no match for a man of the world like himself.

If the older man detected his half veiled tone of patronage, he only smiled quizzically. Indeed his position soon grew more untenable than that of his adversary. As the conversation ranged from books to men and back to books again Jane saw, with a thrill of pride, that Staunton more than held his own. What is more, he held his temper, a precaution neglected by the other.

At last the talk fell upon one of the recent novels, a book of unusual strength and breadth of view. Jane had read it several times, for it had seemed to point her to the new life she longed to live. Staunton was silent, as though in unspoken condemnation. Thereupon Hamblin became an enthusiastic defender, and openly scoffed at his lack of appreciation.

A shadow crossed the moonlit porch, but the three did not see Miss Maybrick till her voice broke in on the controversy.

"You would not expect Mr. Staunton to criticise his own book, would you?" she said calmly. Then, as her ear caught Jane's low exclamation of wonder, she added in a tone of surprise: "Had you not guessed that he was an author, Miss Carew? I heard that you defended him very eloquently one afternoon in the orchard and said a good word for me too. For that I want to thank you."

Staunton's face was turned toward the blushing girl, and in full moonlight Miss Maybrick could read his secret. If it sounded the deathknell to some hope of her own heart, gratitude to her champion made her lead the bewildered Alex for a walk down the lane and a gradual restoration of his self confidence.

"And I have to thank you, too, Jane," Staunton said tenderly.

But he took her down to the orchard and told her in his own way.

"How did you guess that I was not the farmer I pretended to be?" with a hint of wonder under his gladness.

Jane raised a face radiant with the realization that the new world was opened forevermore. "Just because you are you," she said joyously. "Love is not always blind."

HAD INDIGESTION
COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitated feeling in it.

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lazare Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that bad I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B., has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles.

Lectured by Carlyle.

There are some amusing memories at Kyleakin, in Skye, of a visit once made there by Carlyle traveling in the train of Lady Ashburton. The Kyleakiners felt a lively curiosity concerning the distinguished author, and whenever he appeared in public he was surrounded by a crowd of admiring men, women and children who had heard sensational reports concerning his "cleverness as a scholar." Carlyle seemed to like this hero worship until these admirers clustered round him while he was in the midst of his sea bath one day. Then he assailed them in language much more emphatic than elegant, which soon made them take to their heels and scamper off with all speed out of his sight. Lady Ashburton had prayers with her daughter and servants morning and evening, but the sage was never present. During these periods Neil MacInnes, the innkeeper, used to relate, "he would lead me to the coffee room, and there, laying hold of me by the coat buttonhole, he would lecture to me for half an hour on end on all sorts of subjects, and he would be so intent on it that he wouldn't allow me to put in a word. Fancy," said Neil, "that I should be lectured to in such a way by Tommy Carlyle!"

Great Men and Their Opinions.

Dr. Johnson in all his greatness defied the world of fashion and opinion, living the life of a sloven. Our own Dr. Franklin was like the Englishman in some respects, and he appeared to be fond of imitating him in others, for he persisted in wearing a shaggy, shabby old cap even among the servants and crowned heads of the old world when he was the United States minister at the court of France.

Every schoolboy has heard how Nero defied public opinion, living in riot and revelry when the souls of his countrymen were in woe and blood. Napoleon rubbed his hands over burning Moscow, saying, "This is comfortable." Half a million soldiers were at the same time reading the doom of death in the lurid flames.

It was the conflict of opinion which gave birth to the maxim that "Where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise." Correctness and taste, even these frequently depend upon the mental standpoint of the individual sitting in the judgment seat.

The Golf Helmet.

There is a new model of golf cap which much resembles a policeman's helmet and has a little patent kid chin strap. The material is linen or satin and is covered over with a handmade fish net. The front is decorated with an embroidered appliqué.

The New Petticoats.

White petticoats of batiste or very thin silk are made with a deep ruffled flounce which measures from three to five yards round. These are to be worn under the net and organdie dresses, which require voluminous petticoats to display their charms.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musssy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A FAMOUS BATTLEGROUND.

Picardy is Scene of British Victories of Agincourt and Crecy.

If historical associations inspire to brave deeds, the British forces in their offensive against the Germans along the Somme River should be heartened to extraordinary acts of valor by the thought that they are fighting in Picardy, says a war geography bulletin of the National Geographic Society.

This ancient province of France, now divided into four departments—the Somme, Oise, Pas-de-Calais, and Aisne—has two battlefields whose very names quicken the pulse of Englishmen, for it was at Crecy that the Black Prince won his spurs, and Agincourt that Henry V., commanding his yeomen with their cloth-yard bows, utterly overthrew the flower of French chivalry.

Picardy is a treasured name in romantic literature and in French history. It had a literature of its own in the twelfth century and its soldiers were among the most valiant in France, being known as the Gascons of the North.

The province was a natural battleground for the French and English during the Hundred Years' War, for its shores extend along the North Sea and the English Channel, from the River, Aa, above Calais, to a point below Dieppe. Fifteen miles north of Abbeville, one of the principal cities of Picardy, is Crecy, where, until late in the nineteenth century, there still stood the old windmill from which Edward III. of England in 1346 watched his beloved son, the first Prince of Wales, at that time only 16 years of age, triumph over Philip of Valois. On this occasion the English were outnumbered four to one, and they wrought terrible havoc among the enemy, the losses of the vanquished being variously estimated at from 10,000 to 20,000. One of those who fell in this fight was the chivalrous John, King of Bohemia, who, although blind, led a heroic charge for his French ally. Some historians trace the Prince of Wales' crest of three ostrich feathers and the motto "Ich dien" (I serve), to this battle, the Black Prince adopting them from the fallen John in memory of the event.

Less than 20 miles northeast of Crecy is Agincourt, where English archers, nearly 70 years later, after letting fly their clouds of arrows against the heavily armored nobles, attacked them with hatchets as they floundered helplessly in mud. Five thousand Frenchmen of noble birth, including their commander, d'Albret, constable of France, fell in this battle, while the estimate of English losses was astonishingly low, some chroniclers giving only 13 men at arms and 100 foot soldiers.

Several towns of Picardy—Amiens, Soissons, and Beauvais—owe their names to the ancient tribes which inhabited this section, known as Belgica Secunda, when the Romans maintained armed camps along the valley of the Somme. In the third century Christianity was introduced, and St. Quentin, from whom the important town 20 miles east of Peronne gets its name, was martyred at that time.

Picardy was the heart of Merovingian France in the fifth century, for Clovis named Soissons as his capital, while Charlemagne designated Noyon as his principal city, and the later Carolingians in turn similarly honored Laon.

By the treaty of Arras in 1435 the royal towns of the Somme Valley were ceded to Burgundy, but 42 years later, after the death of Charles the Bold, Louis XI. regained them. During its brief eras of peace the province thrived as a centre of the weaving industry, Flemish immigrants having introduced the art.

Change in Shell Steel.

A halt in the manufacture of shells in Canada for the Allies has temporarily been called, as a result of changes in the specifications of the steel required, which have just been made by the Imperial authorities.

The change in the requirement of steel of a higher tensile strength than had hitherto been specified. It will, of course, be quite possible to manufacture this steel in Canada as hitherto, but as large orders for steel of the quality formerly suitable have been given, and there is a large stock of manufactured shells on hand, some inconvenience will be caused if these have to be made over again.

Large orders for shells of 95 and other high calibres have recently been placed in the United States, and it is understood that others will be distributed in Canada.

The first samples of time fuses produced at the loading plant established in Montreal by the Munitions Board have successfully passed the tests. No shipments have yet been made, however, it is understood, and it is not altogether likely that the board's expectations as to early delivery, expressed during the fuse contracts enquiry, will be realized.

Hand grenades, the weapons which are proving so regular and effective in the present war, are now being manufactured in Canada. They are being loaded, however, in Great Britain.

STRICKEN IN THE STREET
Completely Restored To Health By "Fruit-a-tives"

382 St. Valier St., Montreal.

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years, and my weight dropped from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Then several of my friends advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I began to improve almost with the first dose, and by using them, I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble—and all pain and Constipation were cured. Now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough". H. WHITMAN.

Sharks Off Nova Scotia.

Sharks, said to be as large and numerous as those which recently raided the bathing beaches and inlets of New Jersey, are now in the coast waters of Nova Scotia. There has been no boastful reference to the presence of these man-eaters from points in Nova Scotia, but it was learned in Ottawa recently from Parliamentarians that the sharks are there in considerable force, and that they are distributed all along the coast. Old inhabitants who have followed the sea, etc., have offered the explanation that the Gulf Stream has slipped its cable and is now wandering in pastures new, bringing the sharks along.

Severe Headaches And Pains in the Back

Resulted From Deranged Kidneys and Constipation of the Bowels

It is in vain to try to regulate and restore the healthful action of the kidneys until the liver and bowels are set right.

And just here is where so many kidney medicines fail. Kidney derangements almost invariably begin with constipation and torpidity of the liver. The whole work of filtering the blood is thrown on the kidneys, and in time they fail to stand the strain. The poison in the system gives rise to severe headaches, pains in the back and tired, depressed feelings.

Because they act directly on the liver and bowels, as well as on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are eminently successful in the treatment of kidney derangements.

Mr. William Loney, Marysville, N. B., writes:—"I am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anybody who is suffering from kidney trouble or constipation. I suffered for a long time from kidney disease and pains in the back, but have found that by using one pill a week the kidneys and bowels are kept in good order, and I do not have any more pains in the back or head like I used to have. I was also a great sufferer from piles, and could get no relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ailment is entirely cured now, and we always keep both the pills and the ointment in the house for use when they are needed."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. F. Saunders, Town Marshal, who writes that Mr. Loney's letter is true and correct.

MANUFACTURERS, DOCTORS AND LABOUR MEN DISCUSS CHANGES FOR THE COMPENSATION ACT

OVER TWO MILLION DOLLARS PAID IN 1916 BY COMPENSATION BOARD

The following is an official statement of the Workmen's Compensation Act for the past year's work submitted to the conference: "The net total assessments collected during the year were $1,767,479.40, and the amount of compensation awarded was $1,559,759.01. This is exclusive of Schedule 2 industries, in which the compensation amounted approximately to $450,000, bringing the total compensation awarded during the year to $2,009,759.01, or an average of about $6,700 each working day.

"The total number of accidents reported in Schedule 1 industries during the year was 31,264, in Schedule 2 4,898, making a total of 36,099."

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Doctors, labour men and employers threshed out their differences before members of the Ontario Cabinet to-day in regard to the operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Large delegations from manufacturers, labour, and medical organizations were heard by a committee consisting of Premier Hearst, Hon. L. B. Lucas, Attorney-General; Hon. Findlay McDiarmid, Minister of Public Works, for the purpose of considering amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, with regard to medical and hospital service.

"I am sure progress has been made towards a common ground. Some speakers, particularly the manufacturers, have asked for the privilege of submitting a scheme. The Government will be glad to have it at the earliest moment—perhaps a week—so that we can arrive at some arrangement to remove existing difficulties," was Premier Hearst's answer at the end of the hearing.

DOCTOR'S COMPLAINT.

Dr. E. E. King, representing the Ontario Medical Council, the Academy of Medicine, and the Ontario Medical Association, read a report of the committee representing these bodies, which was in part as follows:

"Compensation for a medical and surgical treatment of injured workmen has been entirely omitted in the Act.

"Notwithstanding our objections, every phase of medical and surgical attendance was omitted. We were promised that, if we would give our aid to the working of the Act, an amendment would be brought in to the Act, providing for medical and surgical attendance.

CHARITY ATTENDANCE.

"While the injured workmen have been attended willingly and freely, as medical men are wont to attend their case, a habit has been developed by employers of sending their injured workingmen to the hospitals and free clinics to receive attention, such as is received by the indigent and those unable to pay. It is undoubtedly thought by some that the surgeon and physician each is paid from the hospital funds. Such, however, is an erroneous idea, as there are no paid salaries nor fees to any physician or surgeon on the staff of any of the hospitals or clinics in Ontario. This method of dealing with these accident cases is a great injustice to the profession and to the hospitals, and incidentally to the Government, because all patients entering the out department, as well as those entering the hospital itself, are a tax on the community for their maintenance, the same as all other charity cases. It is the opinion of this committee that the workman does not desire to pose as a charity patient."

PLACED IN A WORSE POSITION

Hon. Mr. Lucas: "Has the Act placed you in a worse or a better position than you were prior to the passing of the Act?" Mr. King: "In a worse position."

"Why is that?" asked Mr. Lucas "Because the large employer formerly had an interest in the workmen and saw to it that the doctor was paid for his services, and now he very often gets nothing, because the employers who now contribute through the Act do not think they are under any obligation to pay for medical services."

"Was that done by voluntary arrangement between the worker and employer?" asked the Attorney-General. "It was voluntary so far as we were concerned and it was the common practice," said Dr. King.

Mr. Lucas: "You complain of this practice being departed from?" Dr. King: "Yes. Now the employers allows the medical profession to be paid charitably or otherwise."

COULDN'T ATTACH MEN'S MONEY.

Mr. Fred Bancroft for the labour men, said they had had the question of a schedule of rates for medical men in mind, but thought it would be better left with the doctors. He strongly repudiated any attempt to attach part of the workmen's compensation for medical services. "It is not in accordance with the spirit of the Act" he said, and never was intended. "We want the doctors fairly treated, but they must not be allowed to attach the men's money."

Mr. Bancroft urged the placing of the responsibility of medical service and hospital treatment upon the manufacturers.

BURDEN ON INDUSTRY.

Mr. Lucas: "You are placing an additional burden on industry and employers more than was contemplated by the commissioner who submitted the Act. It was intended that the compensation was generous enough to enable workmen to pay their own medical service."

Mr. Bancroft: "If Chief Justice Meredith had had the information we have on the low rate of wages obtaining, he would not have fixed the compensation at 55 per cent."

Dr. Ferguson agreed with Mr. Bancroft that the compensation to workmen was not sufficient to enable them to discharge their medical liabilities.

Mr. James Simpson, representing the Trades and Labor Congress, pointed out that the value of the dollar had depreciated to 55 or 60 cents so that the same rates were not applicable or just at present.

"It comes down to a question of the workers themselves paying, only the manufacturers have an organization to assess in a scientific way. The manufacturers should be magnanimous enough to say to the employes who are producing the wealth of Ontario: "We will pay the service of medical service and hospital treatment,'"

MADE LIKE CHARITY.

Ald. Gibbons pointed out that the men were made to feel as if they were accepting charity. "It is a case of the manufacturers having to pay and then they will recompense themselves by raising the price of their commodities."

Mr. Lucas: "I understand that the Canadian manufacturers regard the present state of the Act in regard to medical service and hospital treatment as unsatisfactory."

Mr. Thomas of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, said it was indeed very unsatisfactory. "But we object to amendment of the Act by piecemeal.

"We believe that this additional burden should not be placed on the manufacturers who already labour under a great enough handicap," said Mr. Thomas. "As regards placing the burden on the industry, the labour delegates are entirely wrong. The contention that if you burden the industry nobody suffers, is ridiculous. For instance, my firm has an export trade of 94 per cent. of the total output, so that with the additional burden we are placed at a disadvantage with other competitors who have not our obligations. If you were legislating for the whole world it would be different."

"That is not the case when you are competing with American States" said Premier Hearst. "They all have similar burdens."

DESTROY INDUSTRY.

"But the burden is not so great as it is in Ontario," replied Mr. Thomas. "You may destroy our industry altogether by increasing the burden."

The Premier: "What percentage of an increase in the cost of production would the proposed change involve?"

"That is a difficult matter to compute offhand, but it would be very large," said Mr. Thomas, who proceeded to point out that if the manufacturers were called upon to pay the doctor's bill they should have the say as to who would be the doctor.

NOT WORKABLE.

Ald. Gibbons said this was not a workable proposition in the case of accidents.

Mr. J. Douglas, Hamilton, a member of the committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said they wanted a seven-days' waiting period before compensation should begin. "We are not willing to let the medical proposition be in the control of a board. We suffer from an unjust burden as things stand. The Act should be Dominion-wide, and we would not be placed at such an unfair disadvantage."

Regarding the contention of the medical men that there should be a schedule of rates, he strongly resented the proposal. "They have no more right to get a guarantee of payment than we have or anybody else. They ought to take the same chance as the rest of us. We are agreeable to the principle that if we assume liability we shall arrange our own fees and not leave it to the Government or any board."

Mr. Lucas: "I think that is a reasonable position."

The Premier: "I understood that the medical men's purpose was to have a schedule to prevent overcharging."

"But you can depend upon it the scale will be high enough," put in Mr. Douglas.

A BROAD STATEMENT.

Mr. Lucas: "The position of the labour men is that they don't care how the medical attention is given, so long as they don't need to pay for it."

Mr. Jas. Simpson: "No; we cannot allow Mr. Douglas to get away with that speech."

WHO WILL PICK PHYSICIAN?

Mr. Bancroft asked what Mr. Douglas had in his mind when he said the manufacturers would assume responsibility if they could be allowed to work it their own way.

"There will be no hole and corner work," assured Mr. Douglas. "We have not worked out details yet, but we don't want a schedule of rates in the Act."

"We will protest when the time comes against the manufacturers having the sole right of determining who is to be the physician," said Mr. Simpson.

Mr. Douglas said they would be quite willing to have the employees on the committee to consider the matter.

Mr. Thomas did not think there would be any trouble with arrangements regarding the doctors' position.

Mr. Arthur Hewitt, manager of the Consumers Gas Co., said his firm was much worse off now than formerly, although prior to the Act they paid 100 per cent. wages to injured workmen and paid the doctor too. "We prefer to carry our own liability," he said.

The Premier thought headway had been made toward common ground, and held out hopes of a settlement being reached when the case had been fully considered at the coming session of Parliament.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' ONE-PIECE APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

For housework or for wear in the studio, a smarter or more comfortable apron than this illustration shows would be hard to find.

When an apron is built to give full protection wearing a dress underneath it is not now encouraged; this apron is quite trim enough to take the place of housedress. It is cut in one piece and has front closing. In making it, the line of the shirt waist was followed to give a neat waist; the open neck and short sleeves are extremely comfortable for housework, and there is just the right touch of trimming with contrasting goods for the yoke neck, to finish the sleeves, make the belt and form the pocket in each side of the roomy skirt section, as also for the front band.

Color combination always gives an artistic effect, but all one may be employed. Gingham, linen, chambray, percale, drill, Indian head and like fabrics are suitable for an apron on this order. You can duplicate the design most reasonably and very easily by using the pattern.

The apron, No. 8,042, cuts in sizes 36 to 42 bust. To make in size 36 requires 3¼ yards 36 inch material and 1⅛ yards 27 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

SUICIDE ADDED TO TRAGEDY IN MODEL'S MURDER MYSTERY

NEW YORK, January 6.-The mystery surrounding the murder of Miss Maxie Colbert, a well-known artist's model, in her apartments in Philadelphia last Saturday night, is believed by the police to have been solved by the suicide in a fashionable Atlantic City hotel of Bernard W. Lewis, the wealthy son of Wenman I. Leis, a retired multi-millionaire coal operator of Pittsburg.

Early in the day a warrant was issued in Philadelphia for the apprehension of Lewis, on information furnished by two women school teachers of that city, and 'fliers' were sent broadcast for his arrest. Information reached the Atlantic City police that a man answering the description of Lewis was at the State's Villa, a private hotel in the seaside resort. As detectives waited at the door of he room occupied by the suspected man, a shot was heard in the adjoining bathroom and Lewis was found with a bullet hole through his temple, death having been instantaneous.

Lewis, who was thirty-five years of age, and married, was at one time connected in an official capacity with five of the largest coal concerns in Pennsylvania, and was the owner of several theatres. Some years ago he was a broker on Wall Street, being a member of the firm of Moore, Leonard and Lewis.

Since last Sunday morning when the body of Miss Colbert, badly battered, was found in her apartments, the crime has been almost the sole topic of conversation in Philadelphia and New York, where the young woman, who was called by artists "the woman with the form divine" was widely known. In their investigation the police have drawn into the case many men standing high in the social, business, professional, political and athletic life of the city.

In the room occupied by Lewis in the state's Villa were found a number of newspapers containing photographs of the murdered girl and lengthy stories of the crime. Lewis left no written message or communication of any kind.

HE HAD COMPASSION FOR RUSSIAN SOLDIERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 5.—Building of submarine parts at the Union Iron Works in San Francisco and their subsequent shipment to Canada, where they were assembled for Great Britain and her allies, was described in the United States District Court by John A. McGregor, President of the Union Iron Works, testifying for the defence in the trial of Frans Bopp, German Consul-General, and others accused of neutrality violation.

McGregor said his company, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, had secured the submarine contracts from the Electric Boat Co., New London, Conn. He said the original plan to build the submarines in San Francisco was abandoned at the suggestion of William J. Bryan, then Secretary of State. "There was no secret about it," said McGregor.

One hundred employees of the Union Iron Works went to Montreal, McGregor said, and assembled the parts as they arrived.

Compassion for Russians?

C. C. Crowley, co-defendant and chief detective for the Consulate, was cross-examined to-day by John Preston, United States District Attorney concerning Crowley's previous statement that he had been offered immunity to testify against Bopp.

"Do you mean to say I offered you immunity?" asked Preston.

"You know you did," shouted Crowley.

The prosecutor answered: "Crowley, you know you are lying."

Compassion for Russian soldiers in the trenches —not plots to dynamite ships bound for Russian—led Crowley to seek information from the Russian Consulate as to fruit shipments to Vladivostok, Crowley testified today.

The United States District Attorney confronted Crowley with a letter he had written to the Russian Consulate here, asking sailing dates of ships which could carry dried fruits to Russia.

ATTACKED JAILER AND BROKE AWAY

WHITBY, Jan. —A bold and daring escape was made from the Ontario County jail here at 6-30 this evening by George Arnold, the one-armed chicken thief, sentenced this afternoon to five years in the penitentiary. Arnold took advantage of the occasion when Governor Schiller had unlocked and opened the door leading into the corridor of the jail, where Arnold was confined. As the door opened to permit a prisoner to remove the supper dishes from the corridor, Arnold dashed the heavy iron door back against the Governor who was standing behind it, knocking him down. Before Mr. Schiller could recover himself, the prisoner had seized the key of the outer iron door, unlocked it and had an open road to freedom. Governor Schiller was able to grab the escaping convict before he reached the door leading to the yard and a fierce tussle ensued down the steps and out on to the snow to the east entrance. Kicking and striking Arnold succeeded in giving the Governor a hard time of it and finally broke away. The son of the Governor, attracted by the struggle, reached the spot in time to seize the sweater worn by the prisoner, but this gave way and Arnold made a dash and eluded capture. Every effort is being made to round him up, and as he was hatless and without coat also, having the distinguished mark of but one arm, he can be readily recognized. Once before Arnold broke out of this jail, after assaulting the turnkey and leaving him for dead. Alex Bruce, 46 Pembroke street, Toronto, carries the scars yet of the beating he received on that occasion. Arnold was serving a four months' term in jail for selling liquor, previous to commencing on the eight years to which his two other sentences commit him to Kingston

LOVE SPURNED, SUES DENTIST

Miss Beck Asks $10,000 Damages from Dr. H. L. Rosenbaum, Who Was Married Last September.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—For her love which began when she was a "simple country girl at York, Pa.," and which has been unrequited for ten years, Miss Jeanette Beck filed action for $10,000 against Dr. Harry L. Rosenbaum, a dentist, of Ninth street and Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn.

She said that after their meeting, Dr. Rosenbaum made fervent love to her and bombarded her with love letters from every part of the country. She says he proposed to her in March, 1912, and that the marriage was postponed from time to time so that there would be no interference with his study of dentistry.

Miss Beck alleges that Dr Rosenbaum married Miss Phylis M. Shaley, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harold M. Shaley, of No. 191 Lenox avenue, Manhattan, September 16 last.

RUSH ACROSS BORDER.

Two Thousand Have Passed Through Port Huron.

SARNIA, Jan. 5. — Two thousand persons have been examined by Port Huron immigration authorities during the past two weeks. The work has been the heaviest in history. It is stated that among the number were a great many young men of military age. When asked their destination they would state in the majority of cases that they were looking for work and if they could secure employment they expected to stay. It is believed that activity in recruiting in Canada is responsible.

HUMANITY OPENS PRISONS.

Convict Allowed to Attend Wife's Funeral and Visit Children.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.— Abe Lewis, doing a long stretch in Sing Sing prison for breaking the law, was allowed to leave the prison in charge of a constable and visit his three children when the news came that his wife was dead.

Lewis asked permission to see his wife's body, before burial, and condoled with his children, but had no idea his request would be granted. The prison warden endorsed the request and Governor Whitman lost no time confirming it, so Lewis was enabled to spend the day in Brooklyn in his broken family circle, returning to prison in the evening.

Lewis' wife had written to him daily during the eight years of his imprisonment, and had loyally stood by him in the shadow as in the sunshine.

WEAK FROM GRIPPE

Home Missionary Tells How She Restored Her Strength.

"I am a Home Missionary, was weak and run-down after a hard spell of LaGrippe. I had headaches, indigestion and pains in my chest, and was tired all the time. A friend asked me to try Vinol and the result is I am free from those troubles, and I feel well and strong and able to go to work again." Mrs. Hattie Johnson, Towanda, Pa.

The reason Vinol was so successful in building up Mrs. Johnson's health is because it is a constitutional remedy which contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates of lime and soda, the delicious tonic wine.

We wish every person in Peterborough who is suffering from a weakened, run-down devitalized condition would try Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit them.

PROBING MURDER MYSTERY.

Wealthy Pittsburg Man is Sought by the Police.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5. — The first arrest growing out of the brutal murder of Marie Colbert, pretty corset and stocking model, last Friday, was ordered yesterday afternoon, when Captain of Detectives Tate swore out a warrant for the apprehension of Bernard W. Lewis, son of Wenman Lewis, a prominent Pittsburg lawyer.

No connection with the murder itself is attached to the arrest of Lewis, who is specifically charged with having defrauded Elward Pogell of $19 taxi fare. Investigation of the murder led to the belief that Lewis is the man who ordered the taxi at the Bellevue-Stratford, accompanied two women to an exclusive section of Germantown, and then ordered Powell to drive to the Wilton Apartments.

If the man who got out of that machine actually entered Miss Colbert's apartment, as Powell, the chauffeur, gave the police to understand, he is the last man known to have been with the girl before she was beaten into insensibility, and then strangled to death with her own stocking.

A police "flier" was sent broadcast ordering Lewis' arrest for "defraud." A "flier" is a telegram by which a person can be held to await the arrival of the warrant itself.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE IN RIGA REGION HAS BEEN BROADENED, BERLIN ADMITS

Czar's Forces Are Taking Advantage of Winter Conditions With Roads and Rivers Frozen Solid to Open New and Vigorous Offensive in North---Berlin Claims Capture of Foosani in Roumania With 3910 Prisoners.

A SUMMARY OF TODAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, January 8.—(Special cable)—That the Germans are feeling very strongly the Russians' new offensive in the Baltic Sea region is again intimated to-day in the Berlin official statement which states that the Russians have broadened their offensive in the sections of the eastern front near Riga and Mitau.

It is apparent that the Czar's forces are taking advantage of the severe winter conditions with the roads and vers frozen solid, to open a new and vigorous offensive on the northern end of their long line.

It is believed here the Russians will make considerable impression on the Teutonic defences there.

BERLIN, January 8.—Focsani in Roumania was captured by the Germans yesterday with 3,910 prisoners to-day's German official statement said.

Canadian Casualties in 1916 Total 53,837

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., January 8.—Casulties suffered by the Canadian overseas forces at the front up to Dec. 31, 1916, according to the figures compiled by the casualty branch, numbered 67,290. Of these 10,845 were killed and 48,454 wounded. The missing numbered 2,970, while 4,010 died of wounds, 494 of sickness, and 1,518 are put down as presumed dead. These figures do not include the prisoners of war. The lists up to Dec. 31, 1915, numbered 14,453, so that the casualties for the calendar year just closed total 53,837.

Austrians Trying To Escape Into States

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., January 8.—Twelve Austrians caught last night trying to get across into the United States were this morning fined $25 each and may be interned.

Tumulty the First Witness in Inquiry

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, January 8.—Thomas W. Lawson, of Frenzied Finance fame, was absent when called as first witness to-day at the peace note leak enquiry.

But in answer to committee suggestions that he be "apprehended" if not in the city, Chairman Henry stated he understood Lawson is in Washington.

Cross questioned by Representative Campbell, Secretary Tumulty explained that President Wilson had himself written the peace not on his own typewriter and that none of the executive office staff had any hand in it.

Secretary Tumulty was to-day the first witness before the House Rules Committee regarding the leak to Wall Street of advance information of President Wilson's note to belligerents.

Humulty in a formal statement to the committee, closed with the following "permitted" quotation from Prident Wilson:

"I wish, in justice to Mr. Tumulty to say that he has stated the exact fact. He had no knowledge of the note whatever until it was given out for publication."

"I wish to deny generally and specially that I have advanced information to Mr. Baruch or to anybody else in regard to the note," Tumulty told the committee.

Thomas W. Lawson, turned up before the committee later and enlivened proceedings by wrangling with the members. At times there were prospects of fists being used. Lawson stated that he made money himself out of the "leak."

Potato Supply Will Likely Be Commandeered

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, January 7.—The next article of food likely to be commandeered by Lord Devonport is potatoes. The scarcity is apparently due to the speculators rather than an actual shortage in the supply, but a reliable authority informs me that some months hence there may be no potatoes for civilians. Appeals have been made to Canada, but the prices are so high that the Government here will not consider them. In fact, the wholesale price in Canada is higher than the retail price here.

At present the restaurants and private houses show no sign of the dearth of the tuber.

Identified Mr. Jas. Gordon's Remains

A piece of shirt, showing a patch that had been sewn to it by his wife, led to the identification of the remains of the late James Gordon, who was in charge of the puffed rice department at the Quaker Oats Co. on the day of the fire. The charred trunk has been at Belleghem's Undertaking Rooms for several weeks. More recently another section of the body was recovered from the same position. With it was the piece of shirt and under it a knife, recognized as the deceased's, were found. Mrs. Gordon immediately identified the piece of cloth when it was shown to her yesterday. The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning from the late residence of Mr. Gordon, 253 Stewart Street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery. The deceased was in his 41st year. He was born in Peterborough, and spent all his life here, where he had a great many friends. He was a member of the old Fire Brigade, and for years was employed as a motorman with the Street Railway Company.

ARMSTRONG WILL PLAY

Although it was announced this morning that Armstrong would not be able to play to-night on account of his injured knee, the Soldiers' Team man has decided to try it out and he will be on the line against Cobourg to-night.

Sevigny Is Sworn In

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Jan. 8. — Consequent upon the death of the Hon. T. Case Casgrain, Hon. Albert Sevigny, former Speaker, was sworn in to-day as Minister of Inland Revenue, replacing Hon. E. L. Patenaude, who becomes Secretary of State. Hon. P. E. Blondin, former Secretary of State, is the new Postmaster-General.

COUNCIL SLATE OF COMMITTEES DRAWN UP TO-DAY

Ald. Weir Heads Board of Works With All the Council Members—Ald. Dobbin Gets Fire, Water and Light Committee.

COMPOSITION OF THE COMMITTEES

The Council Committees and their chairmen for 1917 were appointed this morning as follows:

Board of Works—Ald. Weir chairman, and all the members of the Council.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. Dobbin, chairman, Duncan, Worth, McIntyre, Smith, Stratton, Weir and Taylor.

Manufacturers — Ald. McIntyre, chairman, Weir, Stratton, Taylor, Worth and Smith.

Finance—Ald. Stratton, chairman, McIntyre, Weir, Saunders, Duncan, Dobbin.

Property—Ald. Saunders, chairman, Langford, Duncan, Dobbin, Smith and Taylor.

Legal—Ald. Duncan, chairman, Dobbin, Langford, Stratton, Worth and Taylor.

Railways, Parks and Boulevards—Ald. Langford, chairman, Smith, Saunders, Taylor and Worth.

ALDERMEN'S COMMITTEES

The number of committees to which each Alderman is attached is as follows:

Weir 4, Smith 5, McIntyre 4, Langford 4, Worth 5, Duncan 5, Stratton 5, Dobbin 5, Taylor 6 and Saunders 4.

REVERSION TO 1914 IDEA.

All the members of the Council this year compose the Board of Works of which Ald. Weir is chairman. This is a reversion to the plan adopted and carried out in 1914, Ald. Saunders made a stand for this idea stating that the 1914 Board was the most successful in his experience. Ald. Weir had previously picked a slate comprising one representative from each ward as follows:—Ald. Weir, McIntyre, Duncan, Stratton and Saunders. Later he agreed with Ald. Saunders whose motion was adopted. Ald. Langford moved an amendment seconded by Mayor Duffus that the original Board be retained, but they received no support.

No Attempt To Re-change Name Will Be Made

Special to Examiner:

KITCHENER, Ont., Jan. 8.— The new city council was duly inaugurated this morning and held its first session. Mayor Gross ascended the dias and the aldermen elected filed to their seats. After the singing of the National Anthem, the Mayor delivered his inaugural address as follows.

After congratulating the members-elect, the Mayor's address says:

In the past our city has contributed largely to the Patriotic, Red Cross and similar funds. We must continue to do so freely and liberally, not only out of the civic treasury, but also out of our own time and money.

During the past year the name of our city has been changed. The agitation for such purposes has raised feelings of bitterness and discord beween our citizens. It has led to acts of lawlessness and violence such as was never before known in our city.

It will be part of our duty to try and restore peace and harmony in the community, to repress and punish all lawlessness and to hold to strict accountability newspapers or persons who may circulate untrue and unfounded reports against our city and its people.

Mayor Gross declared there was no intention of attempting to change the name back to Berlin. Other members of the Council corrobated this and expressed their loyalty to Britain.

Col. T. W. H. Young Mentioned In Despatches By Sir Douglas Haig

Peterborough Physician in List of Canadians Honoured ---Splendid Tribute to Lieut. Fessenden in Col. Currie's Book "The Red Watch"--Pte. Ben Martin of the 93rd Battalion Wounded--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Col. T. W. H. Young of Peterborough who before the war was the officer commanding the 10th Artillery Brigade and who went overseas as medical officer for the 2nd Canadian Engineers was among the Canadian officers mentioned in despatches by Field Marshall, Sir Douglas Haig for good work in France. Col. Young is now in charge of a Canadian Hospital at the front and his many friends will be glad to learn that his meritorious work has been officially recognised.

A splendid tribute is paid to the work of a well-known Peterborough officer, Lieut. Vivien Fessenden, son of Mr. Cortes Fessenden of the Collegiate staff by Col. J. A. Currie, M. P. in this book "The Red Watch" which describes the exploits of the 15th Canadian Battalion at Ypres. Speaking of Lieut. Fessenden who has been a Prisoner in Germany since the memorable battle, Col. Currie says:—

"Back and forward I went, and the entire line was canvassed and discussed. Lieut. Fessenden, one of the most brilliant graduates of the R.M.C had a particularly hard spot to deal with, and was handling it in a manner worthy f any of the great Belgian Engineers. No lieutenant in the whole allied army was a better student of the art of war, or a more fearless man than this rosy-cheeked boy of 21."

COL. J. A. CURRIE, M.P., in "THE RED WATCH"

LONDON, Jan 7.—In connection with the combing out process now proceeding in the Canadian forces in England and at the base two Labor Battalions, two Railway Construction Battalions and two Forestry Battalions have already been formed from men graded for permanent base duty.

PTE. MARTIN WOUNDED.

Still another member of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion is reported wounded to-day increasing the casualties in Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit to fifty. Pte. Ben Martin who enlisted here in September, 1915 and went overseas as a member of A Company is officially reported slightly wounded. Pte. Martin had a brother, Lance-Corp. Sidney Martin with the 93rd Battalion, Signal Section and four brothers in the Imperial forces.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Commerce, has received the sad news that his nephew, Lieut. Harold Dunsford, of the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles, was killed in action on Dec. 7th. Lieut. Dunsford, who was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dunsford, enlisted as a private and received his commission in the field.

Mr. Edward Payne, 215 Carlyle Avenue has received the following letter from Armour Sergt. Fred Hart of Peterborough who went overseas with the 59th Battalion.

74 Tunnel Avenue Greenwich,
London, S. E.
December 20, 1916

Mr. Dear Mr. Payne:—

To-night whilst reading the Examiner, dated November 28th, I read with a shock that your son, poor "Eddie" Payne was killed on October 1st or 2nd. Perhaps there was nobody in the 59th who was brought in greater contact with your son than myself. Recruited by me in the summer of 1915, he turned out to be a splendid soldier. Soon after we reached Barriefield Camp, Sergt-Major Blake asked me if I could recommend a real good steady fellow for his orderly. My choice fell on Eddie and he was not with our Sergt-Major long before he told me that Eddie was far too good a lad to be kept back in the ranks and that he had recommended him for promotion. How well he succeeded and how proudly he wore his chevrons you and I know. The last time I saw him was the day before he left Sandling with a draft en route for France. He always showed up, some how, above his comrades for Eddie was everything that made for a good soldier. He was as clean as a new pin, as upright as a dart and a real man even if he was of a boy's years.

Many of the lads of the 59th have gone under. I have read some of their names in the casualty lists with deep feeling; but when I saw poor little Eddie's name I was overcome. It is awful to think that a life so full of promise has ended. How you must feel about it I can only imagine. How his dear mother must grieve, I can only guess. Last Christmas I saw Eddie walking up George street and that finally stamped him in my estimation as a splendid lad, for a son who was so proud of his mother, was a man indeed.

I know that B company men will grieve with you in your loss. Major Sauva and Capt. Park I am sure will be greatly distressed. As for Sergt. Major Blake I know what his feelings will be when I write and tell him the awful news. Truly many could have been spared, if only Eddie had been saved. I hope this letter will not reopen the wound which must be deep and enduring, but I felt that I must write and assure you of my sympathy with you in your irreparable loss. May God bring comfort to you and Mrs. Payne during your time of sorrow and may you find consolation in the fact that he died a noble death, an end which I am sure would have been his choice. Now dear Mr. Payne I will bring this sorrowful missive to a conclusion. I remain.

Sorrowfully yours,
FRED T. HART,
Armour Sergt.
Late 59th Battalion, C.E.F.

Cecil Thackeray, son of Mr. Wm. Thackeray, 465 Stewart street has enlisted in the Cobourg Heavy Battery. His brother Gunner Clarke Thackeray, went overseas in the fourth draft from the same unit. Nearly every draft sent by the Cobourg battery has contained a number of Peterborough boys.

Mrs. R. H. Tamblin, 56 Victoria Avenue, whose son, Pte. A. W. Tamblin, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, died of wounds recently, in France, has received the following letter from another son, Pte. Nelson Tamblin, who is also at the front:

Dear Mother and Father,—Just a few lines to let you know I am well and hope this will find you all the same.

Well, mother, I suppose you know poor Bert is dead and buried. I learned of it to-day and started at once to find out all I could about it.

It seems he and three others were together in a sap, and a shell burst near them, blinding one and breaking the other two fellows' legs. A piece of the shell went through Bert's stomach and back; he lived until he reached the Hospital, where he died in the morning. The place where he is buried is not far from here, so if I am spared to come out again I will go and see his grave.

I have a looking-glass that I got from one of the fellows that carried him out; it is one I gave him when I first met him in France, when I thought he was going home.

Now, mother, I want to tell you that you ought to be proud of Bert, for when he was wounded before, I think, if he wanted to, he could have gone home. But no, not him. He came out here to do his bit, and I guess he has done it.

Well, mother, don't worry about me; I am getting along all right. If I am to get it, why you know it will be God's will, and there is Frank left yet; he is the lucky one, to just get as far as England.

I guess I will close now. Remember me to everybody around home, and don't worry; I will be all right.

Good-bye, from your ever loving son,

NELSON.

Mrs. Elizabeth Maddy, 108 Lansdowne street, has received word from Ottawa that her son, Private Francis James Leether, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, has been admitted to No. 8 Canadian Field Ambulance, November 19th, suffering from an affected left foot.

"PEACE BE DAMNED" WRITES LOCAL BOY FROM THE TRENCHES

Not Time For Peace Yet For Germany Has a Big Price to Pay Before That Can Come About Says Pte. Hendry in Letter From Front

THE HUNS ARE BEATEN

Writing from 'Somewhere in France' to Mr. Reg. Turner, Pte. Bob Hendry of Peterborough, who, before he enlisted with the 92nd Highlanders, of Toronto, was an employee of J. J. Turner and Sons and who is now in France with the 3rd Canadians, says:

I am glad to be able to say that I am in the best of health and so far have been very fortunate. I have been in the thick of it time and again, but always seem to have a little bit of luck.

Well, I have much to be thankful for. We have seen many of our boys go over the road and oft times when you least expected it. It would make your heart sore if you had passed through some of the towns or villages that I have been through. Not a house or a whole building left, but a dump. One place we passed I will tell you about if ever I am spared to meet you again, and when I tell you you will wonder why the Germans should not be exterminated. Their conduct is worse than some of the black tribes. If what we have read and what we have been taught to believe since boyhood is correct about a judgment day, then Germany will suffer.

We have been having some pretty miserable weather of late. Rain, rain, almost every day, and you talk about mud—something awful. No great advance can be made while weather like this lasts. It is impossible to move heavy guns. Wait until the spring comes and you will see something doing. Now they are talking about peace. I say "peace be damned. It is not time for peace yet. Nobody needs it more than Germany, but she has a big price to pay yet before there is any peace. Germany is beaten as sure as there is a God above. She wants peace before she is ruined. She won't get it—at least not yet."

"I Would Rather Be a Dead Soldier With His Assurance of Immortality Than a Dead Citizen," Said Col. Ponton, of Belleville at a Recruiting Meeting Held Last Evening in the Armouries.

CANADA'S WAR

"Universal national service" is the name that Col. Ponton of Belleville would substitute for the word "conscription." At a recruiting meeting held in the Armouries last evening, Col. Ponton expressed the opinion that hundreds of young men would willingly enter the ranks if universal national service was instituted throughout the Dominion. "Somebody spoke of conscription," said Col. Ponton. I do not like that word. A rose, by any other name, would smell just as sweet. I would rather call it universal national service. The existing voluntary system is unjust and inequitable. (Applause).

On this platform to-night Dr. Edwards, the parliamentary member for Frontenac, heard a Peterborough audience declare its approval of conscription in place of the present inequitable system of voluntary enlistment. Dr. Edwards can convey this expression of opinion to the Government," said Col. Ponton.

Few Eligible Men.

The meeting was well attended although very few eligible men were present. The band of the 57th Battalion rendered several selections, and a recitation was given by Percy Luther in his usual good form. The chair was occupied by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.

Lieut. Col. C. Ackerman, Officer Commanding the 247th Battalion who was the first speaker called upon, reviewed the efforts that have been made to fill up the Battalion. He estimated Peterborough's man-power at fourteen hundred men. These, he said, would receive a personal call from a member of the battalion, and asked to state why he has not enlisted and what are his intentions. Col. Ackerman was followed by Captain M. Hamilton, who characterized war as a continuation of a nation's policy and urged every young man who forms a part of the nation to assume his share of the responsibility in this struggle.

War Turned Down.

Dr. Edwards, M.P., for Frontenac County, was the next speaker. He prefaced his appeal to the young men with a few personal references to his own part in the matter. Dr. Edwards said that two years ago he offered his services to the Minister of Militia, but was turned down as he was over age and had no previous military training. His daughter was in England giving her services to the country, free of cost, in one of the hospital centres, while his son and a number of nephews, brothers and other relatives were on active service. "This," said Dr. Edwards, "is my warrant for appealing to you to-night. "This war," said the speaker, "is a struggle for supremacy between democracy as represented by the Allies, and militarism as represented by the enemy forces. In Germany, individuality and personality has been blotted out, and the German is nothing but a mere cog in a great military machine. This world is not large enough for two opposing principles of that kind. Germany's ideals must be blotted out forever. That makes this struggle more than a mere war. Recently we have heard whisperings of peace. We won't accept the peace that is offered. We will be ready to talk peace when the time comes and Germany will be willing to accept it. Every young man should honestly endeavour to adjust his affairs so that he may enlist and help maintain the honour and integrity of the nation. In Canada, ten thousand women are making shells. What are they making them for? They are making them for you to fire.

"Peterborough Prospects Possibilities Unsurpassed"

MONDAY, JAN. 8, 1917

NIGHT CLASSES

Every working lad in Peterborough should read the announcement in the Examiner of the opening of the Industrial Classes this week; or if he would not otherwise see it, it should be shown him by his parents or guardian or interested friend. Many boys have to go to work before their school education has reached the stage of greatest usefulness. Our schools, besides, excellent as they are in other respects, do not give enough even of rudimentary knowledge that the boy can use in mechanical or general industrial occupations.

And in these days of industrial specialising a lad, especially one with defient technical education, can learn only one thing, and after years may be not an intelligent general mechanic—only a machine (only with brains) like that he works at year after year. Technical knowledge, a more or less industrial education, such as can be had—as a beginning, in the industrial night classes—must be got by an apprentice to any mechanical calling, or he will not have even a fighting chance to rise—to get at the top. A boy with defective education may become a first-rate manual or machine mechanic if he has plenty of brains and grit; but without a fairly liberal education he will not become a master mechanic or a foreman or a superintendent. Every boy who needs the knowledge that night classes will give him should heed the assurance of men of experience that he will never know nor imagine what can be accomplished by application and the profitable use of stray hours and moments devoted to useful study.

READING AND READING.

In the excellent and instructively analytical annual report of Mr. Dela Rosse, public librarian, we are told there was a decrease in the number of books issued to the people last year. On the surface, this would indicate that the public has done less reading. This would be a hasty assumption. Without the slightest disparagement of the Public Library, it, by no means, furnishes the total supply of reading matter. It must not be forgotten that the great educators in current topics, the newspapers, are at this time good with more than usual attention and interest. Of course there is a reason for this. The universal interest in the war and the fortunes or misfortunes, brings the people to the daily use of the newspaper; and few will lay down a journal after he has deemed the war news without reading it all. The abundance of good reading claims his attention. As a rule, of course, the information gained from a newspaper is necessarily ephemeral; but, in any well-arranged newspaper there is a wide variety of interesting reading of serious and solid character. The newspaper, with its daily chronicle of events affecting people we know, is a bond of social unity, and through this, of closer civic relationships. It is the medium of public expression of opinion; and, through its pages those an chasis in our civic, educational, and other interests, learn to a large extent, what the people want—a knowledge that under representative institutions they are bound to make the basis of action on the lines of public opinion. What the public read in the newspapers deals with people and things they know and have an interest in, not the shadowy and fancied people and things they read of in the generally thin-blooded novel of the period. The element of human interest is what constitutes the chief appeal of the newspaper. What people like to talk about in their homes is dealt with, or suggested in, the daily paper. The death of a neighbour, the birth of a baby, or the wedding anniversary is more of local moment and interest than the sorrows of the heroine of a three-volume novel. The newspaper touches home and heart topics—our neighbours, our friends and our enemies. Even the advertisements, the offer made to bargains in effect through intelligent high prices, taken in connection with other considerations, assisting the popularity and indispensability of the newspaper, help to explain, especially in war time, why fiction, in the form of novels, is crowded out by fact in the form of the daily or weekly newspaper.

While briefly and imperfectly presenting the reasons for the popularity of the newspaper, in war time, it should be pointed out that it may be made the medium of great comfort to the Canadian soldier boys in the trenches. It is safe wagering that, no welcome as are "eatables" and cordite dainties to the trench boys, their welcome would not equal that given to a newspaper from home. It is more than a letter from home, for the superscription on the wrapper of the sender's name gives the personal touch, and the interest of the newspaper gives more of local interest to the thirsty souls in the trenches than a hundred letters would cover. Read your local paper, tie it up and send it to some Peterborough boy "somewhere in France or Flanders." It will be read to rags by every soldier from this district, though his home is scores of miles from the Royal Bank corner.

WHAT NATIONAL SERVICE MEANS.

During the past two and a half years Canada has had a strenuous wrestle with stern experiences. We think and know that we have sacrificed much and done much in connection with the tremendous condition of war in which we have borne a creditable share. We may think that we have had our testing time. But we have not had our real trials yet. The whole nation in the past has buckled to its work with a will—with no compulsion but the compelling force of duty and patriotic interest. Our true test time is only coming now; we are only now differentiating the true from the false, the real citizen from the other citizen; the patriot from the parasite. The parasite is the citizen who is willing to enjoy all the blessings of quiet citizenship in a free country and willing to do his share in protecting them when they are threatened; willing to continue enjoying all at the expense of those who are not in duty bound to fight in the trenches for the able-bodied who are enjoying the highest kind of employment and other prosperity.

The soldiers we have had in the field and now have there, are there by their own free will—noble volunteers who are as really guarding our homes and our home interests, as if they were holding the lines of our menaced frontiers with loaded guns and bayonets fixed. These number nearly four hundred thousand men; young men, the flower of our citizenship in muscle and bone and blood, as in moral qualities of courage, patriotism and high sense of duty.

We have in Canada perhaps as many more of young men eligible in the matter of age and physical fitness for military service. But they do not understand the seriousness of the situation— some don't want to understand it—or they would act as patriots. Patriotism is not a mere sentimental catch word, but the simple quality of being the ruling, dominating spirit of a man willing to preserve what makes a country worth regarding as a country worth living in.

Patriotism is at once selfishness and unselfishness. The young man who volunteers to fight to save Canada and the Empire; to save our liberties; to save opportunity of peaceful living—peaceful working at one's job; peaceful and certain and regular reception of the pay cheque — in a word is fighting for all that he is worth or hopes to be worth. In doing this selfish duy he is incidentally and inevitably fighting with the unselfish result of benefitting every fellow citizen and retaining him or her as a co-worker, under the best conditions, in his interest.

The young man who is not willing to do this for himself, but willing to take the mean position of having others do it for him, is not a patriot; he is a parasite. The average working man with possibly a dash of the socialistic spirit, thinks of the rich man only as a parasite, the man who lives in the enjoyment of the good things of this life on the labour of others. But the real parasite is the young man of able body who selfishly enjoys the priviege of working and living on the labours of others—not the well paid labour of bench and floor, but the thankless, ill paid labours of his alumae, his fellow workman, but now a Canadian soldier in the fighting line.

We don't know what to do with such men. If they don't value their own country enough to fight for it—even though in doing so they are fighting for themselves—they are not good citizens, and in this view the future of Canada will not be an auspicious one—if that future rests in the hands of small-spirited, unpatriotic and selfish citizens, who in the matter of flesh and blood and bone and muscle, are the backbone of the country, but weaklings in spirit or courage or altruistic interest, that makes the true, the profitable, the nation-building citizen.

In civil life, when citizens fail to live up to the responsibility of good citizenship, they are compelled to do so. If they refuse to pay just and necessary taxation, they are made to do it. If they refuse to serve on juries, if they refuse to obey many of the numerous requirments of the laws of the land, they are compelled to do so. In regard to military duty there is talk of conscription. But the only talk of conscription is among those who feel that they have earned its application. They look askance at the National Service cards and regard them as the opening wedge of conscription. They are nothing of the kind. They are simply a national and economic "Who's Who"—a means of classifying the population of the country; of finding out what resources the country has that can be applied to the service of the country. Filling in a card binds nobody—only gets information of willingness to work and makes no mention of enlisting. The cards are intended to furnish information that will enable us to specialize in national service, as great factories and workshops specialize by securing the best men, best fitted to do special work. National registration is not conscription any more than an assessment schedule notice is a tax bill. Sir Robert Borden has specifically assured a Trades and Labour Council deputation that the National Service cards are not a first step to conscription.

ONTARIO ARRESTS DECREASE UNDER TEMPERANCE ACT

Taking the police records of drunkenness for the calendar months of October and November under the new law in Ontario cities and towns, and comparing them with the arrests for October and November of last year, under license, the following results are obtained.

Name of Place	1915.	1916
Belleville	37	12
Brantford	104	15
Brockville	23	11
Chatham	27	6
Cobourg	10	2
Collingwood	7	2
Cornwall	8	8
Galt	5	1
Guelph	8	14
Hamilton	279	33
Kitchener	2	2
London	244	58
North Bay	25	13
Orillia	19	6
Oshawa	8	4
Owen Sound	22	15
Peterborough	70	18
Port Arthur	139	27
Port Hope	6	0
St. Thomas	16	0
Woodstock	11	5
Toronto	1928	419

It is also remarkable that in nearly every case the arrests for other offences have also fallen off, making it clear that crime in general is largely attributable to drinking and drunkenness. Here are the police court figures for all offences in the places and for the periods named:—

Place	1915.	1916
Belleville	84	53
Brantford	206	164
Brockville	48	44
Chatham	67	47
Cobourg	34	18
Collingwood	37	20
Cornwall	31	29
Galt	46	17
Guelph	72	69
Hamilton	926	504

Port Arthur	230	118
Port Hope	19	6
St. Thomas	50	34
Woodstock	55	60
Toronto	5622	3912

Even in the towns of Collingwood, Galt and Orillia, where local option has been in force for some time, the reduction in police court cases also prevails.

GERMANY'S SELF-ASSUMED AND "OVER-RATED" MILITARY GENIUS"

Those Americans and hyphenates who are arguing for immediate peace with Germany are writing a good deal in the American papers to the effect that the Allies might do well to conclude a peace now, less worse befall them at the hands of Germany. A good example of this kind of argument is contained in a letter signed "W. H. Kirk (not Kirsch), appearing in last Wednesday's New York Times. Mr. Kirk remarks that Germany only stated her intention at the outset to "defend" herself, and that she had done this far better than had been anticipated. The campaign of the Allies, on the other hand, had been a long series of blunders, and there was no hope that they could do any better, since they could not produce military leaders capable of planning and executing such campaigns as that of Germany against Russia in 1915 and German against Roumania. He then quotes the London Saturday Review as stating that the Russian campaign "stamped the Berlin General War Staff with the hall-mark of genius," while the Times (New York, we presume) is quoted as characterizing the Roumanian campaign as "a military classic." But not even genius, thinks Mr. Kirk, can extricate the Allies "from the seeming impasse into which they have been brought by over-confidence and a long series of blunders."

If Mr. Mirk's name is really not spelt "Kirsch," it is difficult to understand his undiluted admiration for German military genius. Germany's campaign against little Roumania may have proved "a military classic," but what shall we say of the German campaign which preceded it — the campaign against Verdun? That surely, from the point of view of military conception and execution, was one of the ghastliest fiascos in all history. Then again Mr. Kirsch or rather, we should say, Mr. Kirk, tells with beaming delight of the genius which stamped Germany's campaign against imperfectly-armed Russia in 1915, but he has not a word to say of the time when Russia came back with the Brusiloff drive that disposed of over one million of the enemy, whereof 425,000 were actually taken prisoners. One might go on like this indefinitely. It is sufficient, however, to sum up by saying that Germany's principal successes have been against little weakly-armed nations, and that her defeats at the hands of the larger nations have been nothing less than catastrophic. If it is "military genius" which has brought Germany to her present position, well may the people pray to be delivered from it. As for the leer of Mr. Kirk that Germany will put the Allies in a much more unfavourable military position than they now are if they do not agree to German terms, all we can say is that Mr. Kirk must be blind in the right eye and afflicted with myopia in the left.—Montreal Herald.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON THIS MORNING

Early this morning there was a total eclipse of the moon. The eclipse commenced with a slight shadow on the moon at 12.50 a.m., one hour and ten minutes later the entire surface of the moon was plunged in the earth's shadow. At 4.30 this morning the shadow had left the moon completely.

It is interesting to note that during the present year there will be seven eclipses. Not for a hundred years have there been seven in one year, nor will there be seven in any one year again during the present century. Generally there are three eclipses in one year, and there may be as few as two, but never can there be more than seven, and that, as has been shown, only at long intervals.

In every 18 years, there are 70 eclipses, 41 being of the sun, and 29 of the moon. The eclipses of the moon, although fewer, are the more noticeable, for they very frequently are total, and are visible over nearly the whole earth, while eclipses of the sun are usually partial, and then visible only in small areas.

A total eclipse of the sun was visible in Canada in 1905, in a lonely, almost uninhabited part of Labrador. There will not be another total eclipse of the sun visible in Canada for some years.

A meeting of the Executive of the Peterboro Branch, Canadian Red Cross will be held in the Public Library, Tuesday Morning, January 9th at ten o'clock.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

To-morrow Night's Battle Is Last Home Game For Next Ten Days

Last Chance For Peterboro' Fans to See a Game Until a Week From Friday—Juniors Will Practice To-night Before Intermediate Game in Final Preparation For Their Tussle With Bowmanville.

The Peterborough junior O. H. A. team will have their final workout for their opening game with Bowmanville at Brock street rink to-morrow night, this evening at 7 o'clock before the Cobourg-247th intermediate battle. The local squad is in good condition, and a lively workout to-night should put them right on edge for their clash with Bowmanville to-morrow. With good ice assured the fans can count on a red hot game all the way to-morrow night. The boys from the Rubber town are reported to be fast and clever and as a win here to-morrow night would give them a big start in the race for the district honours, they can be counted on to carry the battle to the local kids from gong to gong. However, the young Petes have been going good in practice, and Manager Hynds' aggregation will realize that they have been in a game. The Peterborough team will line up as follows:

Goal—Murray.
Right defence—McIntyre.
Rover—Graham.
Centre—Cherrett.

To-morrow night's game will be the last home game, either junior or intermediate, for ten days, so that the fans cannot afford to miss this fixture. On Thursday the juniors go to Oshawa, while on Friday the intermediates will visit Cobourg. Next week the only scheduled game at Brock street rink will a junior O.H.A. game with Oshawa.

Cobourg Will Be Strong For Their Game With 247th To-night

Cobourg will be here to-night with a greatly strengthened line-up to tackle the 247th in an intermediate O.H.A. Game. The Lakeshore crew are not to be judged by the beating they got at Lindsay. In the first place they hadn't their regular line up in action and in the second Lindsay game were much stronger than they were in their game here. Cobourg have dug up a stronger lineup from goal out to centre and the soldiers will not have a snap at any stage of the proceedings. Bobby Armstrong the lanky centre player of the 247th will be out of to-night's game as a result of a bad knee and his place will be taken by Lieut. Barney Quinn, who is back in the hockey game after two season's spent overseas. It is doubtful whether Sergt. Harry Thornton who is suffering from a bad cold will be in the battle or not to-night. In case he is unable to play he will be replaced by Lieut. Shaw. Adams, Flanagan, Halpin, Evans and Legros are all in good shape, however, and will be on the firing line to-night. They had a lively workout on Saturday night and showed fine form. A win for Cobourg to-night would leave the 247th Lindsay and Cobourg tied for the leadership.

The 247th line up:
Goal—Legros.
Right Defence—Thornton or Shaw.
Left Defence—Halpin.
Rover—Flanagan.
Centre—Quinn.
Right Wing—Adams.
L. Wing—Evans.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

It looks like a busy week for Peterborough's two hockey teams. To-night the 247th play Cobourg here, the juniors tackle Bowmanville here to-morrow night, the 247th will likely go to Lindsay for their postponed game on Wednesday, the juniors travel to Oshawa on Thursday and on Friday the soldiers play a O.H.A. game in Cobourg. Here is the bill for the week:

Monday—Cobourg vs. 247th at Brock Street Rink.
Tuesday—Bowmanville vs. Peterborough juniors at Brock Street Rink.
Wednesday—247th vs. Lindsay at Lindsay.
Thursday—Peterborough juniors vs. Oshawa at Oshawa.
Friday—247th vs. Cobourg at Cobourg.

The Peterborough junior O.H.A. team will practice at Brock Street Rink to-night before the Cobourg—247th fixture in final preparation for their opening O.H.A. game of the season with Bowmanville to-morrow night. The following players are asked to report at 7 o'clock sharp to-night: Murray, McIntyre, Montgomery, Graham, Cherrett, McFee, Bartley, Frost.

The Peterborough juniors will journey to Oshawa on Thursday of this week instead of on Friday as scheduled. The change has been made on account of a conflicting intermediate game in Oshawa. Oshawa will play the return game here on Friday, January 19th.

The 247th Battalion team's next game after to-night will be in Cobourg on Friday night.

George Street Methodist Hockey players will practice on East City rink from 7 to 8 Tuesday and Thursday nights. Come out.

Harold Lees the Peterborough boy who is playing goal for Queen's Senior O.H.A. team starred in the goal at Toronto on Saturday. The Mail says:

The wonderful work of Lees in goal was responsible for the Riversides only securing a 2-to-1 victory over Queen's Saturday afternoon at the Arena in a senior O.H.A. contest. The champions had much the better of the play throughout, but the Presbyterian net custodian gave one of the best exhibitions of goalminding ever seen around here, and was simply unbeatable on occasions that looked like sure score for the locals. Without Lees in goal the visitors would have been beaten badly, but then Lees is part of the Queen's team; in fact, he is about sixty per cent. of it.

WHITBY, Jan. 6.—On Friday night last night the Whitby intermediates opened the O.H.A. season here by winning an 8 to 2 victory over the 182nd Batt. The game was well contested until the last period, when the locals scored six. The line up:—

OSHAWA, Jan. 6.—The 228th Battalion juniors of Toronto came down to Oshawa this evening and played an exhibition game with the local juniors and won by 10 to 5. The score indicates the strength of the two teams. It was Oshawa juniors' first appearance for the season, and the soldier boys had it all over and around them. The Battalion boys used eleven men the first line-up:—

ALDERMEN COMPLAIN OF UNSOUNDED SIDEWALKS AT THE FIRST MEETING

A new Council greeted the New Year this morning with a complete representation of the wards, with an infusion of new blood, with a confidence that had drawn a veil on the past without forgetting it, and an optimism and readiness to grapple with the problems 1917 will produce. If it isn't exactly a new broom, it is the old one repaired and renewed. The meeting was not without a thought of the aldermen of last year. Their work provided an intangible monument to their memory.

After Mayor Duffus' inaugural address, Alderman Stratton congratulated him upon his re-election by acclamation, an evidence that the citizens appreciated his interest in the affairs of the city and to his public service. He thanked the Mayor for his reference to the efforts of the Finance Committee last year, and added that 1917, should find a similar policy of keeping the rate as low as possible consistent with good business. Alderman Stratton referred to the Police Commission which he suggested should be waited upon early. The force should not have one man more than necessary. It might be that some of the policemen might be induced to transfer to the Fire Department which had gone shorthanded for a year. While this had enabled a saving of money, the Finance Minister regarded that policy as a detriment to the city.

He moved, seconded by Alderman Dobbin, that the address be referred to the chairman of the committees.

Light for Rinks.

Alderman Dobbin moved, seconded by Alderman Duncan, that the Utilities Commission be requested to install sufficient lamps at the public skating rinks.

Walks Need Sand.

Alderman Langford stated that the sidewalks on Water and George streets on Sunday were so slippery that pedestrians were forced to take the road. Not only should the business sections of the central streets be sanded, but also the main thoroughfares in the residential districts. Three city officials were well paid to look after this work, and it should not be necessary that the Aldermen be constantly nagged about the condition of the sidewalks. Alderman Langford felt that the officials should take the initiative without being told, especially in winter when their duties were comparatively light.

Alderman McIntyre stated that he had instructed the City Engineer and Street Commissioner Evans at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, to put sand on the sidewalks and they said they would attend to it. Alderman McIntyre felt that they might have done more streets. He had particularly asked that the streets in the vicinity of the churches be sanded.

Alderman Duncan remarked that the merchants should be requested not to sweep the sand from in front of their stores. This had been brought to his notice by one of the police constables.

Montreal's method of scraping the sidewalks was referred to by Alderman Weir, who suggested that information should be obtained as to where their combined plow and scrapers are secured.

New Member Heard From.

Alderman Smith added that information might be obtained from Ottawa where, he said, a very effective appliance was used for removing the slippery surface of sidewalks. He also recommended that householders should shovel off the sidewalks fronting their residences to prevent the formation of the enclosed hollow resulting from the snow-removal by the plows.

The Mayor's Stipend.

Alderman Stratton moved, seconded by Alderman Dobbin that the usual grant of $500 be made to the Mayor, and that it be paid quarterly.

Board of Trade Representatives.

Alderman McIntyre moved, seconded by Alderman Stratton, that three members of the Board of Trade be included in the composition of the Manufacturers' Committee.

BOWLING

A very exciting game took place Saturday night on Water street alleys between De Laval office and factory. the factory. Fitzgerald pulled off the last game the factory won out from the eighth frame. Up until then the both teams were even up. Fitzgerald for the office was high, and Byers for the fatcory. Fitzgerald pulled off the best spare of the evening.

To-morrow night, league game.

The second round of the games start. Printers and Business Men meet. A good game should be played, as both teams are leading in the Peterborough City League.

George Cairns won the bowling shoes for last week's prize with a score of 237, 226, 181. Total 554.

GREAT STORM WAVE ABOUT TWENTIETH

Foster Says it will be of the Blizzard Kind, Affecting Much of Continent

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan 8.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Jan. 11 to 15, warm wave 10 to 14, cool wave 13 to 17. Temperatures of this will average above the usual, storm forces will be a little more intense than common, but no very great storms are expected. Precipitation is expected in northwest, particularly in northern Rockies. High temperatures are expected to cross continent from 11 to 15 and be followed by a cool wave from 15 to 19.

Next warm wave will reach Vancouver near Jan. 14 and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross crest of Rockies by close of 15, plains and sections 16, great lakes and Ohio valleys 17, eastern sections 18, reaching Newfoundland near Jan 19. Storm wave will follow about one day behind warm wave and cool wave about one day behind storm wave.

This will be the greatest and most important storm of the month and we give positive and particular warnings to our readers, hoping they may avoid its dangers. It will be of the blizzard kind and will affect much of the continent, particularly in northern half and more particularly its northwest quarter. This will be the first section of the storm; next section will be described in next bulletin.

HEAVY STORMS.

Some heavy snows will reach the plains and sections of middle Canada, very deep snows are expected in the northern Rockies, dangerous storms on northwestern North Pacific coast and in all parts of Alaska. All northern States will get a share of these great winter storms which will be further described in next bulletin.

Another section of these great storm forces will affect the West Indies, Gulf of Mexico and Central America, where unusually severe weather is expected, particularly from Jan. 18 to 23. Near Jan. 19 a great norther, a blizzard, is expected in the northern Rockies and central valleys; much suffering and inconvenience may be avoided by being prepared.

These storms will belong to a new weather era and will inaugurate the 1917 crop season. For January the precipitation for this continent will go to the northern Rockies, Pacific slope and particularly to Alaska. A second part of the precipitation will go to Central America, northwestern South America and eastern Cuba.

Another severe storm period is expected during last week of January. Better not plan outdoor matters for that week. The 1917 storms are not expected to be so severe as were those of 1916, but the crop weather will be a matter of exceedingly great importance. We are now inclined to believe that Joseph knew something about planetary influences on the weather, otherwise he could not have advised the king of Egypt to lay up a bountiful supply of grain and other supplies for use during a series of drouth years which he predicted.

SUPPLY OF COAL CAME ON SATURDAY

It was reported to-day that the arrival of a number of cars of coal on Saturday had relieved the tension locally. few of the dealers received supplied and others report cars on the way, but they are provokingly slow in arriving. It is expected that the stringency will be entirely remedied in a short time.

The man ... ...ly and earnest and who follows them out is building a character that will stand the test. Every one of us is writing with a chisel and stylet on marble, and every stroke is indelible. We are building ourselves. Thus is the way with Christian character. It is a terrible thing to sin and yet we do not always realise it. Habits are easy to form. We talk about men beginning their lives at twenty one and girls at eighteen. The fact is that most men close their lives at twenty and most girls close their lives at eighteen. The first 20 years of our lives are worth more to us often than the remaining fifty. The danger is that we walk in the ways of sins until we have worn a path a good deal smoother than the surrounding ground and we dislike to leave it for the roughness of the ways of righteousness. There was scarcely a member of the congregation but could look back to days of innocence and say; "If I had only corrected that one sin, how much greater peace of mind would I have known in the years that have passed." Vice is never a side-track to virtue. How much it has cost some young men who just took one drink to be sociable, one game of cards to fill in the table, one visit to the gambling hell just to see what it was like.

Only in way came the moral nature, having been developed wrongly, be unmade. The power of God can, by a sudden bound, become the master of a man's whole nature. Men can sink so low that they cannot change, but no man can fall so into sin that the grace of God can change him. Who can believe in Christ the omnipotent son of a living God and not believe in his power to change man. Who will dare to discount instant conversion? What does history tell us? What else can we believe after studying the lives of Paul, Augustine, Newton, Wesley, Bunyon and others. All of these men came up to the invisible line, and the moment they stepped across it became a son of God. We cannot see the Mighty Hand but we can see men who have been lifted up by it. If there was anyone in the church tonight who were drifting, on that first Sunday evening of the New Year, they need not drink of it another minute. For the Grace of God could clear away their burdens and their worry. Just as we are making ourselves by the Grace of God, we are, and shall be throughout eternity."

FLOUR UP SUGAR DOWN

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

The Markets at a Glance.

Flour during the week has held in a steady market with increasing firmness, due to the net gains in the upward price of wheat. An advance of 30c. per barrel is recorded and the market is in continued firmness. Sugar declined 10c. per hundred during the week. This was stated in Canadian Grocer last week to be a strong probability. Conditions in Cuba continue favourable for a good crop of sugar. Butter is slightly easier, with a weakening noted in the price of creamery solids. Egg prices are weaker. Owing to the increased arrivals of new-laids

I will tell you all about what I will do for you in to-morrow night's Examiner.

the price has declined during the week. Storage eggs, however, are firmly held, as supplies are diminishing. Eggs from the Chicago district will be an increasing factor in the storage egg market from now on. Poultry is in a dull market, many of the wholesalers having to place their left-over stocks from the holiday season in storage in order to save them from a dead loss. Honey is in fair demand and prices are firm in this commodity. Shipments of dried fruits and other commodities from United States points are coming forward better. Embargoes recently in operation on certain railroads in that country have caused much inconvenience and delay to Canadian purchasers. Peppers are in firm market, with an advance recorded in white pepper during the week. Cloves are also in very firm market. Chicory is in strong market and is expected to be much higher in price. Teas have held steady during the week, with possibility of higher prices through the constantly advancing freight rates and marine insurance. Salt has advanced during the week. Certain brands of coffee in the tin have also been marked up. Bulk pickles have registered an advance. Rices are firm. One brand of package oatmeal has recorded an advance. Business during the week was quiet at the year-end but opened up with much promise during the first days of the New Year.

MAYOR DISCUSSES PROBLEMS ANTICIPATED FOR NEW YEAR

Pays a Tribute to the Management of Departments at City Hall and Unquestioned Integrity of Department Heads—Propose Fixing Assistant Chief.

CONTINUE WISE ECONOMY

The following is a copy of Mayor Duffus' inaugural address at the meeting of the new Council this morning:

Gentlemen,—In accepting the trust which the ratepayers have imposed on us for another year, I am sure you all feel, as I do, that a heavy burden is resting upon us. Each year the business is becoming greater and more burdensome and during the present year many important and intricate problems will require to be solved. We are passing through a critical period in the history of our city by reason of the fact that during this and the next few years we will be carrying what might be turned the "peak load" from a financial standpoint. Therefore it is encumbent that each and every one should do his very utmost to safeguard the city's best interests and thereby measure up to the confidence the citizens have placed in us.

To those of you who were in last year's Council and did not have to seek re-election, let me say I am glad to see you back looking so pleasant and apparently fit and ready to take up another year's work.

Ex-Aldermen Edgar and Evans, who always did their best, will no doubt be missed by all of us. In their places I heartily welcome Alderman Taylor and Alderman Smith. If these gentlemen prove to be as good aldermen as campaigners, they will do good work, which will be gladly accepted and very much appreciated.

It gives me much pleasure to welcome to the Council Board Alderman Worth, who was elected by acclamation in the West Ward, and whom I am sure, with youth on his side and his wide business experience, will prove a valuable member.

I also welcome Alderman Dobbin and McIntyre, two former chairmen who were returned by acclamation. These men are well tried and on account of their experience, we expect much of them, which I believe is forthcoming.

Now, gentlemen, I ask that "Harmony, Co-operation and Astute Business Acumen" be the ever prevailing spirit and policy of the year's Council. This is of paramount importance for without harmony, good business cannot be accomplished, and without good business and an abundant amount of it, we will fail sadly in carrying out our promises, meeting the expectations of the ratepayers and meriting the support they have given us.

I will do my utmost to carry out my part. I promise you I will be strict, but every member will receive just treatment and the rules which have been adopted for the successful carrying out of the business meetings of the Council, will be strictly adhered to, and by everyone doing his best, little difficulty should be experienced. We will also enlist, and I think we will have, the co-operation of the general public in carrying out efficiently the city's business interests during the year.

Finances.

The financial standing of any municipality very largely determines its business integrity and therefore the careful guarding of the city treasury becomes an important factor and should be kept uppermost in our minds, consistent with good, wise and prudent business judgment, more particularly at this time when our country is undergoing unprecedented conditions on account of the world wide crisis.

Last year we brought every reasonable means into effect to keep down the rate. Painful as it was, we found it necessary to relieve long and well tried officials in order to reduce the staff in some of the departments. This was brought about of course, by reason of the fact that the work was curtailed. We found it to be a business procedure ,just the same as any business firm or man would employ if he did not have work enough to keep his whole staff going, and I would recommend the same course this year under similar circumstances.

Peterborough should be proud of the management of its various departments at the City Hall. Smoothness and harmony prevails at all times. None have ever been accused of even the slightest irregularity. It is a matter of unqualified pride that our financial affairs have been so clean. We are not only free from serious reproach, but among municipalities we stand as representative of the highest type of financial integrity. There has been no whisper of scandal and the word "graft" has no local application.

The city debenture debt is reasonably high and as it will be several years before any substantial sums of debentures will have fully matured, it should be the policy of the Council to issue as few debentures as possible until such times as the debt will commence to mature proportionately with the expenditure, or the assessment increases accordingly.

In striking this year's rate you will all be made most familiar with the true conditions so that you will be fully aware of what you are doing, even though we have to hold an unusual number of meetings to accomplish our work.

The fixed expenses of the city, that is, the amount required to provide for debenture debt, schools, Police Department, Fire Department, ... but about one-sixth of the total expenditure. Therefore you will see that the amount over which the Council has control, is very small and consequently we cannot do anything of a very constructive nature without raising the mill rate. For this reason the utmost care will have to be exercised.

Board of Works.

I would advise as far as our Public Works are concerned, that only such work as is urgently essential be undertaken. However, we must keep in good condition our streets and sidewalks. It is not conducive to economy to allow our streets to get into a state of disrepair.

Additional oiling must be done to keep down the dust and preserve our streets. For this work I advise one extra distributing waggon in order that the work may be done more quickly, immediately the warm weather comes in the spring, so that the ratepayers will not experience the same nuisance they have heretofore. We may also be forced to install a storage tank for unloading carloads of oil in order to save demurrage charges.

Owing to shortage of good material for road repairing, we may find it advantageous to seek elsewhere for suitable road metal for such purposes and this should be taken up early so as to be ready for the spring.

A good supply of sewer pipes, cement, etc., should be secured at once on account of the rapidly increasing prices, in fact the same applies to nearly all material.

The foot bridge over the river at the C.P.R. naturally should be taken up and completed as early this year as conditions will permit, and I must ask the Chairman of the Board of Works to lose no time in this regard.

The water main for Auburn must be completed first thing in the spring, for the convenience and safety of the people in that section of the city.

Regarding the present Hunter street bridge, I insist on money being provided at once for a thorough inspection of the present bridge, as it is very old and may not be altogether safe for heavy traffic. This can be done to better advantage when the river is frozen over.

The question of a new bridge at Hunter street must receive the attention of the Council sooner or later and notwithstanding the high cost of material, circumstances may warrant its construction at a date which may require this year's Council to get plans and specifications completed so as to submit a by-law to the ratepayers for their verdict.

The attitude of the Dominion Government in regard to opening the canal, the Provincial Government in regard to Street Railway extentions, and the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats plant will have a large influence in this regard.

Sewers.—Owing to sewers, except at street intersections being wholly paid for by frontage tax and by the ratepayers whose property fronts on the streets they must naturally be built if properly petitioned for or when ordered by the Board of Health on sanitary grounds.

The Sewerage Disposal Location and Plant must be taken up as early as possible and every means adopted to amicably arrive at some solution of the whole problem, which, I hope, will be most satisfactory and advantageous to all concerned.

Surface Drainage is a question which vitally interests nearly the whole city, but I am of the opinion that this work should be left until after the war so as to provide if possible work for all those who may require it.

However, I would strongly advise that plans for such work be prepared so that it may be gone on with when the time comes, without undue delay. The same applies to any other work of a similar nature.

Property Committee.

In regard to some of the responsibilities which confront this committee, I may say that during the last year we have had good satisfaction with the incinerator. However, I regret I cannot say that work of garbage collection has been wholly satisfatory, judging from the number of complaints registered from time to time by many ratepayers. Too often the ashes and garbage are left and allowed to remain for days or until the next collection day. This should not be and will not be tolerated. The work is under the supervision of the Sanitary Inspector, and if he cannot control the collectors, or the collectors will not carry out the work according to contract, the work will have to be given to others who will do it reasonably satisfactory. I will ask the Property committee to take this important matter up at once.

The night soil collection which was very unsatisfactory last year, must receive the earliest attention of the Council and satisfactory arrangements adopted for taking care of the work as it vitally effects a large portion of the population as well as with the general health of the community.

Fire Department.

The Fire Department must receive careful and prompt attention. It has a considerable amount of good equipment, but there are some improvements that can and should be made, as it is not entirely adequate for a city the size, importance and area of Peterborough. The lives of our people, our factories and property are entitled to adequate protection and, must not be allowed to take any undue risk on account of inefficient fire fighting equipment.

The distance which some of our important industries are from the fire station ... is, I should think, impracticable ... appliances would be one way, and a good way, of making that provision, especially as such apparatus would be most useful for all parts of the city. With the quantity of snow we sometimes have, the question arises as to whether a heavy vehicle, such as a combination chemical and hose truck, would be the best, or whether it would not be wiser to procure two lighter vehicles, one for chemical tanks and one for hose, each to carry such other appliances as would be needed at the beginning of the fire.

The city has invested some $700,000 in a waterworks plant, a great amount of which is for fire protection, having installed, in addition to the water wheel driven pumps, which are capable of pumping 10 1-2 million gallons of water per day, an auxiliary steam pumping plant at a cost of $20,000, capable of pumping 3,000 gallons of water per minute, for the express purpose in case of use, anchor ice or accident or impediment to the water wheels from any cause whatever.

This is a large amount of money, and I am satisfied is money well spent by the Utilities Commission for our protection. But, gentlemen, a chain is only as strong as its weakest link. What is the use of having this large amount of money invested in waterworks, mains, hydrants, etc., together with about $45,000 in Fire Station, fire alarm system, steam engine, etc., and yet have inefficiency in other features of the Department. For this reason I would make the following recommendations:

1. That one, two or more pieces of motor-driven fire fighting apparatus be acquired, not too cumbersome or expensive, but such as will be most expedient and efficient for the purposes of the City of Peterborough.

2. That the proper number of good firemen be maintained at the Fire Station at all times, and that a system of efficiency badges be adopted for the members of the Department by which, commencing after the expiration of eight years' continuous service the badge shall carry an increase, and after twenty years of continuous service a still further increase, whereby the men who remain in continuous service on the Department will be automatically compensated from period to period for such service.

3. That a first-class Assistant Chief be engaged so that at any time the Department will have a competent officer to take charge.

4. That the Chief of the Department devote his time to the duties of the Fire Department, that he should not engage in public activities, no matter how commendable they might be, that will unduly detract his attention or cause him to be away from the Fire Station and the duties for which the city has him engaged, thereby reducing the efficiency of possibly half a million dollars' outlay for fire fighting purposes and making our property and the lives of our people that much more hazardous.

5.—That at no time or under any circumstances must the department be left without either the chief or the Assistant in charge.

Gentlemen, I make these recommendations advisedly. Some day something terrible may happen in loss of life and property which might have been averted. We have been placed here by the ratepayers. We must recognize our responsibility.

Legal and Reception Committee.

During the year no doubt a number of soldiers will return and at all instances when we can get the information in time, the trains must be met and the boys given the recognition they deserve.

Likewise, when officials from other municipalities visit our city, they should be given some attention. This is a practice carried out in other places and is always much appreciated.

During 1916 we have had considerable expense. A number of accidents occurred. This, I trust, will not be our experience during the present year.

Hydro Radials and Power.

During 1916 very little could be done in regard to radial railways owing to the attitude of the Government, which was, that no money could be provided for his purpose owing to the war. The power situation is not satisfactory in every respect in as much as it was understood that the municipalities would own the power and that it would be operated for them by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. At the present time it is owned by the Government and it is the intention of the Government to continue this arrangement and not turn it over to the municipalities, I am of the opinion that the City of Peterborough should take steps towards owning its own power. We have it right at our door and it can be developed almost as cheaply, if not cheaper, than any other place in the province. For these reasons I strongly feel that a meeting should be arranged, and Colonel, the Hon. Sir Adam Beck, M.P.P., the dean of the Hydro, invited to attend and deliver an address in order to allow the people of this District to become familiar with the whole situation. Sir Adam has always been a warm friend of Peterborough and I am sure the people would be delighted to hear him.

The matter as to whether the Street Railway and Gas Plant should be taken over by the city or left in the hands of the Government must be taken up and considered.

Further Street Railway extensions must also be taken up and, if possible, carried out.

New Industries.

The Manufacturers' Committee ... interested ... Peterborough a ... manner in order that they may get operating again with the least possible delay.

More advertising will be required, so that we may get a full share of the new industries that may be contemplating locating in Canada. This will no doubt entail considerable expense but, nevertheless, must be done.

Provincial Highways.

Already an association has been formed along the front and considerable arrangements for the building of a concrete highway from Quebec to Toronto by the Government. This highway is to follow the shore of Lake Ontario along what is known as the Kingston road.

I have been made a member of the executive of the committee which has in hand that portion of the road extending from York County to Prescott, and I am of the opinion that it would be a splendid arrangement for Peterborough if the Government could be induced to build a trunk line from Port Hope to Peterborough at the same time. This road will be a direct route from the States from east and west, as it will no doubt be continued through Western Ontario and the large number of tourists who will use this route will almost invariably visit Peterborough on account of the Lift Lock, our back lakes and other attractions. This would be a good advertisement for Peterborough and will put a large amount of money into circulation.

Of course it will not be built until after the war, but I think it is imperative if we are to benefit by it, that the matter be taken up at once and thoroughly investigated with a view to getting connection at Port Hope if found advisable.

Senatorship.—I think this council with the citizens, should do everything in their power to induce the Government to honour Peterborough and district by appointing one or two representatives to the Senate.

My attention has been frequently called by ratepayers, and especially by the Trades and Labour Council, to the present ward system of holding our municipal elections. I have thought it worth while to direct your attention to this matter, so that if you think it desirable to suggest any change it would have your careful consideration.

Gentlemen, these are some of the questions which will come before the Council, and I trust the taking of them up and giving them the consideration they deserve will meet with your approval.

MANY DEPUTATIONS TO WAIT UPON GOVERNMENT

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, January 8.—Conferences between Hon. T. W. Crothers and several of his colleagues with the representatives of the western coal operators and employees are being continued with the hope that a solution may be arrived at. The operators are still holding out against a further increase.

On Wednesday the majority of the Provincial Premiers will be in the Capital to confer in respect to Canada's returned soldiers.

On Thursday the Government will be waited upon by a large temperance delegation which will ask for Dominion wide prohibition and failing that legislation which will grant to the provinces larger powers for the restriction or abolition of the manufacture and the importation of liquor within the various provinces.

Other delegations are expected during the week in connection with the National Service movement, including delegation representing the Doukhobors of western Canada, who demand an assurance that they will not be conscripted into the army. They will probably get this.

A WONDERFUL MESSAGE FROM INDIA AS TOLD BY REV. R. H. A. HASLAM

Canadian Missionary From Kangra, India, Delivers Inspiring Address on Mission Work in That Far-away Part of the Empire.

A MODERN MIRACLE

Speaking in St. Luke's Anglican Church yesterday morning, the Rev. R. H. A. Haslam, M.A., of Kangra, India, brought a wonderful message to the congregation of that church. He not only brought a message of assurance and encouragement in regard to the work that has been done and can be done in India, but from the experiences of the missionaries in that land he related incidents which were well calculated to strengthen and renew the faith of all who heard him. If there were any present who listen Sunday after Sunday to sermons on texts from the Bible, and yet remained complacent in the belief that the days of miracle have passed, their conviction must have undergone a radical change while listening to Mr. Haslam yesterday morning. He told how one day in India the great miracle of the Pentecost was re-enacted before his very eyes when a zealous enthusiastic Indian Christian, who could not speak a word of English, spoke at great length on Bible truths to two English ladies who in turn could not speak a word of the native tongue; and yet the listeners understood every word that had been spoken to them. The story he told was not one he had gathered from reading or from other's experience. He had witnessed the whole thing. One day he was passing along the street when he found this fervent native addressing the two English ladies. The eloquence of his address restrained Mr. Haslam from interrupting the speaker, although it was certain that his two white friends could not understand a word of it. When he had finished the native turned to Mr. Haslam and said:

"Is it not true Sahib?"

"It is indeed true," returned the missionary.

"These are wonderful truths," continued the native. "Is it not most wonderful that God has revealed them too poor outcast like me?"

"It is most wonderful," was the reply, "that He has revealed them to any of us."

Then he remarked to the Indian that his remarks had been of such eloquence and truth that he was sorry the ladies could not understand it. Here the two ladies broke into the conversation assuring him that they had understood.

"But that is impossible," cried the missionary. "It is impossible that you should have understood."

The ladies, however, repeated for him the words and theme of what the Indian had just propounded to them so eloquently in his native tongue and he was forced to the conclusion that a miracle had taken place.

The Rev. Mr. Haslam occupied the pulpit at St. Luke's Church in the morning and at All Saints' in the evening. In the morning he took for his text the 20th verse of the 16th Chapter of St. Mark, which reads as follows:—"And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following." Throughout the whole of his address the speaker urged upon his hearers to remember always that, in their efforts to forward His Kingdom the Lord would never fail to work with them, and in them, and through them. That was the secret of the work that was being done and had been done by the church that had won thousands of souls to Christ. Any success that attended the work in Kangra—and there had been success of the right kind there—was due to the fact that every missionary realized that God was working with them and confirming the word with signs following.

If the wonderful opportunity of the days that have just passed is to be redeemed, we must realize that God is working in us and through us. The speaker remembered one occasion was several scores of missionaries gathered together and spent three days on their knees in prayer. Hours would pass without an audible prayer disturbing the silence. The result of this great effort was in evidence in the years that followed. The rate of baptisms and of converts increased marvellously as a result of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit following this period of prayer. Men have given up working in their own strength for God—now they work in the Apostolic spirit, and have God working with them and through them.

The speaker had become more and more convinced as time went on that God had been with them in the choice of a field for their work. The opportunities in Kangra were wonderful. From that district come the best fighters of all India, regiments of whom are at the present time aiding in the trenches of France, and fighting in greater numbers in Egypt and Mesopotamia. If the missionaries in Kangra could but influence these men for Christianity their example would tell upon the whole Indian army as they were the superior soldiers of the Indian ranks. Then again there were regiments of Ghourkas stationed within reach of the missionaries at Kangra. The native soil of these men was closed to the efforts of the missionaries, but the regiments spent two months each year at home. The impression Christianity made upon these soldiers was sure to be transmitted to all at home when they returned.

Another great opportunity came through the location of a great heathen temple just a stone's throw away from missionary headquarters. To this temple daily come thousands of pilgrims and sometimes in a single day as many as ten thousand people from all parts of India opened the missionaries in the course of their pilgrimage to this heathen temple. The speaker had talked with men who believed that the only way of Salvation lay through holding one of their arms above their heads until it withered. He had come in contact with men who had kept the vow of silence for as many as ten years and had seen others who had cut their tongues out because they had offended them. Upon as many of these as possible the missionaries sought to impress the ideals and truths of Christianity, thus extending the influence of their work throughout the whole of India. From all these things it could be seen that God had been with them in the choice of a field.

God had been with them too, in the choice of a Governing Board. It was no haphazard event that the first Chairman of the Board was the greatest Bishop on the bench of the Church in Canada. As a member of the Board they had, too, the strongest evangelist in the whole of the province of Punpal to-day. The British Representative, who at first announced himself as not particular at all in attending church (much less a bigger church) became a convert himself and spent all the time not actually engaged in his official duties in efforts to assist in the forwarding of the Kingdom of God there. The British Governor of the Province, Colonel Thompson, who was in office at the beginning of the work, was an enthusiastic helper. He aided the missionaries in procuring a site for their building at a nominal sum, from the Government, and placed them in control of the work among the lepers. This latter gave them a greatly added power in the community. When the attitude of Colonel Thompson, who did all in his power to aid the missionaries, was contrasted with that of his successor, a Jew who did all in his power to hamper them, the speaker held the conviction that God had indeed favoured them unusually in the launching of the work in Kangra.

His special guidance could also be seen in the defining of the missionary policy. This had taken of the form of a threefold effort along the following lines—(1) Educational, (2) Medical and, (3) Evangelical. At first sight this plan seemed an easy one to perfect. This was not, however, the case as it was possible to waste any amount of money in schemes which, while in themselves good, were failures from the evangelistic viewpoint. The educational branch of the work took the form of a Normal school. In this school every single teacher who goes out to the pupils in that Province is brought under the influence of Christianity for a year.

The medical work proved an immense source of help. One day a whole crowd of strange women were gathered on the verandah of the hospital. When asked for an explanation one of them spoke out. She had been a patient in the hospital, and returning home had told of the wonderful institution where all casts were treated with love and given every attention. The women of her community would not give the slightest degree of credence to her story so she had said, "Come and see." After three days of walking they arrived at the hospital and stood on the verandah, a crowd of unexpected but welcome visitors.

The speaker referred to what had been accomplished by the native churches in India through their faith and prayer. "I have learned more of the power of prayer from Indian converts that I had ever any conception of here at home," said the speaker. Concluding he made an earnest appeal for the congregation to invest in lives—to give of their life for the lives of others. The people at home must do the work. The missionaries were but their agents. The speaker made a special plea in closing for those at home to let God work in them and through them.

"GLAD TO LIVE AND NOT AFRAID TO DIE"

Canada's War.

"This is Canada's war as well as that of Great Britain," said Dr. Edwards. "Don't imagine that the United States, with one hundred million people, would help you if Canada was in danger. They are not able to help themselves even when their own women and children are murdered as they were when the Lusitania was sunk. They are too busy making money. If we cannot depend upon the United States we can depend upon the British navy, to which every country in the British Empire, except Canada, has contributed. We were too busy talking 'autonomy.'" Dr. Edwards closed with an appeal to the young men of Peterborough to enlist and serve their King and country.

Good Missionaries.

Col. Ponton, who has three sons on active service, was the next speaker.

"I don't see enough young men here," said Col. Ponton. "This is a good meeting, but where are the young men. You who are here tonight can go out and be good missionaries in a citizenship movement to get behind the Peterborough Battalion. I hope your City Council will take it up, also the Board of Education. In Belleville, the Board of Education served notice on the eligible young men on the teaching staff to the effect that their services would be more appreciated in the ranks.

"I would rather be a dead soldier with his assurance of immortality than a dead citizen," said Col. Ponton. I do not ask you to send your sons to go and die, but I ask you to send them to go and live. Look up to heaven's canopy and say—glad to live and not afraid to die. There are many men in Peterborough as well as in Belleville, who can be found in the poolrooms. There was a hundred of them in there Saturday night.

Good Judgment.

The need of exercising good judgment in the matter of determining who should enlist was emphasized in a little story told by the speaker concerning a man in an Old Country town who one day was publicly humiliated by a representation of girls who undertook to present their victim with a white feather. The girls were astonished to discover that the man wore on his breast under his coat a Victoria Cross, which he had earned some time prior to the occasion referred to.

Col. Ponton produced a number of bulletins from the bulletin boards of some of the big London dailies, which referred to a big gain made by the Canadians in the vicinity of Ypres. They were as follows:

"The Chronicle" — Canadians retake lost Trenches.

"London Globe" — Gallant Canadians. The Ypres Recovery.

"Westminster Gazette" — Canadians Brilliantly Retake Lost Ground.

"Mall Mall Gazette — Canadian Success at Ypres.

"London Telegraph" — Canadians Recapture One Mile of Trench.

"London Evening News" — Brave Maple Leaf.

"Is that not worth fighting for?" asked Col. Ponton amid an outburst of applause. The speaker produced a gas helmet which was perfected by the British authorities twenty-eight days after the Germans made their first gas attack on the western front.

Col. Ponton closed with a stirring and effective appeal for men. The meeting closed with the rendition of the National Anthem by the Band.

Acknowledging a Christmas parcel from the British Canadian Club, signaler Allan MacNabb, of Peterboro writes from France as follows:—

Dear Members:

Your very fine and much appreciated Christmas parcel arrived two weeks ago.

You will likely think me a very ungrateful chap for not writing you before. However I hope you will forgive me when I tell you that the day after I received the same I was sent to dear old Blighty on leave, my, but it did go fine but it seemed to be over before it had really started.

On my return to France I was sent up the line almost at once, and as we are very busy up here at the present time this is about the first real opportunity which I have had to thank you for your great kindness.

It is certainly due of the club to send us boys these parcels. You cannot realize how good it is to receive a box out here.

The assortment of your box was splendid and everything arrived in A1 shape.

I shall now close wishing you all a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year, and the Club the best of success.

Sincerely yours,
ALLAN E. MacNABB.

Ald. Weir Raises Question of His Duty and Power

In assuming the chairmanship of the Board of Works this morning Ald. Weir said he desired an understanding of his authority in connection with the Engineering Department. He wished to avoid friction in his relations with the City Engineer and desired to profit by Ald. McIntyre's experience. Ald. Weir wanted his position and his duties clearly defined.

Mayor Dallas gave it as his opinion that the Chairman of the Committee should be supreme for the working of the department for which he was responsible.

Ald. Smith, with the savoir faire of an old timer, stated that the chairman of each committee "should be boss of the job." Friction would follow any other method. He had carefully followed the Council meetings and had noticed that many small jobs ordered to be done were never carried out. The Council would look to the committee chairman to see that such work was done. They would be responsible to the aldermen.

WIFE FOUND KILLED CLASPING HER BABY

Husband Fled After the Shooting — Boarder in Rossi Home Tells the Police.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8. — With her baby, six months old, asleep in her arms, and with bullet wounds in her head, Mrs. Katherine Rossi was dead in her home, at Paterson, N.J., late Thursday night by Chief of Police Frederick Pickering. Feldasaro Rossi, her husband, a silk printer, was said by the police to have fled immediately after the shooting.

According to Vincaso Giardamo, a border, Rossi came in from work late and asked why supper was still on the table. Mrs. Rossi replied, he said, that she was waiting for him, whereupon Rossi went into his room and came out with a revolver. Giardamo, who said he fled after trying to protect Mrs. Rossi, was so frightened that he could not at first tell the police the location of the house.

Rossi was said by his acquaintances to have been moody and to have been in the habit or working off fits of anger by shooting at a target in the yard. Such a target, almost shot to pieces, was found by the police.

FIRST MEETING OF THE 1917 CITY COUNCIL WAS HELD THIS AFTERNOON

Mayor Duffus and His Colleagues Set a Dizzy Pace at the Initial Meeting--Meeting Lasted One Hour

Expeditious and business-like was the first meeting of the 1917 City Council which was held at two o'clock this afternoon. The meeting concluded at three o'clock, and in the hour devoted to the transaction of business the Council waded through a dense volume of business, which included such weighty problems as the smoke nuisance and votes for women.

Appropriation Higher.

The Peterborough Library Board's request for an appropriation of $4,500 was referred to the Finance committee. The appropriation is a couple of hundred dollars higher than last year.

Report on Debentures.

A report from City Treasurer Adams regarding the respective advantage of sinking fund and instalment debentures seemed to favour sinking fund debentures in preference to the instalment variety. Higher rates are usually secured for sinking fund debentures. The report was referred to the Finance committee.

Hunter Street Bridge.

City Engineer Parsons, in a letter to the Council drew attention to the condition of the Hunter street bridge which has seen forty-two years' service. Mr. Parsons suggested that a competent steel expert be secured to examine and report upon the structure.

Ald. Duncan said that one of the piers on the north side was being undermined, due it is thought to the current at that point.

The question of inspecting the bridge was left with the chairman of the Board of Works, the City Engineer and the Mayor, with power to secure an expert.

Tree Planting.

The matter of tree planting was also referred to in the City Engineer's report. Mr. Parsons favours the adoption of a system of organised tree planting.

Final Settlement.

The settlement of a number of matters in connection with the arbitration held some time ago between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, was left with the Mayor, City Solicitor G. N. Gordon and the Legal committee. The matter of deciding how much the city shall be required to pay the company for new business obtained by the company prior to the final acceptance of the plant by the city, is one of the chief points at issue.

An Acknowledgment.

A letter acknowledging with thanks the receipt of a cheque reimbursing the Lindsay firemen for their assistance at the time of the Quaker Oats fire was received.

Smoke Nuisance.

In a letter to the City Council Mr. G. O. Cameron, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company, suggested that the question of minimizing the smoke nuisance be dealt with during the coming year. "Yours for a bigger and better city" was the concluding sentence of the communication. The matter will be taken up later.

Votes For Women.

A letter was received from the Ontario Franchise Campaign Association thanking the Council for its support in the matter of securing the Dominion franchise for married women and soliciting further efforts in an endeavour to secure the Provincial franchise. The Council on behalf of the municipality was asked to write to the parliamentary representatives and solicit their interest in the matter. Mayor Duffus expressed his approval of the movement.

Salary Increase.

Mr. F. W. Miller's request for an increase in salary was referred to the Finance committee. The City Relief Officer at present receives $700 a year.

Park Street Drain.

A communication was received from the clerk of North Monaghan respecting the Park street drain effecting the property of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company. Mayor Duffus asked Ald. Weir, the 1917 chairman of the Board of Works, to take the matter up at once and see that the work is completed.

Garbage Collection.

Mr. C. H. Clementi in a letter to the Council complained of the work of the garbage collectors. The matter was referred to the Property committee. "If the work is not done according to the contract we will call for new tenders," said Mayor Duffus.

Added to Committee.

At the request of Ald. Saunders, Ald. W. H. Taylor was added to the Fire, Water and Light committee, as a representative from the South Ward.

Taking No Chances.

A letter was received from Ald. W. H. Taylor requesting that an insurance policy respecting a company locally represented by Ald. Taylor, be returned in order to avoid the possibility of any question being raised as to the legality of the transaction. The matter was referred to the Finance committee.

By-law Passed.

A by-law confirming the contract for the removal of ashes from the city incinerator was passed. Mr. H. F. Doig agrees to do the work for one year at a cost of $155.

Board of Health.

Ald. Saunders, Ald. Duncan and Mr. James Murty were appointed as members of the Peterborough Board of Health.

Was Re-appointed.

Ald. Stratton was re-appointed as member of the committee to distribute the charitable funds under the will of the late Almira Grover Foley, for a term of two years.

Public Library Board.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall was re-appointed member of the Peterborough Public Library Board for a term of three years.

Protestant Home.

Ald. Dobbin was appointed a member of the Board of Directors of the Peterborough Protestant Home for the ensuing year.

A Starter.

Ald. Stratton moved that the sum of $3,000 be appropriated for the Board of Education until such time as the Council is in a position to take up the estimates.

Weekly Meetings.

Ald. Dobbin favoured a Saturday night meeting each week attended by the garbage men, night soil men, the Sanitary Inspector and others interested in the collection of garbage, where complaints could be heard and dealt with.

OBITUARY

ALICE CROLY.

Alice E. Croly, the five year old daughter of Mr. Lodi Croly and Mrs. Croly, formerly Miss Helen Croly, daughter of the Rev. John Trotter, pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, in Peterboro, some years ago, died in New York on Saturday. The funeral took place this afternoon at 3.30 from the Murray street Baptist church, the Rev. Mr. Webb officiating.

ALPHONSE McGEE.

The body of Alphonse McGee, another of the Quaker Oats victims, was found on Saturday afternoon. Mr. McGee, who was born in Kinmount, was 21 years old, and the son of Mrs. John McGee, Kinmount. Mrs. John Brady, a sister of the deceased, resides in East City. The body will be sent to Kinmount to-morrow morning on the 9.20 train, where interment will take place.

The remains which were badly charred were identified by his watch and chain which were found with the body.

MATTHEW McILWAIN.

On Sunday morning, after one week's illness, with pneumonia, an old and respected resident of this city died at 340 Aylmer street, in the person of Mr. Matthew McIlwain, aged 67 years. The deceased leaves to mourn his demise, five sons, William, Matthew and Robert of this city, Jas. and Herbert of Winnipeg, Man., and five daughters, Mrs. C. Burns and Mrs. Marvihill of Toronto, Mrs. W. Bates of Lanark, Mrs. Shrobbrook of Los Angeles, Cal., and Mrs. Ed. Cooney of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held to-morrow and interment will take place at Lakefield. Service will be held at the home of Mr. Edward Cooney, 340 Aylmer street, at 1 o'clock.

E. W. ELCOMBE.

Mr. E. W. Elcombe died last night at Nicholls Hospital aged 66 years. Mr. Elcombe came to Canada from Maidstone, Kent, England, 34 years ago and was prominent in the grocery business in Peterborough. He resided in Campbellford about 12 years. He took a keen interest in military affairs and was a member of the 57th Regiment. He was a member of the Lansdowne Lodge S.O.E., in which he had served as president, secretary and district deputy. He is survived by his wife, formerly Josephine Greer, daughter of Mr. W. J. Greer, Dundalk, formerly of Otonabee and three sons, Sergt. Clarence, 128 Canadian Overseas Battalion, R. F. Corporal Harold, 4th Canadian Reserve Battery, England and Frederick at home and five daughters, Lena, Georgie, Lulu, Audrey and Olive at home. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, 527 McDonnel street to the Little Lake cemetery under the auspices of the S.O.E. The Rev. Mr. Greatrix and the Rev. Mr. Peever will officiate.

THOMAS LAPLANTE.

The death took place about noon today of Thomas Laplante at the family residence, 220 Rubidge street.

The deceased who was 78 years of age came to Peterborough in 1866 from Lepairie, Que., and has been a continuous resident of the city ever since. He was for a number of years bailiff of the First Division Court of Peterborough, but relinquished the position several years ago, when he was unable to fulfill the duties of the office. He has been ill for a long period but it was only a short time before Christmas that he was altogether confined to his bed. His widow who was Margaret McGrath survives, as well as four sons and two daughters: Frank in Rochester, Fred and Harold at Home and Roland with the 92nd Battery in France, Mother at home, and Mrs. E. M. Glover of this city. Mr. H. T. Laplante and Mr. H. Laplante, Crescent street are brothers and Mrs. Lesellier of this city is a sister.

The deceased who was of a very kind disposition had many friends who will severely regret to hear of his death.

The funeral announcement will be made to-morrow.

MRS. ROBERT BYERS.

Death claimed one of the pioneer residents of Cavan Township at an early hour Sunday morning, January 7th, in the person of Mrs. Robert Byers, who passed away after a short illness.

Mrs. Byers, always a very active woman, had been in fairly good health until the past year. On Christmas Day she seemed particularly well, but the day after became ill, and, though she rallied since that time, she took another bad turn about one o'clock yesterday morning, and shortly after passed peacefully away.

The late Mrs. Byers was in her seventy-eighth year, being born Oct. 31st, 1839. In February, 1860, she was married to Mr. Robert Byers, and with her husband, went to live on their farm in Cavan Township, on the boundary road between Manvers and Cavan Townships. At that time the land in that district was covered with forest and sparsely settled, and many were the hardships they endured in the ensuing years in clearing their farm. Her husband, who survives her, is in his eighty-first year. Four daughters, Mrs. Sarah Fallis, Millbrook; Mrs. J. A. Perry, 316 Maitland Ave., City; Mrs. Jos. Ingram, 304 Pearl Ave., City, and Mrs. D. S. Cairns, Bethany; three sons, Messrs. William Byers, Bethany; Amos Byers, on the homestead, and Pte. Milton V. Byers, with the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles, France; nine grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren, also survive.

Pte. Milton Byers, the youngest son, enlisted in Calgary, and was unable to get home to see his parents before going overseas.

The funeral will take place to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon.

MRS. OCTAVE TROMBLEY.

This morning, in the death of Mrs. Trombley, widow of Octave Trombley, Peterborough lost one of its oldest citizens, one who has been a continuous resident for sixty years. Mrs. Trombley, nee Levasseur, was a native of St. Martins, Quebec, from which she came to Peterborough with her late husband, in the early fifties, and has lived here until she reached the advanced age of 89 years, outliving her husband about 20 years. Her death was due to an attack of la grippe, acting upon a constitution enfeebled by advanced age. During her three score years in Peterborough, Mrs. Trombley has seen Peterborough advance from the village stage to its present position of importance.

She leaves behind her two sons, Mr. John C. Trombley, 436 Charlotte street, and Mr. Napoleon Trembley, 149 Rutherford avenue, and one daughter, Mrs. Broughlow Hamilton.

The date of the funeral will be announced later, but will be from 536 Charlotte street.

Miss M. Wallace, daughter of the Rev. Mr. Wallace, formerly pastor of the Methodist church, Peterborough has taken Mr. Stubb's place at the Collegiate and will reside at 758 George street.

BIRTH.

FONTAINE.—To Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Fontaine, 311 McDonnel Street, Dec. 28th, 1916, a daughter.

DIED.

PERCY—Died suddenly at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. I. Sanderson, 800 Bloor Street, West, Toronto, on Friday, Jan. 5, 1917, Mary J., beloved wife of Stephen R. Percy, of 336 Aylmer street, Peterborough, in her 70th year.

NEWFOUNDLAND LOYALTY

Bereaved in War Recent Sympathy—Look to England

No British colony responded to Britain's call for men in the war with more alacrity and thoroughness than has Newfoundland, in proportion to her population. The other day a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, who had travelled through that island, told how the people are inclined to repeat sympathy for the loss of their sons in battle, so great is their pride in making that sacrifice. To one who came to condole with him on the death of his son at the front, a citizen of St. John's said: "I have a great mind to knock you down! I do not want sympathy; I have only done what I ought to do for my country."

England, therefore, is still the Newfoundlander's "country," after the centuries that have passed since Sir Humphrey Gilbert formally took possession of the island in Queen Elizabeth's name. Newfoundlanders cling to the English connection and the English loyalty as their one link with the great world.

We may regard the spirit which refuses sympathy in bereavement as the very fanaticism of patriotism. But we must nevertheless admire the spirit of this group of sturdy people, fewer in number than the people of our single county of Bristol, in the cold northern sea, who have built up a solid and self-governing community under great obstacles.

FOR HORSE BREEDERS

Ming Wastage Enormous—Start Breeding Now

The breeding of horses has become a matter of prime necessity. The demand is increasing and will continue to increase long after peace has been declared. If Canada is to take advantage of the situation the time to start in is now. There will be an assured market demand for foals at weaning time from mares bred now. Not only has the wastage by reason of war been enormous, but in all the belligerent countries, not omitting Great Britain, there has either been a partial stoppage or a whole stoppage of breeding by reason of the scarcity of labor, the disturbed conditions, or entire devastation.

Whether the war lasts or ceases there must continue an undiminished demand for horses. When peace comes there will be a long period of replenishment. Then quality as much and even more than quantity will be required. Hence the evident call to every Canadian farmer is to breed and to breed to the best available, to utilise his mares for production and to secure the immediate services of the best pure bred sire of type in his neighborhood.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened, and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

Russians Take 800 Prisoners And 16 Guns

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 8.— The Russians take eight hundred prisoners with a village and sixteen guns near Riga.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 9. —Russia's thrust on the Riga front assumed the importance of a continued offensive today. It has already gained considerable ground against the German columns and was apparently proceeding to-day with extraordinarily violent fighting.

It is along the reaches of the Aux river, apparently, that the most bitter fighting is proceeding.

Russian forces have made a distinct advance in this sector.

Artillery firing has increased violently all along this line.

VERNON CASTLE IN AIR FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—Vernon Castle has been heard from. He is in the field in France with No. 1 Squad of the Royal Flying Corps. Here is his message to his friends in America at New Year's:—

"I have been out in France for six months now, and after the first of the year I am going to be sent to England on home service for a few weeks' rest. I hear that London is very gay now, and will be glad to see the old place again.

"On fine days we get quite a lot of excitement around here. Yesterday I had a battle in the air with two Hun machines. One of them I chased away. The other I shot down. He went down in a spiral nose dive and flattened out on the ground. At first I was delighted that another German was gone. Now I am sorry, for he was a brave man.

"I suppose you in America have heard of our good old friend, Lionel Walsh, who has entertained you many times in Broadway musical plays. A shell burst right where he was standing. That was the end of another brave Englishman."

The British "Tank" Is A Most Wonderful Invention

Opinion of Neutral Military Officer—Inventor, Col. Swinton, Promoted—The War Has Developed Only One New Invention and That is the Tank Which is Considered Far More Wonderful Than the Submarine or the Zeppelin

STORY OF A "TANK" GUNNER

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, January 9.—Winter weather forecasts renewed activity by the British "tanks," which the terrible mud on the Somme front for several weeks kept off the firing line. With a surface of hard frozen ground, the enormous possibilities of the "Willies," are likely to be demonstrated in telling fashion.

Some light on the discussion as to origin of the "tank" idea is given in the London Gazette announcement that Lieutenant-Colonel E. D Swinton has been temporarily appointed a General Staff Officer, first grade. This promotion is in line with reports that Colonel Swinton was largely responsible for the "tanks."

Colonel Swinton, who is a "D. S. O." and "R. E." was known the world over in 1914-1915 as the "eye witness" who officially recorded the French and British exploits on the firing line.

The London Gazette in citing some 1,200 men for valor does conspicuous honour to soldiers attached to the "tank" service.

Writing in a Swiss periodical Colonel Gablonsky says that the war has developed only one new invention and that is the "tank," which he considers far more wonderful than the submarine or the Zeppelin.

"It sounds like a myriad of hailstones beating against the window panes of a moving train," when in a "tank" under German infantry fire, writes a French machine gunner in the Frech magazine "Lecture Pour Tous."

"We were in the front line with our 'tanks,' in little groups of 'crews,' writes the gunner who was there.

"There was the crew of the 'creme de Menthe,' of the 'Diplodokus,' and one ironically styled 'The Boches' Victory.'

A SHARP WHISTLE.

"Suddenly the glare of a rocket lights up the sky, followed by ten, twenty, thirty others. A sharp whistle sounds strangely in our prison. The hour has really come; we are to start.

"My heart is beating violently—I do not know why. One needs to have 'sea legs' in this carcass of steel. The motor system of our 'tank' is gripping the soil, sticking to it, gliding and dragging itself along like a centipede. As we advance the earth everywhere around our track is ploughed up and thrown aside. Heavens, how stifling it is!

"A heavy thud, then a flash over by head. Our 'tank' is trembling from top to bottom, and has stopped for the eighth of a second. We have just fired. This perpetual rumbling over my head has a disturbing effect; the machine resounds, the air vibrates. They are getting it, those Boches. 'Tock, tock, tock! Thousands of 'Tock! tock!' re-echo on the steel sides of our 'tank.' The German guns have opened fire on us. But they have as much effect on our machine as pellets of bread against a wall.

"Splinters of wood jump up on all sides of us, the chevaux de frise are beaten down. I have the sensation of being in the interior of a gigantic iron wedge which is cutting through something like butter. We fire without ceasing, hand on gun and eye glued to the loophole pierced in the steel with the sweat pouring down our foreheads.

"Another violent shock, a heavy blow and a crashing. We are going straight through a wall. We are pulverizing machine guns. Grenades burst upon our armour. We are in the midst of the 'nest.' All at once, German heads with terror on their faces appear on both sides of use! To Work! Now it is my turn and that of my comrades! Our machine guns crackle.

"The Germans are in the greatest disorder. They throw themselves flat on their stomachs, they raise their arms to heaven, some of them try to run away. A whistle sounds in the 'tank' and it stops. Then wild cheers come faintly to my ears. And I see our boys in possession of the German 'nest'."

A Place For His "Staff"—A certain general, who is very small in stature was going to adjudicate upon some manoeuvres which were to take place some little distance from headquarters. Being somewhat pressed for time he had not changed into uniform, but drove to the railway station in muft intending to change in his saloon. The officers forming his staff were awaiting him, and so was the train but where the general's reserved accommodation was situated no one seemed to know. A guard was passing, and the general tapped him smartly with his cane. "I say, guard," he said, "where am I and my staff to go?" The guard hated to be tapped, and furthermore, he did not know the general. "You can go in that compartment there," he said severely, surveying the walking-stick, "and as for your blessed staff, as you call it, you can put it on the hat-rack."

GREEK SITUATION APPROACHED ANOTHER CLIMAX TO-DAY

Another Note Has Been Despatched to Greece Demanding Compliance With All Requests as to Disarmament and Neutrality Within 48 Hours

BLOCKADE CONTINUES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Allies have sent another note to Greece insisting on their demands being granted in forty-eight hours. The Greek situation approached another climax to-day.

The Times to-day declared that the Allies' conference in Rome formulated and despatched another note to Greece, this time equivalent to an ultimatum, demanding compliance with all previous requests as to disarmament and neutrality within forty-eight hours.

Other despatches from Greece today indicated a serious food shortage, due to the continuance of the Allies' strict blockade of Greece. King Constantine personally set the example to his people by applying for and receiving a bread card.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

And while these things went forward Mary Burton sat alone in the private office of Jefferson Edwardes, waiting. Through century-long hours she had in her ears only the din from the street and that incessant ticking of the stock tape at her elbow.

Every few minutes she arose, and anxiously ran through her fingers the long thin coil of paper which it fed so endlessly into its tall wicker basket. She could make but little of those abbreviated letters and numbers though she realised that every succeeding glance showed a shrinkage of each value. One thing she could read with a deadly clarity—those hideous words that meant the falling of the outposts. "So and So announce that they cannot meet their obligations." There were other grim scraps of information, too, wedged between the hurried quotations, such as "Police reserves called to quell riot at closed North Bank," and finally, "Troops from Governor's Island to guard the sub-treasury."

Finally she went to the window, and raised the sash to let the cold air blow against her fevered cheeks, and as she did so she heard yells and the gongs of patrol waggons. The madness was spreading beyond the confines of enclosing walls.

Mary Burton turned, heavy hearted, back to the room's interior, and her glance fell on the clock. It recorded two-forty. She wondered when Edwardes would return. She had spent the day in his office because she knew that when he came in, as he had done several times, only to hasten out again, he found in her forced smile renewal of strength for his combat, which enabled him to go out smiling through the drawn agony of his harassment.

The hateful ticker drew her back with its light clatter. Perhaps at last it had good tidings to offer. Unless it brought them soon it would bring them too late—like a reprieve after execution. She took the narrow thread of paper in her hand, and glanced at its latest entries. As she watched the small type wheel revolve and stamp, it broke upon her that the inanimate herald was spelling out letter by letter, a familiar name.

"EDWARDESANDED WARDES."

With a smothered shriek Mary Burton dropped the tape as though it had scorched her fingers. She groped her way half blindly to the chair by Jefferson's desk, and, sinking into it, buried her face in her crossed arms. She could not have shed a tear or uttered a word. She was paralysed in an icy terror. That was how all these other announcements had begun: With the name of the failing firm. After what seemed a decade she drew herself up and sat erect and white, trembling from her throat to her feet. She forced her agonised features into a semblance of artificial calm. Suppose that he should return to her now, defeated, ruined, crushed and open his door on that picture of despair and surrender!

The clock said two-fifty-five. So she had been sitting here ten minutes! Grasping the arms of her chair, and bracing herself, she rose with a labored effort and went resolutely back to the ticker where, as one draws to one side a veil which may reveal tragedy, she picked up the tape again. She saw no name this time, and suddenly it called to her that the monstrous thing had passed callously on to other news—as though there were other news!

She dragged it out of its twisted coils in the basket and read in cold unpunctuated capitals, EDWARDES AND EDWARDES FAIL TO MEET OBLIGATIONS.

The girl reeled and leaned limply against the wall, and as she stood there overpowered and dizzy, a low, incoherent moan came up from her throat. Then, as she mechanically held the tenuous death-warrant in her pulseless fingers, her eyes fell on an item just finished:

MARKET TAKES TURN BURTON BROKERS BIDDING UP.

A comprehension came to her and her brain reeled in fury and torture. Now that his end was accomplished the Great Bear had turned bull. He would sell back on the rise what he had slaughtered on the fall, and when to-morrow's reaction came with its roster of deluded misery he would harvest vast profits on his massacre.

She heard a sound beyond the ground glass as though a hand groped before its fingers found and closed upon the knob. Then slowly the door swung inward and Jefferson Edwardes entered. His overcoat hung over one arm, and as Mary saw his face, her hands clutched at her heart, but he did not seem to see her—or to see anything. With a most careful deliberation the ruined man closed the door silently behind him. He did it as though he were entering a sick room, where he must guard against disturbing the patient with the slightest sound. Then he took a step or two forward and halted to stand gazing straight ahead of him, while with the sleeve of one arm he brushed at his forehead and moistened his lips with the tip of his tongue.

Mary wondered for an agonised instant whether the cord of his sanity had snapped under the day's terrible ordeal, and she stood there still leaning limp and pallid and wide-eyed against the wall, holding before her the tape that had told her the story—and not realising that she held it. Then the man awoke from his sleep-walker's vacancy and realised her presence. At the sight of her despairing eyes and inert figure restin- for support against the mahogany panels, his expression altered. His eyes woke to life and again moistening his lips, he forced the ghost of a smile which at first succeeded only in being ghastly.

"So you know?" he questioned.

Mary Burton did not reply in words—she could not, but she nodded her head and something between a groan and a sob came from her parted lips. Then her voice returned and she murmured in heart-broken self-accusation—"It was because of me."

He stood shaking himself as a dog shakes off water. His drooped shoulders came back with an abrupt snap and his head threw itself up and his chest out. With a swift stride he had reached her and folded her into his embrace. For once the regal confidence had left her and the courage was dead in her heart. She lay in his arms a dead weight, which but for his supporting strength, would have crumbled to a limp mass on the floor. But as he held her, fresh bravery flooded his arteries and his voice came clear and untainted of weakness:

"We still have each other," he told her passionately. "You once asked me whether, if you were penniless, I should still want you. To-day I am penniless and owe millions—do you still want me?"

Her arms clung to him more closely and the eyes that gazed into his revealed as they had on that first night, all that was in her soul. Once more she answered him with a question: "Look at me—do I want you?"

He swept her from her feet and carried her to an arm chair where he put her gently down, then he knelt by her side with her hands clasped convulsively in his own. For a moment it is doubtful whether he realised anything save her presence. His voice was the voice of the man who had met her by the mountain road, of the man who had come to her in the darkness at Haverly Lodge, and claimed her without preamble.

"The mountains still stand—and there are cottages there where even a very poor man may find shelter. I would rather have it with you, than to own Manhattan Island without you."

There was a knock at the door of the private office, and Edwardes, rising from his knees, went to receive the message. He came back very gravely.

"I have to face an unpleasant interview, dearest," he said. "One of those bankers who were crushed as incidents to my ruin—who was guilty only of standing in your brother's path, is here. I'm told that he is half mad, and I must do what I can." He opened a door into a small conference-room. "Will you wait for me—there?"

With his arm around her he led her across the threshold, and then, closing that door, he came back and opened the other.

The man who half-stepped, half-stumbled in staggered to the desk chair and dropped into it to raise a face in which the eyes burned wildly. The whole figure shook in an agony of unnerved excitement. He spread two trembling hands and tragically announced "I'm ruined."

Edwardes nodded gravely. "You need a physician, Fairley. You're unstrung," he suggested. "Perhaps a drop of brandy would help. I think I have some here."

"No" the reply was violent, and the President of the Metallic National shook his head with the uncontrolled air of a man is close to the border of insanity. "No, by God, I'm past physicians. What I need next is an undertaker." He dropped his head to the desk and broke into a crazed storm of weak sobs.

"There is no profit in wild talk," his host reminded him. "I'm ruined, too. We must make a fresh start."

"Fresh start, hell!" The words rang queerly through the accompaniment of a bitter laugh. "Hamilton Burton took me and squeezed me dry. He put the thumbscrews on me and bled me of my Coal and Ore stock. He made me a traitor to Malone and to-day when Malone might have saved me I had no friends. Then because you sought to befriend me, Burton turned on me and ruined me. My family will be in the streets. Now—" the voice rose into a high treble of frenzy which penetrated to the room where Mary Burton waited—"I'm going to kill Hamilton Burton first and myself next."

With the wild threat the banker rose unsteadily and his palsied hand went into his overcoat pocket, to come out clutching a magazine pistol which he brandished before him.

Edwardes' first thought was to seize the wrist, but the breadth of the table intervened and he knew that he was dealing with a man of temporarily dethroned reason. So he held the wild and shifting gaze, as well as he could, with the cool steadiness of his own eyes and spoke in a measured, soothing voice:

"I shouldn't do that, Fairley. In the first place you don't know where to find him. Your efforts would probably fail and you would only be locked up before you accomplished either purpose."

The noise of the outer offices had drowned the visitor's excited tones among the employees, but to Mary Burton, standing anxiously in the conference-room, all the words were intelligible.

Fairley leaned across the table, and for an instant left the weapon unguarded. With a movement of cat-like swiftness Edwardes seized it, but a wild snarl of rage burst from the other's lip and his fingers closed vise-like over Jefferson's hand.

"No—by God—you don't!" he screamed.

Mary Burton threw open the door, and saw the two figures bent across the table with four hands desparately gripped while between them glinted the blued metal of the pistol, which the frustrated Fairley was striving to turn upon his own breast and Edwardes struggled to divert.

Before she could give outcry or reach them, there came an out-spitting of fire from the ugly muzzle and a report which she confined space magnified to a stulen roar. Edwardes lurched suddenly forward and remained motionless with his face down and his arms outspread upon the desk, while a tiny red puddle spread on the mahogany.

Fairley had leaped back and cowered, suddenly sobered, against the wall as the outer door opened and figures poured into the room.

CUBES

A Western Marching Song.

The war has taken toll of the west; scarcely a rural neighborhood but mourns, or boasts, according to its disposition, its dead on the field of honor.

"Didn't get much more'n half the farm planted this spring," complains one man. "First my son enlisted; then the hired man. War time is a hard time for the farmer, all right."

Another tells you the same story, but tells it as some wear their rue, "with a difference." "Yes, we miss our men, but what we'll lack in crop we'll more than make up in glory. The Kaiser wishes we'd kept 'em home, I bet a cent; he knows by this time what the homestead lads can do when they start in. Sure thing!"

Out in a settlement beside the Saskatchewan Valley we came upon a little company of volunteers in training. The members have not uniforms yet, and there is no band or bugle. They have a marching song, though, and as they pass us, fine upstanding lads, they sing it lustily. It sounds good, a little strong maybe, but good. It was composed for the company, so these same volunteers tell us later, by the mother of the Armenian minister, and, translated into English by the interpreter over at the land office; and here it is:

"Ho! lads of the west, we must do our best
Wherever we happen to be;
We'll march against evil, and fight like the devil
For Britain, the land of the free!"

Did we say a little strong? We take it back, and wave our handkerchiefs wildly as the soldiers give the author three rousing cheers, following them with, "What's the matter with mother? She's all right!" The minister tells us gently that he asked to have the second last line altered to read, "We'll march against evil, and fight like true soldiers," but the two parties most interested objected. His mother said there was no rhythm to it, and the men said there was no "pep" in it. "So," he concludes with a smile. "I let it go at that—after all it is their song, and they're the ones to be suited." Just so.—Jean Blewett in Toronto Globe.

Our National Parks.

The national parks of this country cover a great area, 4,665,966 acres in all. If all were put together it would mean an area of 7,290 square miles, as large, nearly, as the state of New Jersey.

Robustness.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is a hypochondriac?"

"A hypochondriac, my son, is a person whose constitution is so strong that he can stand any amount of worry about his health."—Washington Star.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Churchly Handmaiden.

Mr. Edwards and Mr. Wells, wardens of a prominent city church, were not in accord concerning the new rector's introduction of extreme ritual into the service.

Mr. Edwards was aggressively on the rector's side, Mr. Wells quite the reverse, and on one occasion their difference of opinion cropped out in a lively though brief dialogue which incidentally suggests the possibilities for expansion of the servant problem.

Mr. Edwards, having exhausted his arguments on his unresponsive brother warden, said:

"At least you will own that art is the handmaiden of religion."

"Yes," returned Mr. Wells savagely, "and I wish religion would give her a month's notice!"

Great Acting. — During the recent Shakespeare celebration a number of local amateurs appeared in the great dramatist's most famous tragedy. Next day the principal actor inquired of a critical friend what he thought of the performance. "It was great! Simply great!" was the reply. "As you played 'Hamlet' it was easy to see why 'Ophelia' should go and drown herself."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Fellow Mortals

By LYDIA PERKINS

"You are a worthless nigger, George."

"Yes, little mistiss."

"And your master and I will have to go to the almshouse."

"Yes, little mistiss; spec yo' will."

"Then what will become of you, George?"

"Go dar too."

"Do you think they would take in a nigger? You are more likely to get on the chain gang."

"Te, he, he, little mistiss!"

"What are you giggling about?"

"Dey ain't no chain gang. We goes on de fahm."

"You have been there?"

"Yes; I got sent dar 'bout a yeah ago."

"George, have you been a criminal?" His mistress looked at him with shrinking disgust.

"Spec I has," he returned glibly. "I been mos' eberyt'ing—crap shooter, buck dancer an' de res', an' crimmel," he added, with a touch of pride.

Mrs. Custis was paying no heed to the negro now. She looked dreamily out through the window at the mellow sunlight of spring. A longing came over her for her old home. She had endured the long and cruel winter with a stoical patience, but the reluctant spring made the sap of yearning rise in her veins. Suddenly she buried her face in her handkerchief, and like a faithful dog George began to whine:

"Dar, little mistiss; jes' yo' wait till de udder side de cloud flummux over, an' yo'll see 'nough silver to mek a braid pan."

"Oh, go away, you worthless nigger!" Mrs. Custis exclaimed, putting down her handkerchief, and he jumped extravagantly just for the delight of hearing her sweet old laugh, like the ringing of pure thin silver.

"But, George," Mrs. Custis resumed, with renewed dignity, "it is true that your master and I are seriously thinking of seeking public assistance." Her delicate cheek flushed at the admission; but, seeing his look of childish horror, she proceeded firmly:

"As simple as our living expenses are, we cannot longer meet them, and we must ask for help."

She threw up her little figure and proudly left the room, but she stumbled on the threshold, and the negro, with intuitive devotion, knew that her eyes were blinded with tears.

He stared with a dropped jaw at the open door through which she had gone. Then, with a volatile grin, he jumped to his feet and, performing a skillful clog dance, seized his disreputable hat and bolted from the house.

About a year before this Mr. Custis and his wife had drifted to the great city of New York. They came from Georgia, leaving their home desolate in order to be near their daughter, who had married a clever young artist. It did not take the parents long to discover that their son-in-law had difficulty in supporting his little family, so they, protesting grandly that they had an ample income, moved to a cheap little flat on the east side and in the frightful closeness of a few narrow rooms began an existence that was slow torture to their pride.

One day George Harries, one of the most unregenerate negroes in all New York, sidled up on their front steps and pulled the bell. A negro is not naturally a tramp, but he was idle and thought he could bully something from these forlorn old people.

Mrs. Custis opened the door and looked her wrath at his presumption.

"Does yo' hab any wuk fo' a po' cullud man?" he drawled insolently.

"No; I don't want any niggers to work for me!" she blazed out. "Get off my front steps!" She was preparing to slam the front door when he jerked off his filthy hat and burst out:

"'Fo' de Lawd, I didn't know yo' was a south'n lady; 'deed I didn't, little mistiss. Kin yo' give a po' niggah a bite o' somethin' to eat, an' I'll wuk my fingahs to de bone; 'deed I will."

And that was the beginning of a strange household — George Harries, crap shooter, low comedian and natural singer and dancer, and these poor, fine old southern people. And he was as faithful as though he was their slave—they as autocratic as though he was theirs by right of purchase.

So on this sunny afternoon in spring he shuffled along the street, dipping into old haunts that had not known him for a year. When he reached one of his former stands, he looked shrewdly about for a policeman and, not seeing one, began with great vigor and skill what is known to the initiated as a "buck dance." By the time he had danced for five minutes the crowd was so dense about the performer that it took a tall man to peep over the heads.

George paused in his dancing, took off his hat and, singing in a musical voice, "coon, coon, coon," went around collecting. This was all very well, but a policeman sauntered up. Finding the attraction was a live negro and not a dead horse, he virtuously redistributed the coins to the amused crowd, and George took a free ride to the police station.

By the time he was hustled before the desk his most reckless look had settled over his hardened face. The magistrate, who was looking bored, roused slightly when the officer explained that the negro was indulging in a disorderly dance.

"Why were you dancing?" he asked, with a yawn.

"'Cause I wuz," was the sulky retort.

"George," said the magistrate severely, "I had hoped you had stopped your evil living. It has been nearly a year since you were arrested."

A subtle change passed over the homely features.

"'Deed, boss," he stuttered, "I been livin' all right an' wusn't doin' nothin' today 'cept a little dancin'. I ain't shot no craps in a yeah mos'—no, sah. 'Deed, jedge," the fellow suddenly blubbered, "I don't know what my po' ole marster an' mistiss is gwine to do if you sen' me down. It wusn't fo' me I wus dancin'; it wus fo' dem—fo' Gawd it wus. Dey's quality folks, an' dey'd sta've befo' dey'd beg."

"That's a likely story," began the policeman contemptuously.

The magistrate motioned him to be quiet as he said more kindly:

"George, suppose you show me what sort of dance this was."

The negro's face broke into sudden smiles. Like so many of his race, he had a childish smile and beautiful teeth. He stepped forth willingly, and it was a pleasure to watch the posturing and gestures so absolutely African and yet dramatic.

The magistrate watched him intently. When he had finished and leaned panting against the desk, his honor shot a sarcastic look at the policeman and rapped out, "Case dismissed."

George lost no time in putting the police station behind him. He was hustling along toward home when a sharp faced, theatrical looking man overtook him and briefly explained that he had seen him dance and wanted to engage him for his company of minstrels.

George had been in New York too long to make an easy bargain, and at last the theatrical manager reluctantly came to his terms. George even got an advance on the strict promise that he would report that night for orders. Then he flew over the ground to the Custis flat.

He fell up the steps and burst into the kitchen, where Mrs. Custis was cooking a meager supper.

"Law, little mistiss," he ejaculated, not forgetting to pull off his hat, "'deed de Lawd has flummuxed dat brack cloud over, an' dar's some o' de silver linin' right dar." And he triumphantly gave her $5.

Then he told how he got the money. The poor old lady's tears were streaming and he himself was sobbing like a child.

"George," she said brokenly, "the ways of Providence are past finding out."

And he answered humbly:

"Dat's so, little mistiss; dat's so."

Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly Ended

Home-Made Remedy that Saves You $2—Does the Work Thoroughly.

The prompt and positive action of this simple, inexpensive home-made remedy in quickly healing the inflamed or swollen membranes of the throat, chest or bronchial tubes and breaking up tight coughs, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-oz bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. You then have 16 ounces—a family supply—of a much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its promptness, ease and certainty in overcoming stubborn coughs and chest colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Ottawans in England.

Talking of Canada, on my way up to London, while waiting for a connection at one of the big Midland Railway stations, a train pulled in bearing reinforcements for the Ottawa Regiment, says a writer in The Toronto Mail and Empire. They had just landed in England and were on their way to camp, preliminary to being despatched to the front. They stopped for about fifteen minutes and were let loose from their cages, so for that brief space the big, silent, sombre station swarmed with a cheery, laughing, chaffing crowd of khaki-clothed men, who looked the absolute embodiment of good spirits and vitality. They swarmed round the bookstall and I was amused to hear the discussions which resulted over a sixpence and half crowns. Owing to the liquor restrictions the refreshment rooms were only open for the sale of buns, tea, and such like, harmless and nourishing commodities, and as the recall sounded and the compartments filled again men and officers scurried back to their seats carrying paper bags in one hand and steaming cups of tea or coffee in the other. As for the penny-in-the-slot machines, which provided chocolates, cigarettes, and matches, I imagine anyone who wanted either after that train moved out of the station would have been disappointed, for they clicked incessantly under the influence of a continual stream of pennies.

Had Severe Cold
PAIN IN CHEST
SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-sent remedy."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

Greatness Not Free From Shame.

The transcendent power and fame with which great genius has at different periods endowed various men do not always insure them from after misery and shame.

This was strikingly exemplified in the cases of the four greatest of military conquerors—Alexander, Hannibal, Cæsar and Napoleon. The general judgment of mankind has conceded them the first place in the lines of action for which they were severally distinguished. Yet they all met with melancholy and tragic deaths.

Two of them suffered for years the keenest humiliations which a total destruction of their hopes could bring. Two perished at the zenith of their power, just as they might have expected a long enjoyment of the fruits of their tremendous achievements.

Flattering to the Original

But Imitations Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough. They usually have some sale on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

What are Peps

Peps are the new treatment for coughs, colds and lung troubles. They are little tablets made up from Pine extracts and medicinal essences. When put into the mouth these medicinal ingredients turn into healing vapors, which are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes. The Peps treatment is direct. Swallowing cough mixtures into the stomach, to cure ailments and disorders in throat and lungs, is indirect. Peps are revolutionizing the treatment of colds, as their price is within the reach of all. 50c. box all druggists, or Peps Co., Toronto.

Shakespeare's Benefactors.

Of the millions who keep Shakespeare's memory green to-day, how many have even heard of Heminge and Condell? Yet, to the faithful labors of these two poor players we owe the first attempt to give the world a complete edition of Shakespeare's plays. No collected edition of the poet's work was issued in his lifetime, nor did many of the plays even find their way to print, until John Heminge and Henry Condell, Shakespeare's intimate friends and fellow-actors, took the task of publication in hand, disclaiming "ambition either of self-profit or fame in undertaking the design," and being moved solely by desire "to keep the memory of so worthy a friend and fellow alive as was our Shakespeare."

Who Invented the Steam Engine?

The Marquis of Worcester, while imprisoned in the Tower of London in 1656, invented and constructed a perfect steam engine and had it publicly exhibited the same year at Vauxhall in successful operation. Thirty-four years later, in 1690, Dennis Papin added the piston to the marquis' discovery. In 1698 Captain Savary devised and built a steam engine different in many details from those made by Worcester and Papin, and in 1705 Newcomb, Cawley and Savary constructed their celebrated atmospheric engine, which was complete in every detail.

The above array of historical facts notwithstanding, James Watt, who was not born until sixty years after these great men had given the steam engine to the world, enjoys the distinction of being the veritable inventor, originator and author of the most useful contrivance of the present day.

Fulton, who lived and worked in the early part of the century, is given the credit of being the man who demonstrated that steam could be applied to navigation; this, too, in face of the well known historical fact that De Gary propelled a vessel by steam in the harbor of Barcelona in 1543.

The Great Vidocq.

Vidocq, the great French detective, was born in Arras in 1775. He began life as a baker and early became the terror of his companions by his athletic frame and violent disposition. At the same time he was a notorious thief, and after many disgraceful adventures he enlisted in the army. In 1796 he returned to Paris with some money, which, however, he soon squandered. Next he was sentenced at Lille to eight years' hard labor for forgery, but repeatedly escaped, and in 1808 he became connected with the Paris police as a detective.

His previous career enabled him to render important services, and he was appointed chief of the safety brigade, chiefly composed of reprieved convicts, which purged Paris of the many dangerous classes. In 1818 he received a full pardon, and his connection with this service lasted until about 1828, when he settled at St. Mande as a paper manufacturer. Soon after the revolution of 1830 he became a political detective, but with little success. In 1848 he was again employed under the republican government, but he died penniless in 1857.

Her Apology.

The local singer was resenting mildly to the hostess the large amount of praise which her guests was bestowing upon the visiting vocalist.

"They didn't applaud me that way," he complained.

"Oh, well, you know," she said apologetically and sympathetically, "he is a visitor whom we don't hear often, while we think of you as the Bible says, 'The poor we have with us always.'"

Then she was very much hurt because he refused to accept her apology and left the house in a huff.

Central's Vindication.

They had quarreled overnight, but she had no sooner reached the studio where she was preparing to threaten the laurels of the old masters than she was called to the reconciliatory telephone. The conversation began guardedly with the customary: "Is this Miss B.? Oh, good morning. This is Mr. F." But in a few seconds these perfunctory words gave place to others.

"Helen," he declared, "I was a beast."

And she replied contritely: "You must not call yourself names. I was horrid. I was a perfect little cat, Dick, and"—

But Mr. F. could not stand her self reproachings. He told her that he could not and that he would not bear to hear her slander the dearest, most generous, most noble woman in the world.

"Hush, hush—sh, Dick," she entreated. "We're forgetting that a telephone is not so awfully secret. Suppose Central should hear?"

Whereupon a strident voice took up the tale. "Central!" it sneered. "Central listening! I like that! Central's got something else to do but listen to the lovemaking of a pair of idiots. I can tell you that I've got other fish to fry besides paying attention to the like of that truck!"—New York Herald.

Two Cases of Eczema and How They Were Cured

Further Proof That Dr. Chase's Ointment is a Positive Cure For Chronic Eczema

If you read these letters you will find that Dr. Chase's Ointment is not to be classed among ordinary salves and ointments.

By actual curing itching, stinging eczema in many thousands of cases it has stood the most severe test to which any ointment can be put.

Mr. J. Brice, Temperance road, Parry Sound, Ont., writes: "Just a line to praise Dr. Chase's Ointment for what it has done for my wife. She has been suffering from eczema in her head for two years, and has spent no end of money with doctors and for ointments, which did her no good. She had about given up hope of ever being cured, when someone told her to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. By the use of this Ointment the trouble has left her entirely, so we have unbounded faith in it. I have told several people about the Ointment."

Mrs. W. G. Dowden, Greenspond, Bonavista Bay, Nfld., writes: "I suffered with eczema on my hands, and for eighteen months was so bad that I could not use a needle to sew or do anything. I could scarcely dress myself. Though I had lots of salves from doctors, I could never get much benefit from them. Then I sent for a sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found it very different in action. It was not long before my hands begn to heal, and four 60c. boxes made them well. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment too highly, and frequently give some to others to get them using it, for I know that it will cure."

In the home Dr. Chase's Ointment is of almost daily usefulness, for by relieving chafing and irritation of the skin it prevents eczema and similar itching skin diseases. Applied to all cuts and wounds, it prevents blood poisoning and heals the skin. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

How Zam-Buk saved me a lot of money

For the benefit of others who may be similarly situated, Mr. R. Howard, Sr. of Bracebridge, Ont., requests that we publish the following narrative. He says: "If people only knew the great healing power of Zam-Buk, they could be saved much unnecessary suffering and expense." He continues:

"Four years ago I sustained a scratch on my leg, which turned to an ulcer. I was confined to my bed for six months under doctors' treatment, during which time I did not earn a cent, and, in addition, spent dollars upon dollars before a cure was effected.

Recently I sustained a scratch on my other leg. It became very inflamed and swollen, and finally turned to an ulcer. This time, I knew about Zam-Buk, and I acted very differently from what I did in the previous instance. I used Zam-Buk alone, with the result that not only was the ulcer healed in much shorter time than the previous one, but I was able to go to work all the time it was healing, and I did not lose a single day's pay. Zam-Buk is certainly a wonderful ointment, and should be in every home."

WHAT ZAM-BUK IS BEST FOR

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, blood-poisoning, abscesses, running sores, boils, pimples, piles, cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries. 50c box, 3 for $1.25. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co. Toronto.

THE RICHEST LANGUAGE.

The English language contains approximately 600,000 words. No estimate of any practical value has been made in recent years of the number of words in the principal other languages, but existing dictionaries show the following: German, 300,000; French, 210,000; Russian, 140,000; Spanish, 120,000; Italian, 140,000. The new Standard Dictionary of the English language contains about 450,000 words.

Pale Cheeked Women Told About Restoring A Rosy Complexion

A few years ago the girl with pale, drawn cheeks scarcely knew what to do in order to restore her fading appearance. At that time there was no blood-food medium made that really would put color and strength into systems that were more or less worn out.

To-day it's different. The blood can be quickly nourished, can be made rich, red, and healthy. All you have to do is take two Ferrozone Tablets with a sip or two of water after meals. The effect is almost magical.

Mothers, look at your children. Are they ruddy and strong—do they eat and sleep well, or are they pale, weak, and anaemic?

FERROGONE will rebuild them. Take your own case—is your blood strong and rich? Have you that old-time strength and vigor, or are you somewhat under the weather?

FERROZONE will supply the strengthening elements you require. It is a blood-forming, nourishing tonic that makes every ailing person well.

FERROZONE is a marvellous remedy, it contains in concentrated form certain rare qualities that especially fit it in cases of anaemic, poor color, thin blood, tiredness, and loss of weight.

Every day you put off using FERROZONE you lose ground. Get it to-day, sold in 50 cent boxes by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

POTATOES FOR THE ARMY.

Potato growers and merchants met in London and nominated a committee to act with the military authorities to secure the necessary supply of potatoes for the forces, says London Mail. Mr. A. G. Harper said Mr. Runciman had told them in conference that 20,000 tons of potatoes are needed every month for the army. A small expert committee is to assist the Board of Trade as regards the civil supply.

Toole Was Fooled.

Bret Harte was often asked to write his autobiography, and it is said that the idea had taken possession of his mind in his later years, but not a line of it did he write. It would have been worth reading, for the author knew most of the interesting people of his time. There is an amusing story told by J. L. Toole, the English actor, of a luncheon with Harte: "After a greeting from my host he said, 'Let me introduce you to the Duke of St. Albans.' 'Oh, yes,' I said, with a smile, and shook hands with the gentleman who was assuming that character, as I thought. Then he introduced me to Sir George Trevelyan, and I had hardly shaken hands with him when my host said, 'I would like to introduce you to Count Bismarck.' 'Oh, yes,' I said, bowing to the newcomer. 'How many more of you are there? There is Von Moltke, for instance?' Bret Harte laughed; so did Trevelyan. A comedian is allowed certain privileges, and my remark was considered, I dare say, more or less complimentary; but I had no idea what a fool I was making of myself. At luncheon I said to the man who sat next me, 'Who is the gentleman Harte introduced me to as St. Albans?' 'The Duke of St. Albans,' he replied. 'And the man opposite?' 'Herbert Bismarck, the prince's son.' 'No,' I said. 'Really?' 'Oh, yes,' he said. 'And the man talking to him?' 'That is Sir George Trevelyan.' I was never more sold in my life."

Swallows' Nest.

Two swallows, writes a correspondent of an English paper, built their nest in an outhouse, and the hen laid five eggs. Before they were hatched she was killed by knocking her head against the lintel of the door. For a month the nest remained unused and deserted, the eggs cold. After that time the cock bird found another mate, and he and the little hen were very busy for a few days bringing fresh hay and mud to the nest. I did not like to watch too closely, but I certainly wondered what they were doing to the eggs, as no traces of broken eggshell, etc., were to be seen on the ground. I let them bring up their young brood undisturbed and then removed the nest (it was getting late in the season), when I discovered that they had built a false bottom to it, with a new edging of mud to hold the hay together, and that the new family was brought up above the cold eggs. The false bottom, with mud attached, was easily lifted off, the cold eggs being found intact beneath. I do not know if this is a common occurrence. I have not come across it before.

TOO MANY ORDERS.

Canadian Implement Makers Cannot Keep Up With Sales.

Canadian implement manufacturers are not able at the present time to handle all the business available to them, not because of lack of plant, but of labor and certain classes of raw material. In some cases it has been possible to assemble all the parts and all the material up to 95 per cent. of the actual requirements, but neither "love or money," as one manufacturer put it, would get the balance. Even under this handicap, the Canadian manufacturers have been able to send abroad, during the past fiscal year, as many implements and of as great a value as in the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1915. This, however, is below normal. When war broke out the hopes of implement men were not bright. In Russia and Germany they had a large outstanding, which is still outstanding, and for a time it was doubtful if trade with other countries could be carried on. This uncertain condition followed, or came at a time when no responsible concern would push business in Canada. Our own farmers at that time, speaking now more particularly of the west, had bought more than they could pay for, and the manufacturers had to wait for their money before they could either go ahead and make stock, or, in some cases, make peace with their bankers. As the implement trade now sends half its output abroad the demoralization of the home and foreign market at the same time looked disastrous.

It was very soon evident, however, that the British navy would keep clear the road to Australia and to Argentina, with which countries trade has on the whole been normal. To the former shipments have been heavier, and to which reference will be made later on. The road was open to Russia, but there was another obstacle to trade with that country, and it was the value of the Russian rouble. During the week the price has ranged around 30 cents, as compared with a mint par of 51.45 cents. The exchange value is therefore at a discount of about forty per cent. Since the outbreak of the war Russian exchange has suffered most and has been altogether out of line with both the commercial reputation, which the Russian business man has earned for himself, and also with the resources of that great nation. It was impossible for the Canadian manufacturer to take orders, or fill them, under such conditions, and in consequence business fell off for a lengthy period.

But the Russian Government realised that it was as necessary to have the grain crop harvested as it was to maintain the trenches on their western front. Implements of agriculture were as essential as those of war, and this explains why the Russian Government detached vessels employed in carrying munitions of war to carry Canadian-made implements to Vladivostok. Still more effective steps were taken to procure necessary implements. Realizing that the Canadian manufacturers or those of the United States could not depend upon the value of the Russian rouble, the Government itself agreed to buy the implements needed and then resell them to the Russian farmers. After taking this step it was then found that to deliver them at Russian ports was a matter of time—a lot of it—which too frequently resulted in the needed implements reaching their ultimate destination when the harvest had been past without crops being garnered. To avoid loss in this respect very large orders have been placed with a view to having a supply ready in advance of the need for distribution.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S COAT.

By Anabel Worthington.

If you will make this coat for your daughter she will have reason to be all puffed up with pride, for it has features that proclaim it stylish and jaunty.

There is just a little bit of French to it with its raised waistline where the body and skirt sections join with a folled seam. No one can help noticing that smartness is gained by extending the neck line at one side, carrying it over to yoke depth at the opposite side for closing with a large single button.

No wind can blow harm to the wearer because the body part is fitted. The choice of a cuffed sleeve or an uncuffed one depends upon individual selection; the neck should have a velvet or fur collar unless corduroy makes the coat, when a collar of self material will do. The three piece skirt is of voluminous cut and with ripple enough to rival that in a big coat.

Broadcloth, velvet, sibeline, velour and the like are suitable fabrics and if you will reproduce this design, you will decide there is more meaning in the word "Pattern" than you thought.

The coat No. 8,051, cuts in sizes 2 to 4 years. To make in size 4 requires 1¾ yards 44 inch material with ¼ yard contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send 10c to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

BAITING FOR BASS.

Reverse of the Usual Form Answers Well.

The following advice for Canadian fishermen regarding the best methods of baiting for the king of our game fishes:

When using minnows for bass (shiners are the only reliable ones), pass the hook in at the mouth, then out through the gill, and finally bed the barb in the flesh just above the tail. This is the reverse of the usual way; but answers very well. Keep the bait moving in a natural headforemost manner by means of a slight turning of the wrist. A bass seizing this bait, will either grab it crosswise or by the tail, and then bore toward his stronghold before swallowing. If given plenty of time he will flirt the minnow around so as to take it head first in swallowing. This is natural, but do not wait for it.

Upon the first twitch strike sharply and trust to luck. The bass has the minnow either crosswise or tail first in his first grab, and in either event the hook has two chances of taking hold. Two to one is good odds. If given time the bass will reverse the bait, and in so doing he may find the hook and promptly reject the imagined dainty. When hooked head upward the minnow plays in a natural manner; if hooked merely through the lips it may be taken without giving a chance to plant the barb firmly, and good minnows are scarce. If hooked first through the lips and then through the skin of the back, or the back fin, there is still a goodly portion of it at which a fish may grab with impunity. Therefore, hook the bait as described, and strike at the first sign, without giving any chances for gorging at leisure and subsequent trouble in removing a fairly swallowed hook.

When using white grubs pass the hook in at the mouth, or just below it, and on to the tail. This gives a natural curve, which few bass can resist. When the bait is crayfish pass the barb in at the mouth and through to the tail. This also gives the important natural curve, and a bait so rigged and sent down with Mr. So-and-So's compliments, is well nigh irresistible.

Another important thing is that baits so rigged may serve two or three times. This is no trifling matter, when fish are biting freely. As a rule, crayfish, frogs, minnows, and so on, are difficult to secure in numbers and the more service one can be made to render, the better. And furthermore, a bait so rigged will almost invariably slide up the gut, at the fish's first rush and so be preserved to do another turn.

When using a frog pass the hook first through the lips and then through the skin at the juncture of the legs with the back. In this position the frog can kick out and swim more or less, and in so doing make himself the more attractive. The grasshopper and the bee may be hooked crosswise behind the wings, and so serve their purpose.—All Outdoors.

Alberta's School Survey.

With a view to relating the Provincial Institute of Technology at Calgary not only to the existing educational system, but also to the commercial and industrial situation, the Principal and staff of the Institute have been charged by the Minister of Education with the responsibility of making a careful pre-vocational survey of the boys and girls in the Province between the ages of fourteen and eighteen, whether in attendance at school or not, with a view to vocational guidance and educational adjustments.

Also with the making of a careful industrial survey of the Province with the assistance and co-operation of the various departments of the Government, the local school and municipal authorities, and the commercial and industrial organizations of the Province; co-operating with the Military Hospitals Commission in the retraining of disabled soldiers, and, as far as may be, in the supplementary training of returned soldiers, whether disabled or not, who desire technical instruction; the organization of the Department of Mining in the Institute on the basis of the need as found in the experience of the past two years in developing technical instruction in the mining centres; the provision of such course in the School of Trades and Industries of the Institute as the limited staff of the first year may be able to provide over and above those involved in the retraining of returned soldiers; and the provision of special classes for teachers in technical subjects in Calgary, and, where feasible, the organization and supervision of similar special classes in the other two cities of the Province.

Nova Scotia's First Coal.

Garrulous old Samuel Pepys writing in 1667 mentioned that there is "Newcastle coal" in Nova Scotia, but it was not discovered in Pictou County till 1798. In that year the outcrop of the seam still known as the MacGregor and still being worked, was found on the bank of a brook at the rear of Dr. MacGregor's farm near the old Middle River road. For a time nothing was done to exploit the discovery, but the Doctor and his neighbors dug what they required for their own use. But in 1826 the General Mining Association obtained a lease of the mines and minerals in Nova Scotia, and next year they began work on the East River. The spot chosen for their first operations was close by Dr. MacGregor's house. It was soon apparent that his farm was necessary to the association. A sum that now seems small, but then was princely 1,150 pounds was offered for it and accepted.

GOING TO THE CIRCUS

By CASPAR DEAN

Aunt Sarah Bebee, after whose father Bebee's Corners had been named, was a widow past fifty the day a sporty looking man drove up to her farmhouse in a fancy rig and wanted to arrange with her to cover the front of her barn with circus pictures.

"Why, bless your heart, I never went to a circus in all my life!" she exclaimed in reply.

"But you are not too old to begin," he suggested. "Let me put the pictures up, and I'll leave you ten tickets of admission. You can go and take all your friends."

"Land o' massy, but you don't know Bebee's Corners! Everybody around here is a Methodist or Baptist or Presbyterian—everybody but me—and they won't even attend camp meeting if lemonade is to be sold on the grounds. I don't exactly know what my religion is, but if I went to a circus nobody would ever speak to me again."

The circus man wanted his bills on that barn, and he argued and reasoned for half an hour. He saw that Aunt Sarah was an independent character and that if he could get her started she'd be ready to defy public opinion. The result was that she finally said:

"Well, go ahead with your pictures. I never saw an elephant or lion or tiger in my life, and I'll go and see the menagerie part anyhow. There'll be an awful row around here, and folks will think that Satan has got hold of me, but I'll have to stand it."

The pictures were hardly up when Deacon Danforth happened along the highway and saw them. He turned pale and trembled. Not in twenty years before had a barn on the Red Mill road been thus defiled. When he had recovered a little from the shock, he walked to the house and confronted the widow. For the first fifteen minutes the conversation was devoted to Satan, hades, Lot's wife, Judas Iscariot and other interesting subjects. But it gradually tapered off to hyenas, boa constrictors and alligators, and the deacon was almost smiling when he left the house.

Next day Deacon Bidwell saw those pictures as he sat in his buggy behind his old white horse. The horse saw them before he did and stopped so suddenly that the deacon was pitched against the dashboard. For a long minute the good old man thought his eyes deceived him, but the true state of affairs finally dawned upon him, and he groaned and sighed and drove up to the widow's gate.

"Widder Bebee, have you sold your livin' soul to Satan?" was his greeting, and then the fur flew. It was nearly an hour before he left the house, but he wasn't sighing and groaning as he went. On the contrary, he looked rather cheerful, and he called back from the gate:

"Yes; I s'pose there 'll be camels there with two humps, mebbe with three, and they'll be wuth lookin' at."

There was one more deacon in the neighborhood, Deacon Burton. He was driving to town to get a pitchfork mended and was humming the air of "I Want to Be an Angel" when the colored posters suddenly confronted him. There were short skirted, long legged damsels poised on barebacked horses or jumping through paper covered hoops. He stood and gazed and felt cold chills go up his back. He drove on to the farmhouse, half expecting to find the Widow Bebee trying to turn handsprings over a kitchen chair.

"I wouldn't 'a' believed it, widder—I wouldn't 'a' believed it!" he began as he entered the house. "It's the awfulest thing I ever heard of, and you know I've been in Chicago twice and seen some awful things."

The widow had a reply ready. It began with hyenas and worked up to elephants, taking in lions, tigers, grizzly bears and sea lions as it rose upward. She talked so earnestly and well that when Deacon Burton was ready to go he reluctantly admitted:

"No, I don't 'spose it's any more harm to look at a lion than to look at a woodchuck if you don't git mad and rip and swear over it."

There were others besides the deacons. There was old Mrs. Gaynor, for instance. She wasn't exactly a scalot, but she never took a dozen eggs to market without asking Heaven to bless them and make the price 14 cents a dozen. She wasn't a bigot, but she contended that her own brand of religion was the only one to be saved by. She wasn't narrow minded, but when she heard of those circus peddlers she went down to see Aunt Sarah and to say:

"I've just stepped in a minit to say that if you go to that circus I can't never let you enter my doors ag'in."

Aunt Sarah started in to argue, but old Mrs. Gaynor was on her guard against the wiles of Satan and wouldn't wait for further talk.

The day of the circus arrived, and the widow drove into Medina to attend it. For some reason not to be explained a dozen farmers around her had business in town that day and made an early start—some of them before daylight. Some of them also lingered and drove home after dark.

It was all over the neighborhood that Aunt Sarah defied public opinion, and it was old Mrs. Gaynor who determined to bring her to book. She went about it in malevolence. She got up what she called a quilting bee and asked the three deacons and their wives and three or four others, and at a proper hour Aunt Sarah was sent for to be crushed. She arrived, and when asked if she had anything to say she very calmly replied:

"I didn't intend to see nuthin' but the animals, but when I got in there Satan beckoned me into the circus tent, and I went. The jokes of the clown tickled me almost to death. That's all I've got to say."

"Deacon Danforth, what do you think of such conduct?" asked Mrs. Gaynor as she folded her arms and rolled up her eyes.

"Nuthin', 'cept that I sat jest behind Aunt Sarah and was tickled, too!" he replied.

"And you, Deacon Bidwell?"

"Waal, the hosses was wonderfully trained—wonderfully. I can't sharsely make out how they do it."

"And you, Deacon Burton? You ain't goin' to tell me you was there too!"

"I got kind of tired lookin' at the two hump camels, and as one ticket admitted to all I went into the circus part," admitted the deacon.

"And where did you all git tickets?" demanded the accuser as a sudden thought flashed across her mind.

"Aunt Sarah gave us deadheads!" answered the three deacons in chorus.

"And left me out, when she knew I was jest dyin' to see the whole thing! Well, now, you can all go home without any supper, and if I ever speak to one of you ag'in I hope to fall dead on my own doorstep!"

Betting on a Certainty.

Peter Schemm, says the Philadelphia Times, was fond of telling the story of a German typesetter who had been boasting of his capacity for lager.

"Youse Dutchman," he was told by a bartender, "don't drink as much beer as people says youse do!"

"Of course not," chipped in one of the customers. "And I'll bet you, Dutchy, you can't drink a bucketful."

The German was lost in thought for a moment and then hurriedly rushed from the saloon, while the others roared with laughter. His boasting was still the topic of conversation when he returned, five minutes later, and calmly said:

"I'll take that bet."

The money was posted, a bar bucket holding five quarts was filled and the German promptly drank the beer and took the $5. Nobody questioned that he had won fairly, but one of the onlookers asked:

"Say, what did you leave the saloon for that time?"

"Why," he said as he winked with the air of a man who was far too smart for his fellows, "I just went down to Schmidt's and drank a bucket to see if I vould be safe in taking dot bet."

Standardized.

"Do you like Welsh rabbits?"

"I prefer real rabbits."

"Why so?"

"Then you know what you're eating. Nature makes all her rabbits alike."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In Doubt.

"Sometimes," confided Mrs. Longwed to her intimate friend, "I think my husband is the patientest, gentlest, best natured soul that ever lived, and sometimes I think it's just laziness."—Christian Herald.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

FOOD DISTURBANCES INCREASE IN GERMANY

The Russians Win Another Victory In The North

SERIOUS DISTURBANCES AND FOOD RIOTS ARE REPORTED IN GERMANY

Newspapers From All Parts of Hunland Also Disclose an Outbreak of Disease Caused by Underfeeding---Berlin Admits Russians Captured the Island of Glandon By An Attack in a Blinding Snowstorm---German Raid on French Trenches a Failure.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, January 9.—Newspapers from all parts of Germany report serious disturbances and food riots, while they also disclosed an outbreak of disease caused by underfeeding. Similar situations exist in Austria. This phase of Teutonic unrest is assuming tremendous proportions.

Germans Failed in a Raid on French

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official Communique), January 9.—An unsuccessful attempt was made by the Germans to raid a French trench north of Ribecourt, following an active bombardment.

Elsewhere along the front the night was calm.

Lawson Will Be Reported to House

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, January 9.—The committee probing charges that a leak on the President's note to belligerents made millions in Wall Street for speculators, to-day voted to report Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston financier, to the House for refusing to divulge the names of the men who, he said, had linked a Cabinet officer's name with the leak profits. This may incur an arrest.

Berlin Admits a Defeat in North

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, January 9.—A Russian attack, made in a dense snowstorm, recaptured the Island of Glaudon, north of Illuxt, said to-day's statement in describing the fighting south of Riga. A big snowstorm was raging when the battle took place.

Renewed advances on both sides of the Aa River were completely repulsed, the statement asserted.

The capture of Galreaska in Roumania was announced.

The town was taken by storm, in hand-to-hand fighting, and successfully maintained against all attacks.

Lawson Promises To Give the Name

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, January 9.—The revelation of the name of a "high official," which if now given would be "disastrous to the nation and administration" was promised by Thos. W. Lawson, financier today, should an investigation body with higher powers than the present House rules "leak" committee be ordered. This promise came after Lawson confessed that all he wants is to have Wall Street probed to the bottom.

Cabinet Proposals in Regard to Soldiers

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, January 9.—The Cabinet has drafted proposals for occupations and the general care of returning soldiers preparatory to submitting them to the provincial repesentatives to-morrow. While one of the important proposals is that of land settlement, it is realized that not all of the returning men will desire to take up farms. Other proposals are designed for the benefit of the latter class.

Whitehead Will Handle the Bell

Ice Will Be in Good Shape in Spite of Mild Weather and Junior Game To-night at Brock Street Rink Looks Like the Classic of the Season.

In spite of the mild weather, the ice at the Brock street rink is in good shape for to-night's big junior game when the Peterboro Juniors will clash with Bowmanville. The fans are asked to note that the game will start sharp on time as the Peterboro club have arranged with the O.H.A. to have the referee reach here on the 5.30 G.T.R. train, so that there will be no delay on that score. Dr. Jerry Laflamme was slated to handle the game but Secretary Hewitt informed the local club this morning that the popular player-referee would not be able to leave Toronto until the 5 o'clock train this evening. This would mean a delay in starting the game so the Peterboro management asked for another official who could reach here earlier, and Lawson Whitehead was named by the O.H.A.

The Petesboro team had their final work out last night before the intermediate game and are in good shape for their battle to-night. It promises to be a hard fight all the wayway as Bowmanville come here with a big reputation.

The game will start sharp at 8.15 o'clock.

FEW REFUSALS TO SIGN NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS

About Forty Local Men, is Estimate of the Mail Carriers —Chinamen and some Italians Couldn't Understand Cards.

FORWARDED TO-NIGHT

The number of Peterborough men who have refused to sign the National Service Registration cards is estimated at about forty, according to the count of the mail carriers who have made the collections. A Simcoe street citizen nailed his card, blank, on the verandah post. There wasn't one question answered and the method of conveying his refusal was accepted as a positive rejection of the card. Some persons have not been home when the postmen called, but on subsequent days they had their cards ready and added an apology for rendering a second call necessary.

That every citizen fared alike is shown by the fact that even the foreigners were included. But most of the Chinamen and many Italians professed inability and probably were unable to read the cards. Postmen are not linguists, especially in the Oriental languages. When the Chinamen blandly registered incomprehension, and it was out of the question to drag an interpreter, if in fact one could be found, from eating house to laundry, the "posties" renewed their explanations but without arousing a sign of intelligence upon their audiences. Some of the Italians showed a corresponding ignorance of English.

However, the collection is regarded as a complete success, and it remains for the government to deal, if it intends to, with those who rejected the cards. The rural districts are sending in their cards. It is likely that the city's collection will be forwarded to Ottawa to-night.

BILINGUAL SCHOOL QUESTION TO BE AN ISSUE

Special to Examiner:

CREEMORE, ONT., Jan. 9.—Hon. Isaac Lucas' speech last night indicated that Conservatives have determined if possible to make the Bilingual School question the big issue of the West Simcoe bye election in last effort to stem the tide which is rolling surely and swiftly against them in the present campaign.

Lacking the advantage of a farmer candidate and aware that Mr. Scott, the Liberal nominee and a farmer, is making great inroads upon the vote of the solid agricultural classes here. The Conservatives foresee defeat unless another expedient is employed to stop the landslide.

In a constituency where half the voters are Orangemen and Orangeism flourishes like a green bay tree the school phantom can be trotted out to try do the work which other agencies have failed to do.

SON OF HON. R. LEMIEUX TO JOIN THE ARTILLERY

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Another of the Liberal leaders has given his son to the war. Rodolphe, the only son of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, ex-Postmaster-General, enlisted to-day, and will go to the front with an artillery unit from Quebec. He has just entered his eighteenth year, and has just completed a course at Bishop's College, Quebec. He enlisted with his father's consent as soon as he came of military age.

CHICAGO CHIEF OF POLICE IN TROUBLE

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Arrested on a series of warrants, charging him with receiving graft money for allowing vice and illegal liquor selling to operate in Chicago, Chief-of-Police Charles Healey was free to-day under $100,000 bond. Warrants were issued to-day for several other Chicago police officers.

State-Attorney Hoyne says he has traced $25,000 graft money directly to the chief's pocket.

TWO MORE MEMBERS OF 93rd BATTALION HAVE BEEN WOUNDED

Casualty List of the Peterboro' Unit Has Been Again Increased---Buckhorn and Birdsall Soldiers on the List --Red Cross Reports as to the Fate of Corp. Fred. Stanley--To-day's Orders and General Military News

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. Harry Watkins, Infantry.

WOUNDED.

Pte. W. G. Davidson, Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Batt., Birdsalls.

Pte. Charles Jones, Mounted Rifles, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Buckhorn.

The casualty list of the 93rd Batt. continues to grow. Two more members of the Peterboro county battalion are reported wounded to-day. The casualty list contains the name of Pte. Harry Watkins who enlisted here in the spring of 1915, and went overseas with an Ottawa battalion. He is officially reported died of wounds. Pte. Watkins boarded at the home of Mr. Wm. Stanley, 455 Stewart street.

Another 93rd Batt. member, Pte. Charles L. Jones, 196105, is reported wounded in the engagement of the 28th December. A telegram was received on Saturday by Pte. Jones' mother, Mrs. John Jones, Buckhorn, and merely announced that he was wounded. His father is the postmaster at Buckhorn.

Pte. Jones was attached to B Co., of the 93rd Batt., and shortly after reaching England, was sent in one of the first drafts to France, and transferred to the 5th C.M.R.

Pte. W. G. Davidson, a Birdsall member of the 93rd, who was drafted to the Mounted Rifles, is also officially reported wounded to-day.

The Returned Soldiers' Club met last night at the Armouries for an enjoyable evening. It was intended to have a euchre drive, but most of the time was taken up with discussing the future plans of the club. Three new members were enrolled including Pte. White, who just recently returned to Peterborough from overseas. The attendance was rather small. This was due, it is believed, to the fact, that the announcement calling the meeting was not made till last night. A special meeting is to be called Monday next, January 15th at which every member is asked to be present, also returned soldiers who are not members are invited to come and see what this club is trying to do for them. Further announcement will be made later.

Mr. Robert Elliott, 196 Reid street has received a card from his son, Pte L. H. Elliott of the 21st Battalion now in France. Pte. Elliott states that he is in good health and working nineteen hours out of the twenty-four. At the time of writing he was suffering from a cold. "I am in the front line getting a few Fritzies, making up for my poor brothers and I can't get too many" writes Pte. Elliott.

The brothers referred to are the late Russell Elliott who was shot by a sentry at Kingston and Pte. W. W. Elliott who died from wounds in France. Another brother, Gordon Elliott is in England employed as a harnessmaker. He went overseas with the 93rd Battalion but was rejected in the medical examination in England.

Corp. Stanley's Fate.

Mr. Wm Stanley, 455 Stewart street, has received the following from the Canadian Red Cross Society in regard to his son, Corp. Fred Stanley, of the 4th C.M.R., who has been missing since June 2nd:

LONDON, Dec. 22, 1916.

Dear Sir,—Re F. Stanley, 113570, 4th C.M.R.

Your letter addressed to the British Red Cross Society has been forwarded to us as we make all enquiries regarding Canadian soldiers. In reply we much regret to inform you that up to the time of writing we have received no good news. We are enclosing herewith copies of two reports that we have received from a British Red Cross searcher as no doubt you will like to read them. You will, of course, understand that these reports are simply statements made by comrades and that we cannot vouch for their accuracy.

On hearing anything further we will communicate with you at once. Assuring you of our great sympathy in the suspense you are enduring, I am,

Yours truly.
W. B HARRISON.

The enclosed reports read as follows:

4th Canadian Mounted Rifles (Stanley, F., 113570, missing 2nd June, 1916):

Stanley was in C Company, 12th Platoon. I saw him in No. 47 trench by Maple Copse on the 2nd of June, 1916. I was with him from 10 a.m. to 12:30. He was very badly wounded, hit by shrapnel in the arm and hip. I

Russians Bag 800 Prisoners in Advance

Extend Their Successes on the Northern End of Their Front—German Trenches Penetrated and Berlin Admits Loss of Ground.

GERMANS USED GAS

LONDON, Jan. 8. — The Russians have extended their successes on the northern end of their front, west of the Riga-Mitau road. Yesterday they captured a village on the edge of the Tirul Swamp and penetrated the German trenches north of the village of Kalnzem. Loss of ground on the River Aa is admitted to-night by Berlin, which states, however, that at every other point the Czar's troops were beaten back without gain.

In the operations south of Lake Babit the Russians claim the capture of 800 prisoners and sixteen cannon in the last three days.

Gas Attack Repulsed.

The Germans launched a violent gas attack against the Russian positions in northern Galicia Sunday night, but were repulsed. Petrograd states that the assault was preceded by three gas waves, accompanied by artillery and mine bombardments. The enemy, advancing in massed columns, was driven back to his trenches before the Russian lines were reached.

Russian aviators have been exceedingly active, bombarding the important enemy positions in Galicia and Volhynia. Kovel especially has suffered from frequent aerial attacks.

What Petrograd Claims.

The Russian War Office communication issued to-day says:

"Our detachments gained possession of a village in the vicinity of the northwestern corner of the Swamp of Tirul. After a stubborn struggle we captured enemy trenches north of the village of Kalnzem, and south of the western end of Lake Babit we took some prisoners, machine guns, trench mortars and one heavy battery. All the fierce counter-attacks by the enemy were repulsed.

"In the battle south of Lake Babit since the beginning of the operations on Saturday we have captured sixteen cannon and about 800 prisoners. Our troops have displayed extraordinary endurance and unrestrained bravey."

LIEUT. COL. JOHNSTON OF 93RD BATTALION IS NOW IN FRANCE

Commanding Officer of Peterboro Unit left England on December 23rd in Charge of a Body of 31 Canadian Officers.

CHRISTMAS AT THE FRONT

His many friends, who knew that it was the dearest wish of his heart, will be glad to learn that Lieut.-Colonel Johnston, who went overseas as officer commanding the 93rd Battalion, has been given an opportunity to see some service in France. It was a heart-breaking task for Lt.-Colonel Johnston to say good-bye to the men of whom he was so fond, and he invariably was on hand to say good-bye to the different drafts as they left. Now he is in France himself, as the following letter received by his wife shows:

"I am leaving for France this morning, December 23rd, at 8 a. m., in command of a unit of 31 Lt.-Colonels and Majors. I expect to spend my Christmas holidays in the trenches."

Peterboro' Poultry Show Opened This Afternoon

The Show Will Continue For the Next Three Days—Mr. George Robertson, of Ottawa is the Judge—Largest Entry List on Record

MISS YATES HERE

The annual three days show of the Peterborough Poultry Association opened this afternoon with the largest entry list on record. Between thirteen and fourteen hundred entries were recorded at noon to-day. This is fully a third more than last year. The largest class is that of White Wyandottes, and one of the largest exhibitors in this class is Mr. A. Breault of this city with twenty-one birds. Mr. Harry Lush, of this city, has the largest entry with one hundred and forty-eight birds to his credit.

The show was opened to the public this afternoon and will continue each afternoon and evening until Thursday. Miss Yates of the Department of Agriculture is here and will give lectures each afternoon and evening, commencing to-day.

The judge is Mr. George Robertson, of Ottawa. Mr. Robertson is recognized as one of the best poultry judges in the business. He officiated at the Guelph show. A number of the Guelph exhibitors are attending the local show.

Hip-Hip, Hooray! The Royal For Fun

Despite the rising cost of everything else, the Royal Theatre continues to give a 25c performance for a 10c bit. The Royal is the storm-centre of fun. The drama and comedy features continue to be popular, uplifting, humorous and enjoyable. To-night is the last chance to see "The Scarlet Runner," the million dollar drama—at the Royal. The rest of the bill to-night includes other dramas and comedies that makes a splendid variety entertainment.

Employees Left For Sudbury

A number of the employees of the Quaker Oats Company left for Sudbury this morning, where they will remain until the company re-establish their plant.

ONLY THE "LOCAL" TO BE AFFECTED

Peterborough is practically unaffected by the reduction of passenger trains on the Ontario railways. The C.P.R. local will revert to the service it formerly provided. That is it will call at all the stations between Tweed and Toronto, whereas at present it has a straight run between Burketon and Toronto, these stations being covered by a Lindsay train, which is one of those withdrawn. In all about seventy-three train crews will be released from the various lines. This will facilitate the handling of freight which has been congesting for months past.

JOKE ON LLOYD GEORGE, JR.

Finds Letter Saying Other Officers in Company Are Gentlemen.

LONDON, Jan. 8. — An excellent story is told by Major R. Lloyd George in the magazine of the Fourth London General Hospital. Major Lloyd George recounts how he was called upon to censor some soldiers letters home and in one of these a private wrote:

"Our company commander is a son of Lloyd George, but the other officers are perfect gentlemen." No doubt he earned it, but the private is a corporal now, adds the Major.

PROTECT THE HOME MARKET.

The journalistic situation in Canada hints of troublesome times ahead for newspapers, pointing to the growing necessity of putting them on a war basis. Of two splendidly conducted newspaper ventures in Montreal, one has failed, and another's existence is problematical. The cost of news print has been placed by the manufacturers at what is regarded as prohibitive figures. If these are insisted upon, many newspapers will be compelled to economize sharply or go out of business.

Newspaper publishers have appealed to the Government and it is said an investigation is being made into the price conditions and causes. There is no doubt that the cost of producing printing paper has increased, but does that increased cost justify the large advance in prices? It is proceeds from an artificial scarcity and increased demand, that is a thing that can be remedied. We know that we consume much less printing paper in Canada than we produce. In face of this fact there should be no such thing as a shortage that would justify increase in price. In this regard the demand frequently made by The Examiner that exportation of paper should be subject to ample protection of the home market and the supply, at reasonable prices as may be, of the needs of Canadian newspaper proprietors, in the interests of the public, is receiving considerable press endorsation. We may be unable to overcome the advance of prices in print paper that are due to increased cost of production; but we should prevent any increase in the price due to limiting home stocks by exportation to an extent to compel advance in home prices by urgency of home demand. This is war time, and the government will be justified in taking such measures as the situation legitimately demands.

THE BONNE ENTENTE.

It is a remarkable and regrettable thing that after half a century of disinterested association, British subjects should find it necessary to resort to organized endeavour to establish relations of civic fellowship that should have been existent and operative during the past half century. Ever since Confederation there has been in both provinces a more or less systematic propaganda carried on with the effect if not the object of separating, instead of uniting the peoples of the two provinces. It is true that these peoples are of different racial origins, but under centuries of British rule and of domination of the British spirit, one would have thought that these peoples would be as homologous in character as they have been in relation and interests.

That the narrow spirit of partisanship — the animating spirit of the cleavage it operates, has prevailed over the patriotism that should have aimed to weld these two people together. Partisanship, sharpened on the whet-stone of bigotry, has sought its own in spite of its separating influence and fact.

Now we have to begin over again. And the beginning is made in the interests of the fatter pocket, better conditions of interprovincial trade intercolonial. Not the highest motive towards national solidarity of sentiment; but none the less promising from beginning at the bottom.

The proposed rapprochement began by a visit of representative business men of Ontario to Quebec, and now the return visit is due. Sunday the Bonne Entente enthusiastic left Montreal for Toronto where a dinner was given yesterday to Quebec delegates. The more promising feature of this closer accord movement is that it is fathered and patronized by the Liberal Premier of Quebec and the Conservative Premier of Ontario. If the movement can be kept clear of party politics; if the members of the two great parties can cold-track politics and practise real patriotism it has large promise. The two provincial leaders can do no higher service than to attach to the exchange of sentiment of fraternization the distinct intimation that neither of them want or will countenance any political help or support that has its foundation upon divided citizenship, that is, citizenship antagonized by the partisan firebrands of either part, whose malignant activities have helped to thrust the people of Quebec and Ontario asunder and make them antagonistic in spirit instead of cooperating to promote the common interest."

There is no place in this new movement for the operation of prejudice in the matter of the language question. Two portions of Canada are bilingual — of different languages. It would be well if the bilingualism could be made mutual, reciprocal; if more business men of Ontario would learn French and vice versa. This applies especially to Ontario, for it will be found that the majority, if not all of the visitors from Quebec, will be able to speak both English and French, while in regard to linguistic ability the majority of their Ontario hosts will be tongue-tied. Ontario business men are handicapped in the race for interprovincial trade advantages by the fact that the majority of educated Quebecers know and speak and write both English and French, and few Ontarioans are similarly gifted: The effect of a larger knowledge of French in Ontario would be an advantage not only from a cultural point of view but from an economic point of regard.

The more we interchange of speech and business, the greater will be the business advantage of both sections of the Dominion. Two neighbours, each individually estimable, would not make much progress in neighbourliness and good understanding if both were ignorant of the other's language. Business and social intercourse are conducted by words spoken or written and the man is best equipped who can turn his tongue or his pen to either of the two great languages of Eastern Canada.

RESPONSIBILITY.

A glance at Mayor Duffus' inaugural address, shows what a large area of ground is to be covered in the civic administration of a city of the size of Peterborough. There seems a multiplicity of things to be done, with a paucity of financial resources. This indicates that the work must be subdivided—as is done, between seven committees, and that each committee must be responsible to the Council for the discharge of its share of duty. This argues the desirability of a fixed policy for each department and a programme of activities laid out—to be worked up to during the year—a plan of campaign.

At the first business meeting of the Council the question of responsibility—who is to be the "boss"—as between the chairman of the Board of Works and the City Engineer, cropped up: This seems to be a matter easily settled. It is the function of the committee—apart from minor details—to decide upon the extent, character and quality of the work to be done, and the amount to be expended, and it is the function of the Engineer to carry it out. The Board or the Chairman is supreme—or "boss" in the matter of policy, and the Engineer should be supreme in regard to the technical and professional details; he should be given a free hand, and held to strict accountability, which is only reasonable in case his purely professional part of the work is not unduly interfered with. He knows his business, or he wouldn't be city engineer, and can reasonably demand that he have a free hand, subject only to the policy and programme of the board and sometimes subject to extraordinary conditions.

There need be no friction if each party to the contract for doing the work of the Board of Works does his duty in his own province. With frank consultation and reasonable attitude on both sides there need be no friction except what is inevitable in the course of business. As to the ward case of "small jobs," ordered to be done but not carried out," that is a matter of detail that it seems can be arranged. Make some blanket arrangement with the city engineer as to maintaining certain street services and conditions and give him the means and the staff to carry them out, and hold him responsible, remembering, however, that he is held responsible for the performance of the general engineering and street work laid out for the season by the committee. "Small jobs" that some persistent ratepayer urges upon his alderman, and within the competency of the street inspector or superintendent, should not be thrust upon the city engineer, if more important work demands his well-paid professional skill and personal presence. If the chairman and members of the Board of Works get together and pull together—if there is no offside play on either side there need be no friction, no conflict of authority, or no evasion of responsibility.

In this connection it seems obvious that, of all departments, that of the Board of Works should be completely organized. The functions of each part of the organization clearly defined, yet effectively dovetailed with the general machinery. Thus in the case of the important work of street maintenance referred to by the Mayor, somebody would be intrusted with means and power to attend to such work without specific instruction, only subject to the general oversight of the chairman of the committee and the city engineer. This is a most important matter; for neglect of timely repair of street surfaces at nominal expense, accounts for extensive street deterioration and expensive reconstruction in addition to depriving the public of the interim enjoyment of comfortable streets.

Thorough organization of the Board of Works department might well employ the attention of the Council. If well effected it would lead to better results, with less waste of effort and less haphazard and ineffective expenditure.

A "CONCLUSIVE PEACE."

If there is one point that all the belligerent peoples and all the neutrals will agree upon, it is that the present war, more devastating in extent than any other in the world's history, shall be followed by a "conclusive peace." "Never again" expresses the mood of most men, and the hope that somehow a peace which shall last may be achieved, probably is the only thing that sustains them in the midst of the tremendous effort and sacrifice they are making.

We are all talking therefore, of a "conclusive peace." But what is a conclusive peace? The militarist and the extreme partisan think a conclusive peace is one which follows a "knock-out." If the adversary is not prostrate, if he is not helpless and hopeless, the peace is nonconclusive.

History does not support this theory. In a military sense most of Napoleon's victories were conclusive, most of his peaces based on them were conclusive. Yet they were never conclusive in the sense of bringing enduring peace. Nothing could be more conclusive than the debacle which France suffered in 1870. But 1914 was an answer to that fatal fallacy. The German armies triumphed at Sadowa, but instead of sweeping over Austria and ruining her, Germany made an inconclusive peace, Austria was left standing, and to-day she stands shoulder to shoulder with her conqueror of 1866 against a common foe. The Crimean war closed with an inconclusive peace. France and England, who fought Russia then, are her allies to-day. Our war with England in 1812 ended with an inconclusive peace. It has been followed by a hundred years of peace. The war between Russia and Japan ended in an inconclusive peace. Russia and Japan are fighting side by side little more than a decade later.

The statesmanship of Bismarck discerned the fallacy of the conclusive peace on that occasion. He did not hope to destroy his adversaries. It is said that he opposed the taking of Alsace and wished to make an inconclusive peace with France, but was overruled by military opinion, which hoped to end forever the threat of a resurgent France. As a result of a conclusive peace in 1870 France cherished revanche for a generation, and to-day Alsace is a rock in the path of a sorely needed peace.

In history the "conclusive peace" has often been most inconclusive; the inconclusive peace the most enduring.—Chicago Tribune.

The Late Sir Frederick W. Borden Minister Militia, Laurier Cabinet

By the death of the Hon. Sir Frederick William Borden K.C.M.G., B.A., M.D., for thirty-two years representative of the county of Kings, N.S., in the House of Commons, and for fifteen years a member of the Laurier administration, Nova Scotia has lost one of the most distinguished sons, and Canada a statesman who rendered it yeoman service.

On the day of the dissolution of Parliament in 1911, on the question of Reciprocity with the United States, Sir Frederick was, with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the only member remaining in the House who has been first elected in 1874. From that day until 1911 with the exception of the five years that he was out of the House—1882 to 1887—Sir Frederick had represented King's county, in which no man was more universally known as a medical practitioner, and more popular with Liberals and citizens generally. In his long career he had to put up with many hard fights but he did so in a gentlemanly manner because, by nature and training, Sir Frederick was a gentleman in the fullest meaning of the term.

First as a supporter of Alexander Mackenzie and then as a follower of Edward Blake and as a colleague of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Dr. Borden did good work for the Liberal party and for the country. Always courteous in debate, affable in manner, courtly in bearing and hospitable in his home, he and Lady Borden were among the most popular people with all classes under the Liberal regime at Ottawa.

On the formation of the Laurier Cabinet in 1896, Sir Frederick was entrusted with the Militia Department which did not count for much at that time. Friend and foe have long since proclaimed that Canada never had a more efficient Minister of Militia. The Militia of Canada, its permanent force, the department itself, with headquarters staff were all revolutionized by him.

When Canada decided to take part in the South African campaign, which was the first time that a genuine military task had been imposed on the Militia Department, Sir Frederick Borden, ably seconded by his Deputy, the late Lieut.-Col. Pinault, and his Council gave the country and the Empire an object lesson in what Canadians could do in a crisis. Not only did the late Knight render gigantic services, but as a token of his loyalty to the flag he was called upon to mourn in the campaign the death for the cause, of his only son. It was as a result of Sir Frederick's work that the basis was laid for Canada's participation on a larger scale in the present European war. The services he rendered the country and the Empire both in Canada and in London as a member of the Imperial Defence Committee will be forever embalmed in Canada's military records.

Sir Frederick had been out of politics for the last five years following his defeat in King's county on September 21, 1914, but had he lived until the next election he would again have been returned for his old constituency.

In his death Nova Scotia loses another of the many distinguished men it has sent to the Dominion Parliament and the Liberal party a stubborn fighter and wise friend.— Montreal Herald.

When War Is a New Experience

(By a Correspondent)

(Article 5.)

Bucharest, Sept. 12th.

(By a Correspondent.)

It is a curious experience after more than two years of war, when the other warring nations have settled down to its conditions, and almost forgotten that there were ever any others, to come among a people who are in the first flush of war's excitement and alarm.

As I waited yesterday in the crowded Prefecture of Police for my "Permis de sejour," as I looked out upon the empty evening streets, all the theatres and cafes and restaurants closed by order at nine o'clock, as I sought in vain to-day for a taxicab or a horse cart, I seemed to be repeating my experiences in Paris during the first days of August, 1914. Paris, like London and Petrograd, soon adapted itself to altered conditions; soon was able to dove-tail its old habits and methods of life into the new ones.

So will Bucharest be able before long. But just now all the aspects of war are fresh and vivid to the quickly impressionable Roumanians. They are taking it very seriously indeed, which is meet and right, and a good sign of their earnest intentions, though a little bewildering and difficult for strangers who come hither to this rich and attractive country from other lands which have unhappily become accustomed to war.

One circumstance there is, I must admit at once and gratefully, which softens all difficulties; I mean the unfailing kindness of heart, courtesy of manner and friendly consideration which are shown by Roumanians of every class. Officials lead one through the maze of formality with encouraging smiles. They administer long interrogations with sympathetic, deprecating eye, which says as plainly as possible, "We know how all this bores you. And probably most of it is superfluous, but you see it is our job." French is spoken very widely by all educated people one may say, in most shops in all hotels, in all public offices. The fine buildings of this handsome city owe much to French taste.

In a great many other directions French examples have been followed, down to such minor matters as that of uniforms for policemen, who look exactly like the Paris "sergeants de ville." And this admiration of the Roumanians for France has given them something of the charm of the French, a suave, easy attractiveness of manner, a readiness to look at life in its humorous aspect, a preference if possible for making things pleasant all round.

I found this out as soon as I entered Roumania and began the long journey from the Russian frontier to Bucharest. Everybody—railway officials, posters, customs authorities, passport examiners, and fellow travellers—made us feel that we were welcome guests. Eighteen hours in a crowded ordinary carriage, with neither sleeper nor restaurant car, would have been very irksome but for this pleasant solace of friendly attentions.

Usually the run from Jassy to the Capital is a run of a few hours. Just now there is but one train a day to serve the whole line, which passes through a well-farmed, well-populated country, and has stations every few miles. So leaving at eight on a brilliant autumn morning we did not get to Bucharest until 2 a.m.

The journey was enlivened by many kinds of interest. First there was the Roumanian landscape to study a landscape now of wooded hills, with villages sheltering on their slopes, now of immense plains; all the land is golden just now with the maize harvest. The corn and other crops have been gathered; cattle graze among the stubble fields. The peasants' houses are neat, whitewashed, with tin roofs for the most part, some thatched. There are very fair roads. The country has a civilized, well-governed appearance.

Very attractive are costumes of the peasants. Their working dress is a kind of loose skirt and kilt in one, worn over tight cotton trousers. Round the waist they wear a broad, red band, which make them look like Venetian gondolins. On Sundays—it was luckily a Sunday on which we travelled the greater part of the way—their skirts are of linen and adorned with embroidery; hussar jackets, braided and furred, hang jauntily from their shoulders; they sport feathered hats.

The women are less gaily plumaged, though some of them exhibit beautifully worked blouses beneath padded coats of many colours, and now and then one sees the traditional Roumanian maidenly head-dress, a delicate, filmy veil.

Although we stopped very often there was no stop long enough for a meal. At one station food was ready, but the rush of hungry passengers overwhelmed the restaurant staff. The only thing to do was to seize whatever one could seize and fall upon it. Several enterprising spirits invaded the kitchen and bore out bowls of soup or dishes of stewed meat. I picked up a water melon, one of those refreshing fruits with pink flesh, and made my lunch off that. While we were all hurriedly eating a small boy dashed in and shouted something unintelligible. Some thought he said the train was starting. Some ran out and looked into the sky for a hostile aeroplane.

Whether he had anything to communicate or whether he was hired by dishonest people to give them the opportunity to make off without paying I could not determine. In any case payment was difficult. Only by grasping a waiter's arm firmly and forcing money into his hands did I succeed in keeping my conscience clear.

Bucharest, when we reached it, was lighted only by the moon, and there were no means of reaching the hotels save by walking a mile or so and hiring porters to carry luggage at rates varying from 6s. to 12s. 6d. a head. Bombardments from the air have caused the town to be darkened, and all cabs to disappear from the streets after sunset. No one may be abroad after nine without a permit. Very thoroughly the darkening order is obeyed.

At 7.30 the chamber maid marches into my room, shuts the outer windows, pulls down a Venetian blind, shuts also the inner windows, which have thick blue paper pasted over them, then pulls down a green baize blind. No light can get out, and alas, no air can get in.

Very stringent, too, the postal censorship regulations. Useless to write letters in English or in any language save Roumanian or French. These are the only tongues the censor recognises. Telegraphic restrictions are even more severe, and the telephone has been suppressed altogether. Even the favourite afternoon tea shops are closed lest people should gossip there too much and disturb one another's minds.

Thus quickly, in a few days, war has transformed the life of the country. All measures were prepared down to the 5d. stamp on every bill for the benefit of soldiers' families. This readiness, this care for every detail is an earnestness of the business-like spirit in which Roumania has entered the war. She is fighting, remember, for a national ideal, the bringing under her flag of Transylvania, chiefly inhabited by people of Roumanian blood.

It is an idea which has been in the minds of all Roumanians, peasants as well as land owners and middle classes, for a great many years past.

They are resolved with firm perseverance and vigour to make it a reality now. This is why, although this city is one of the most pleasure-loving in Europe, they are so ready to undergo inconveniences, and even if need be, privations. That is why they are taking these precautions so seriously. It does them credit. It proves the steadiness of their interest.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

In last Thursday's issue of your paper there appeared a letter re Harry Hill, over the signature of Richard J. Devey. There are one or two statements that are misleading and unfair to Mr. Hill, to say the least:

The following are the facts, so far as I have been able to learn them.

I. The Instrumental exam. passed (with 1st class honours) was a Piano examination (not organ.)

II. The two vocal examinations (under Mr. Devey) were passed with first class honours and honours respectively.

III. The comparison in the last paragraph as to the grades in passing is incorrect. There is no such thing as second class honours. Refer to Toronto College of Music Year Book 1915-17. Page 31, paragraph 4. "Examinations results will be given under the headings of Pass, honours, and first class honours."

IV. Mr. Hill no doubt had his own reasons for changing his teacher. He came to me unsolicited. I had never met him until he came for his first lesson on Jan. 4th, 1916. Five months and two weeks later he passed the Third year or final Vocal examination, which I consider is very much to his credit. A year and a half or two years' study is usually advised for this examination.

V. Mr. Hill never studied organ under Mr. Devey.

Let me say in conclusion, that it seems a pity that any older musician should say or do anything that would tend to discourage any of the younger generation of musicians. They are the hope of the future.

In Mr. Hill's case he is especially worthy of commendation, as he has followed his musical studies, while still continuing his business calling.

John H. Renwick,
567 Aylmer Street.

Peterboro, Jan. 8, 1917.

The facts implied in clauses I to V are correct.

Harry Hill.

Dear Sir: Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to express my opinion as regards the treatment of Soldiers' Wives. I am a soldier's wife myself, and have always found the government just and generous in their treatment. I feel I must speak as I find matters, in defence of what has been said against the government by some of the soldiers' wives.

I myself feel more than grateful for all that has been done for me. I cannot understand the discontent of some soldiers' wives as all are treated alike according to their family. It takes a lot to satisfy some people. I think some of these discontented women must either be very ignorant of the enormous expense the government is being put to on account of this war or else they are bad managers with their money somewhere. All the soldiers' wives I have met seem to be very comfortable. Why don't these women go and tell their troubles to Mr. Dobbin instead of making a public show of them and trying to stir up discontent in others, who are satisfied with what they are getting. I am sure Mr. Dobbin would be pleased to assist them if he knew that they were without the necessities of life, as one of them admits. It is strange that some should find so much fault with the government, but I think if things were looked into the fault would be on the other side. My advice to these women is to be thankful for small mercies, when we know what women and children have suffered and are still suffering in Belgium, and other countries over the war, and they would be glad to have one-quarter of the peace and the comfort we are getting here in Canada. "A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind."

A Soldier's Widow.

Mr. Cock and Mrs. Hen will be the attractions before the footlights for three days of this week in Peterboro, and it will be well for the citizens to sit up and take notice.

Mr. Cock certainly has something to crow about and his wife can be excused if she should assume a certain hauteur of manner on this particular occasion,—for surely never before did they have society dancing attendance upon them in so marked a manner as during the present winter. Eggs selling at sixty cents per dozen in Peterboro, and as high as $1 per dozen in Toronto is certainly a new record—something to strut about indeed.

And yet—and yet—the remedy for this matter is close to the hand of every citizen who has a back yard large enough to hold a small chicken house. An energetic boy of 12 years or over, and a piano box, or a large dry goods box, given a half dozen pullets and some encouragement — the scraps from the dinner table, (which otherwise must go to the scavenger's bucket) and a small stock of grain, will solve the problem of the high cost of living in the matter of eggs at least.

The writer knows whereof he speaks for has he not a few pullets of his very own?—twenty-three to be precise, and these after laying all through the past summer (there were only about ten days in September when no eggs were gathered) have continued all through October, November and December to furnish the house with from four to eight eggs per day,—and are still doing so, with no sign of growing weary in their labor of well doing.

When the Butter Lady called last week, she had no butter. "All gone into the cow's horns," she reported. Neither had she any eggs. "Got one egg from 100 hens last week!" So there you are, Mrs. City Housekeeper. If you are depending on the farmer's wife for your eggs, you are surely leaning upon a broken reed. It failed you last winter, it has failed you this winter, and it will fail you next winter. But next winter you can be independent of it if you will just drop around to the Poultry Show in the Market Hall this Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday,—and make your choice of the particular breed you fancy, and arrange with some of the breeders to supply you with a setting of eggs, or a batch of chickens next spring. If you have a boy get him interested, for most boys like to have something alive to look after—and it always sends an electric thrill through them to discover eggs in a nest—and these eggs are always the biggest ever, when laid by their own particular pullets.

Now, don't sit and complain about "The awful price of eggs." Get interested and help yourself. You will be glad that you did it. They are not "a nuisance about the place"—rather you will find them very interesting, as well as profitable.

EGG-X-ACTLY.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Use "Tiz" for puffed-up, burning, aching, calloused feet and corns

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot torture.

4th Canadian Mounted Rifle. Re Stanley, F., 113070 (missing June 2, 1916).

I saw him in the front line at Mt. Sorrel in trench 53 on June 2, 1916, fatally wounded on the right arm. I bandaged him but the case was hopeless. I helped to carry him to Davison St., then had to leave him. Others were with him. Pte. Raynor of C Co. stayed with him. I heard no more of him.

Informant—Sergt. F. L. Bunn, 109249 C Company, 11th Platoon, 4th C.M.R. Harfleur.

Two new recruits who have been added to the ranks of the 247th Battalion are: Pte. Wilfred J. Lewis, 58 Wolfe St., Peterborough, and Pte. Jas. Saltern, Clarina, Dummer.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Lieut. Quinn, of the 247th Battalion, are in Millbrook to-day.

Mrs. J. Kimberley has received the following letters from the front:

France, Dec. 12th, 1916.

I received the socks and I beg you to accept my humble thanks for the same. The fit is just right. Permit me to say that you have a better idea of the length to make the foot than most knitters. The greater portion of the socks we receive here have too long feet. At least I find this trouble, although I am a six footer. I'm not wishing to find fault at all, you know, but I want you to know that yours are right. I shall have comfortable feet this trip in the trenches. Thanking you once more for your kindness, I am,

Sincerely yours,
196800 Lance-Corp. D. H. Pollard.

France, Dec. 9th.

Just a few lines to let you know I am O.K. Hoping this letter finds you the same. I received your bundle of socks in good order and if you could have only been here to hear the praise the boys gave your League when I handed them the socks. I am sure you would have found that the good work your League is doing in keeping the boys in comforts isn't being done in vain. I must tell you that they came just at the right time for we have been getting very bad weather of late and the mud has not been pleasant. Well I must tell you that the boys are all keeping O.K. and still going strong, also letting Fritzie know that he would have been better off if he had stayed at home. Well, it is time for me to close, so good-bye with many thanks from the boys and myself.

Wishing the Canadian Kitchener League a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year. From,

Yours sincerely,
Pte. Chas. Veenman.

Among the returned soldiers who have reached Quebec are Armourer Sergt. Geo. Grange of the 93rd Battalion, and Bandsmen H. Wood and P. Doughty of the 93rd Band. Two other Peterborough soldiers in the list are given as R. J. Saffrey and D. B. Ivieson.

Mr. Chas. Duggan has received a wire from Sergt. Inst. Patrick Duggan, who has returned from the front to the effect that he is proceeding to Winnipeg on duty.

VICTORY FOR "DRYS" IN UNITED STATES.

Webb-Kenyon Law Is Declared Constitutional by the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The Webb-Kenyon law, designed to prevent liquor shipments from "wet" to "dry" States, was to-day declared constitutional by the Supreme Court by a vote of 7 to 2, which also upheld West Virginia's prohibition amendment prohibiting citizens from receiving liquor for personal use shipped by common carriers in interstate commerce.

Attorneys for national liquor organizations who were in court said the decision upheld and applied the Webb-Kenyon law "in its broadest sense."

Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon League of America, argued the case before the court, and made this statement on the court's decision:

"The states may now prohibit the possession, receipt, sale and use of intoxicating liquor and not be hampered by the agencies of interstate commerce."

THE GREAT WORLD WAR IN THE LIGHT OF SCRIPTURE

Interesting Address by Rev. Mr. Doner, Pastor of Bethany Tabernacle —A Panoramic Outline of the Great Universal War From its Cause to its Consequence—"War Began in Heaven"—The Strategy of War.

The above was the subject of Pastor Doner's address at Bethany Tabernacle on Sunday night. He admitted in his opening remarks that he was so full of his subject that he scarcely knew where to begin. His purpose was to give a panoramic outline of the great universal war from its cause to its consequence, and in order to do this it would be necessary to present it as a continued theme.

He said, "War began in heaven. Men have learned the strategy of war from the devil and his rebel angels. All world wars since the beginning of man's military history are mere incidents of the great universay conflict incessantly raging. The real belligerents in this stupendous struggle are God and Satan, with men and angels supporting either side according to their choice. When Lucifer rebelled against Jehovah, war began. God punished this wicked conspiracy with drastic reprisal resulting in his expulsion from the mount of God and his eternal degradation.

Unparalleled Patience.

See Isa. 14: 13-17. Eze. 28: 14-19.

Since then, he is the "Prince of the power of the air," and though his rendezvous is in the aerial heavens, he is vigorously operating in the earth, recruiting his armies from the manhood of every nation. No event of history ever disclosed such unparalleled patience as that exercised by His Divine Majesty while permitting the insolent insubordination of men and demons for four thousand years.

Then as if to stagger the angels of heaven, He executed a supreme stroke of diplomacy in sending His only Son as His Royal Ambassador to earth. This matchless kindness was met with earths characteristic revenge and hate, and found expression in the cry of Matt. 21: 38, "Come let us kill him." After 33 years of cruel plotting they accomplished the murder of this Royal Prince, but their exultation and triumph were short-lived. This apparent defeat was in reality the mightiest victory over hell and the grave while Satan and his legions realized the conflict had only really begun.

The King's Palace.

Being recalled at this time to the King's Palace in the home-land, the Hero of Calvary has since then been sitting upon the throne of His Royal Father where in intimate counsel a marvellous plan is being developed for the future righteous government of the earth.

Following the recall of the ambassadorial prince, the Holy Spirit who is the third person in the Imperial Counsel, was appointed to the exalted and important post of Consul-General and Chief of staff, and immediately delegated to the earth. See Heb. 1: 1-2. Ps. 2: 7-9. Acts 2: 33-36.

Under his skilful direction an army of astounding magnitude and magnificent equipment is being rapidly mobilized in preparation for the great coming crisis known in Scripture as the Battle of Armageddon. See Rev. 16: 16, also Rev. 19: 11-21. The present conflict in Europe believed by many to be the Armageddon of Scripture, is not to be compared to that day. It cannot possibly be Armageddon. With Armageddon all earth wars will cease and the purple and gold of Millennial glory will begin. Its locality, nationality, purpose and magnitude will be entirely diverse from anything existing during this present struggle, great as it is.

Scarred World.

Poor, blind, battle-scarred world, little do you dream how dreadful the tribulation preceding the day of Christ's Royal Reign. Any peace that might be arranged now or at the close of hostilities in Europe cannot be permanent. There can be no real or abiding peace until the Prince of Peace returns. This is not His hour, but the day of His patience and preparation. He will come and then will be the day of His power. Ps. 110: 5.

Meanwhile, His saints who fight the battle for right are exhorted to take courage, remembering that though our arsenal is in the heavens, it is not on record that a soldier was ever allowed to run short of supplies or suffer defeat when orders had been observed. Our equipment is absolutely up-to-the-minute. God is never behind the times. We have a wireless field system known to us as Prayer that is a working marvel. Our messages, when according to code go through. The devil can delay them, but cannot prevent them going through. Our Aerial Guard is indefatigable and invulnerable. The holy-watchers (angels) never sleep or fall, nor are they hindered by the weather. We have indisputable supremacy in the air, the very home of the arch-fiend, and we must win.

Note:—The next address will describe the escape of the Bride, the battle of Armageddon, the capture of the devil and his imprisonment in the bottomless pit for a thousand years. Be sure to hear it.

Five Thousand Dollar Installments For Patriotic Fund

Ald. Langford Hints at the Possibility of the War Ending Before the Close of the Year

At yesterday's council meeting Ald. Langford asked if any steps had been taken to define the manner in which the sixty thousand dollars to be raised by the city for the use of the Patriotic Fund is to be paid over. Upon receiving a negative reply Ald. Langford suggested that the money be paid over at the rate of five thousand dollars a month, instead of paying it over in a lump sum. Should the war end before the year is out the remainder of the money will be available for other purposes. Five thousand dollars a month for 12 months means $60,000 for a year.

The suggestion was accepted as a good one, and Ald. Langford was informed that the matter would be taken up when the by-law is submitted to the Council.

MR. GORDON GAVE ADDRESS.

Mr. G. N. Gordon gave an address last night at the monthly meeting of the Belmont Club. His subject was "Everyday Points of Law," which he discussed in an interesting and practical manner.

GASTINE COMPANY OF BRIDGETON, WISH TO LOCATE HERE

Mr. R. J. Johnston, 1035 Burnham Street, has received the following self-explanatory letters from the Gastine Company of Bridgeton, N.Y.:

Dear Sir,—We are in receipt of letter, under date of January 1, and are glad that you too have convinced some of your local people of the merits of our product. We knew it would come, because our past three years have taught us that people appreciate a good thing; and our business has grown so largely in the past year that we are casting about for new factories.

As you know, our sales in Canada have been very large, and would be still larger if it were not for refusal of some few dealers to pay the Customs, etc. Therefore, will it be too much trouble for you to advise us on the following, and if the requirements are met we might build a factory in Peterborough or some other good city, that you might suggest to us? We would need a lot of about between 85 and 95 feet frontage, and 46 to 65 feet deep, although these can be reversed in case we can have more light; preferably near the business centre and not far from the railroads. Give us this data in full and complete detail, also advise if the laws of your city would allow us to build a five-storey fire-proof building. Give us all this data. What about your railroads, telegraph lines, the employment of help, etc., as we would need about 85 girls and about 10 men? We pay very good wages, but we need competent help. Can we get this in your city?

We would desire a building wherein we could have everything under one roof, such as chemical department, packing warehouse, shipping and general offices, and we would also desire from you advice on all these points. You see, by us having our factory in Canada, it would eliminate all the Customs and save us a lot of money, as we always ship our product f.o.b. the buyer's city; and by having this branch in Canada it would be in our line of advancement and greatly to our financial benefit; also for the sake of the dealer, who could then get prompter shipments. We are going after the sales of gastine in Canada stronger than ever, and we will win, if modern methods will allow it, and with a responsive product such as we have, as you know by this time.

If the lot that is near the schoolhouse is, in your opinion, the ideal location for us, will you give us an option for $10,000 on this for thirty days? Please advise on this point at once. What inducements will the city give us? Taxes? Water? Fire protection? We find on investigation that as Peterborough is so situated because of its railroad facilities, that we would prefer this city if our compliances can be met reasonably, and if you can obtain for us the lot you speak of. Our building would take a space of nearly 47 x 89 feet. Is this lot suited for our purpose and, if so, get us the option on it at once.

We are going to sell four times the amount of gastine in Canada during 1917 than we did during 1916. We have prospered, and we have enough orders here right now to keep us working every day for six months without getting another order. It might interest you to know that several armies of the world are using gastine in their tractors, motor cars, aeroplanes, boats, stationary engines, etc. Our sales have been very large, but we are getting cramped for want of room, and here in the States, while we pay very good wages, want of help is becoming the factor; this and for the advancement of our business interests in Canada, forces us to spread out our manufacturing end. This will also help the sales too. It works both ways. You know we are now selling our product in every part of the world, as the enclosed circular shows you, and our factories work six days in the week, the year round; no vacations, only in rotation, wherein we allow each employee two weeks with pay.

We sincerely hope you will give this matter your very best attention, and at once, and until we hear from you soon, we are, Dear Sir, very truly,

The Gastine Co., Sales Dept.,
I. W. Goldberg.

PHYSICAL ACTIVITIES IN THE "Y" GYMNASIUM

On Saturday morning the Junior Collegiate League got off to a splendid start. Two games were played and both were well contested. The Cubs sprang a surprise on the Dodgers by winning with a much weakened team. The game was very close, however, with the score 5-4. In the basketball game the Braves won from the Giants.

Last night in the Senior Employed League the Athletics fought hard to hold first place, but were defeated by the Tigers in a hot game, the final score being 7 to 6. Harold Copp, captain of the winning team, scored six of the seven points. In the last game McLeod's Indians won by a big score from the Senators, who were without the services of their best men, score 20 to 3. On Thursday night and Saturday morning the 60 yds. potato race will be run off and as the scores of each boy count, every member of the teams should be on hand. A prize will be given for the best score in the all round handicap in the six events, handicaps to be based on performances during the last four months.

The Junior Employed Boys organized a six team League on Friday night and will begin their schedule this week.

Spanish Cabinet Has Handed in Resignation

Special to The Examiner.

MADRID, January 9.—The Spanish Cabinet resigned to-day.

Spain has been very restive under the German submarine campaign. It is possible the Ministry under Prime Minister Romanones has fallen because of lack of public confidence in their policy in dealing with Germany.

Russians Withdraw Along Sereth River

Special to The Examiner.

PETROGRAD, January 9.—The withdrawal of the Russian forces to new positions along the line of the Putna and Sereth rivers was announced to-day.

The beating back of enemy attacks south of the River Oitus and the region of Rekozo was also reported.

NEW YORK, January 9.—Sir Sam Hughes, former Canadian Minister of Militia, declared in an interview here to-day that Canada is not fighting for peace, "but for human liberty."

Sir Sam said it would be an easy matter for Germany to land troops in this country or Canada if the British navy did not prevent it, and they could march right through to San Francisco or Vancouver.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

POLICEMAN KILLED BY BITE, HE SAYS

CORONER STATES AUTOPSY SHOWS HUGH McKIERNAN SUFFERED INFECTION WHEN MAKING ARREST LAST JULY.

An autopsy on the body of Policeman Hugh McKiernan, of the West 125th street station, who died in the Knickerbocker Hospital on December 7th, revealed the fact, according to Coroner Feinberg, that he had died of an infection suffered when he was bitten by a man that he arrested last July. Edward O'Neill, a machinist, was arrested by McKiernan after a fight last July, and McKiernan's right thumb was severely bitten. The following day O'Neill was found guilty of disorderly conduct in the Washington Heights Court and was released on suspended sentence.

O'Neill was arrested again on Nov. 27, after the death of Robert Weir, of No. 606 St. Nicholas avenue. During a fight in Broadway Weir was knocked down. His head hit the curb and he died. A charge of homicide was placed against O'Neill, but he was released on bail and was at liberty last night.

"This case opens an entirely new field in criminal procedure," said Coroner Feinburg last night. "If a policeman dies as a result of a disease contracted by a bite several months before can the man who bit him be prosecuted for manslaughter or homicide? The matter will be submitted to the District Attorney."

SHOT SWEETHEART BECAUSE SHE FOUND HE LOVED ANOTHER

MONTREAL, Jan. 9—Bert Haines, 24 years of age, living with his parents at 16 River street, Verdun, is dead, and Eva Boyle, 20 years old, a waitress, who gave her address as 477 Alymer street, is dying in the Royal Victoria Hospital as the result of a shooting affray at the corner of McTavish street and Pine avenue early yesterday morning. The man's body was found lying in the snow at 1:30 o'clock with a bullet through the heart. A little earlier the girl had staggered into the Royal Victoria telling an incoherent story of meeting some one on the street. She was suffering from a bullet wound. The doctors examined her wounds and pronounced them very serious—probably fatal. Late last night the girl was still alive but in a dying condition.

Found Muff and Revolver.

The hospital authorities, unable to understand the stories the woman told, sent for the police. When they arrived the body had been discovered in the snow. A muff, alleged to have belonged to the woman, lay beside it and inside the fur was a revolver with two empty chambers. This was taken in charge by the officers. In a few minutes Detective Desgroseliers was sent to guard the dying girl at the hospital, and Detectives Weston and McManus were detailed for the investigation. The body of the man was taken to the morgue where the inquest will be held.

The girl, according to the police, has admitted the shooting. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause. Haines had been keeping company with the woman for about a year and it is said she was very anxious for him to marry her. His mother had met the girl a couple of months ago. According to the confession to the police the girl shot the man because she had discovered that he did not love her any more. Then she turned the gun on herself. His faithlessness had been made very evident to her, she declared, within the last three weeks. She did not explain that further.

Knew There Was Gun.

The victim of the tragedy left his home in Verdun Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock and at three o'clock yesterday morning his mother was informed of his death. The girl did not work at all Sunday. Haines was a plumber by trade and worked for the Allis-Chalmers Company.

The first news of the tragedy was received about two o'clock yesterday morning, when the undertaking and ambulance establishment of Wm. Wray, University street, was called to send an ambulance to remove the body of Haines. The woman Boyle, was then seen to be seriously wounded and she was rushed to the Royal Victoria, where, it is alleged, she exclaimed on arrival: "I did it."

The girl had been out of work, it is said, for the last two weeks. She had planned too to return to her relatives in England last December but changed her mind at the last minute.

Cry of "Insane" At Bridegroom Halts Wedding

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Somebody broke up Harry Barman's wedding, but who did it nobody knows. At first it was said it was his two sisters, but they denied that vigorously.

But, whoever it was, the voice of City Clerk Scully was stopped just as it was about to pronounce Barman and Miss Ethel M. Gross man and wife, and two irate women did the stopping.

Barman and his bride to be walked into the marriage license bureau and obtained a license from the clerk, Julius Brosin.

The prospective bridegroom then told Brosin he had made a million in the last few months in motor stocks, and asked who would marry them. He was sent to City Clerk Scully, who led the party into the marriage chapel for the ceremony.

THINGS HAPPEN SWIFTLY

Then the telephont tinkled. An excited feminine voice asked if Barman had been after a license, and insisted that the marriage be stopped, alleging Barman was insane. The speaker said she was Barman's sister.

Scully was informed of this, and there followed a few moments of watchful waiting. Soon two young women rushed in.

"This man is insane and in no position to get married. In justice to this young girl and to my brother, we demand that the marriage not take place," one of the young women shouted to the clerk.

BRIDE-TO-BE FAINTS.

The would-be bridegroom straightway declared that untrue; the bride to be fainted, and had to be carried to the next room.

In a few minutes, however, the four walked out, without giving an inkling of their future plans.

Miss Lily Barman, one of Barman's two sisters, asserted that she had not known her brother was in town, had not done anything to prevent a marriage, and did not know whether she knew Miss Gross or not.

AN APPOINTMENT FOR WELL KNOWN PETERBORO' BOY

Mr. Herbert S. Wood, a son of the late R. E. Wood, former Crown Attorney of Peterborough, has been appointed by the Government of British Columbia Counsel to advise in speedy trials and the administration of Criminal Law within the Province.

This is a very responsible and lucrative office and Mr. Wood is to be congratulated upon his rapid promotion and success in his practice of law.

The many friends of the family will be pleased to know that Mr. Arthur Wood, and Dr. Edward Wood are reported to be in good health although both have been nearly two years at the front.

TO ISSUE SUGAR COUPONS.

Pound and Half Monthly Allowance in France.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—M. Herriot, Minister of Supplies, has decided that the rations of sugar for the French people shall be one pound and a half for each person per month after February 1, according to The Matin. It is expected a system of books of coupons will be adopted, each coupon giving the right to a certain quantity at the grocers. The object in restricting the sale of sugar is to reduce purchases abroad and release shipping for more urgent needs.

FREE DEMONSTRATION of the BRANSTON VIOLET-RAY HIGH FREQUENCY GENERATOR

AT MADILL'S DRUG STORE, George and Hunter Sts.

Satisfied Users Say This

It is only fair that I should write and tell you that the Generator I purchased from you a few months ago has entirely cured my Neuritis. The best Doctors and high priced specialists treated me without success, and I can confidently state that I owe my restoration to complete health and strength to the Branston Generator.

I purchased one of the Branston Violet Ray Generators and I am happy to state that I have received great benefit. It has saved me from going to the Hotel Dieu for an operation.

I was suffering intense pain with Rheumatism in my left ankle and it was very much swollen. After three or four applications of the Branston Violet Ray the swelling was greatly reduced and the pain has entirely left.

At present my ankle could not feel better and I am able to walk on it for hours with no pain or swelling at all. This I consider very remarkable as I could not put my foot on the floor before without suffering a great deal.

PERFECT HEALTH

Is within the reach of all. Almost instant relief from pain can be had by using this marvellous scientific discovery. Endorsed and used by physicians, sanitariums and hospitals throughout Canada.

Come in and get a FREE TREATMENT It will convince you.

COBOURG EASY FOR FAST SOLDIER SEVEN IN INTERMEDIATE O.H.A. GAME

247th Won From Lakeshore Bunch By 23 Goals to 5—Result Was Never in Doubt—247th Led by 8 to 2 at End of First Period and 17 to 3 at Close of Second

SOME RAPID SCORING

The Cobourg 247th Battalion intermediate O.H.A. game at Brock Street Rink last night was nothing more than an exercise gallop for Major O'Flynn's soldiers who won, going away by 23 goals to 5. The 247th led by 8 to 2 at the end of the first period and 17 to 3 at the close of the second and won as they pleased. It was a peculiar game at that, inasmuch as the Cobourg seven looked a lot better than the score would indicate. A 23 to 5 tally usually means a continuous bombardment of the losing team's nets but such was not the case last night for Cobourg kept trying all the time and showed considerable speed, breaking away fast and giving Legros more work than any one who did not see the game would imagine. However, the red skirts from the lake front lacked the punch around the nets, where the soldiers scored with ridiculous ease. Bulger the Cobourg goal keeper was as full of holes as a Swiss cheese in the first period, although he came to and made some nice saves later on, while the Cobourg defence, although fast offensively, was as wide open as a farmer's mouth on circus day and the soldier's had little trouble in working through.

The game was very late in starting, owing to the fact that no referee turned up. Finally Percy Bond was secured and the game got under way after 9 o'clock. The peculiar thing about it was that Bond was supposed to officiate in the first place, but had not been notified by the O.H.A. The local boy handled the game satisfactorily.

Although the soldiers have not by any means perfected their team play they showed all kinds of speed and stick handling and did some effective passing around the nets. Armstrong and Adams were the big guns in the attack, the lanky rover bagging eight goals, while Adams slipped seven past Bulger. The two fed each other nicely and had the Cobourg defence mystified. Armstrong's bad knee did not seem to interfere very much with his speed. Flanagan travelled nicely at centre and uncovered a shot like a rifle bullet while Evans at left, although he failed to break into the scoring, passed nicely and a number of goals were the result of his work. Halpin and Thornton were strong, both on the defence and attack and Halpin's unselfish playing is indicated by the assist column which shows that four goals were scored on his passing. Legros was in fine form in the nets.

For Cobourg, Payne and Drumm, the defence pair both showed speed on the attack, but were easily beaten as a defence. The veteran Glidden worked hard, while Frank Barrie the Peterborough boy who played for the local juniors three years ago did some nice work at left wing. The first two Cobourg goals were scored as the result of his work.

The line-up:

COBOURG		247TH
Bulger	Goal	Legros
Payne	Defence	Thornton
Drumm		Halpin
Glidden	Rover	Armstrong
Maher	Centre	Flanagan
Fox	Right Wing	Adams
Barrie	Left Wing	Evans

Referee—J. P. Bond, Peterborough.

The game was hardly underway when Armstrong with a circling rush fooled the Cobourg defence and slammed goal No. 1 past Bulger. Almost from the next face off Thornton dashed in and although he was checked in front of the net Adams nailed the rubber and beat Bulger.

Cobourg broke away for several passing rushes but Legros nailed their shots. Then Adams passed out from behind the nets to Armstrong who made it 3 to 0.

Adams and Flanagan drew penalties but there was no damage done while they were off. The teams were even again when Adams tipped one past Bulger on a rush by Flanagan.

The latter made it 5 to 0 when he batted one through after a combination rush. Flanagan also got goal No. 6, with a neat shot.

Then Cobourg took a hand in the scoring when Barrie broke away and passed to Glidden who hoisted one past Legros at close range.

The Lakeshore bunch also got the next one a minute after when Maher and Barrie combined nicely the latter finding the nets. That left it 6 to 2, but the figures did not remain at that point long. Adams going in alone for a nice goal a minute afterwards. Then Grover Halpin slipped down the ice with a beautiful rush and flipped the rubber over to Adams who had no difficulty in fooling Bulger. That ended the scoring for the period.

The soldiers opened the second period as if they were going to score a million. Within 30 seconds of the face-off Halpin got away and passed to Armstrong who did the needful. Back came Armstrong alone for another thirty second goal. They nearly had half a dozen more in the next couple of minutes but Bulger tore off some good stops, and it was finally Cobourg who scored. Payne batting in a rebound after a combination rush.

Thornton drew a penalty, but the Petes kept on pressing. Armstrong made it eleven when he took a pass from behind the nets but Adams slipped the rubber between the posts. Drumm was chased for tripping Armstrong. Flanagan changed the score to 12 to 3 on a pass from Evans and then added another when he brought the puck around from back of the nets after a duel with Payne.

Just after the face-off Flanagan drew a five-minute penalty for charging Payne. The 247th kept hammering away and Adams scored twice in quick succession, making it 15 to 3. Armstrong added another on a pass from Halpin and then Thornton tore through all by himself and scored.

Thornton opened the scoring in the third period with another long rush, pulling the goal keeper out. That made the figures 18 to 3. Payne got that back when he tore off an individual rush and went in on top of Legros for a goal.

A pass from Halpin to Armstrong gave the latter a chance to boost his total and he grabbed off another, a minute later on a pass from Evans. Adams got goal No. 21 and Halpin drew his first counter of the evening on a pass from behind.

Payne was apparently not satisfied with the number of goals the soldiers were getting so he hammered one past his own goal keeper, making the score 23 to 4. Just before the game ended Fox scored for Cobourg on a nice shot. The goals were scored as follows:

Canadian Torpedo Boat Destroyer Grilse Was Saved By Heroic Men

Crew's Work at Pumps and Devotion Kept Leaking Ship Afloat—Lieut C. McL. Fry Tells Fine Story—Operator Sent Call For Help, and Was Swept o Death—Two Seamen Drowned.

The tremendous two-day fight which the little Canadian torpedo-boat destroyer Grilse made was told to a reporter yesterday by Lieut. C. McL. Fry, her navigating officer, who was in duty at the wheel, and is now in Toronto on sick leave.

"The sea rolled the ship right over on her side," he said. "Water poured down her funnels. The engine-room skylight stove in, and the engine-room half filled with water. It seemed just a matter of minutes till the ship would take her final plunge, but in a miraculous way a cross sea from the other side seemed to toss her right up, and she settled down on a more or less even keel."

"This was the culminating point. She was not yet out of danger, but the devotion and tireless energy of her crew did the rest."

Lieut. Fry is at present stopping with friends at 1425 Queen street west. When his position on the bridge was no longer necessary he attempted successfully, with four men, to cover the engine-room skylight, but was dashed along the deck against the torpedo propellers and had his lips severed right from the nose to the chin. His face is now wonderfully healed, and he expects to soon be able to go back to duty. He is quite emphatic on the point of the Grilse's seaworthiness. "She is a fine little ship," he declared, "and as well found as any torpedo-boat destroyer afloat, and all the men will be glad to rejoin her when required. In torpedo boats weight and thickness of plates have to be reduced to a minimum to allow for high speed, but it is the same with them all. The men know it is a dangerous service, but they are paid at higher rates than in the other branches of the service."

Lieut. Fry told the story in simple sailor language, magnifying nothing, and practically making no mention of the difficult part he was called on to play as navigating officer. "The Grilse was built at Yarrow, England," he began, "for a torpedo boat destroyer. She was a sound little ship, but necessarily thin to obtain high speed, being built of 3-16-inch plating. She was probably the fastest vessel on the Atlantic seaboard, having a speed of more than 35 knots an hour (more than 40 miles). We left Halifax on Monday afternoon, Dec. 11th, with a picked crew of the best men available from the Canadian Naval Service, as the ship was assigned to the south for special duty. Bermuda was to be our first stop."

TWO SEAMEN DROWNED.

Everything went satisfactorily until Tuesday afternoon when our instruments indicated the approach of a cyclonic disturbance, which afterwards proved to be of exceptional severity, the barometer being the lowest recorded for many years. To avoid the centre of the storm we put about and set a course for Shelbourne, N.S., being then 280 miles from Cape Sable, N.S. In spite of our high speed we were unable to avoid altogether the track of the storm. As working on deck was dangerous while running before the sea, we hove to at about 6 o'clock in order to get the gear about the deck better secured for the storm which was obviously nearly on us."

"While hove to with the sea about three points on the starboard bow the ship pounded in an alarming manner, the sea being very steep on account of the current from the Gulf stream and against the direction of the wind. About 6:30 we began to jettison oil barrels from the deck having taken on additional oil for our long cruise south. It was while engaged on this work that two seamen, Ashburn and Harris (of Toronto) were washed overboard by a big sea. At the same time A. B Seaman Chandler was severely injured, having his leg bruised and suffering internal injuries from being sent along the whole length of the ship under the torpedo raiser."

HOPE ALMOST GIVEN UP.

"Of course, it was impossible to turn back for these men, and there is no doubt that these and the others were drowned. The ship was now reported leaking in No. 2 forward watertight compartment. All hands were immediately put on pumps, and the engine room pumps also got to work, but in spite of these the water gained, the ship having probably opened in one of her forward seams. The wireless was now reported partially destroyed, and as the water was gaining considerably forward, it seemed unlikely that the ship would remain afloat. We hove to, and it was decided to attempt to turn round and run for the nearest land. Considerable risk attended this manoeuvre, but as it seemed our only chance we decided to take it.

"Before attempting to turn round a quantity of fuel oil was distributed all over the deck, and allowed to run freely from the scuppers in order to reduce as much as possible the seas which were bound to strike us on the beam in turning. The turn was eventually accomplished without mishap, and a course set again for Shelburne.

HEROIC WIRELESS OPERATOR.

"In the meantime Mr. E. Clement, the young wireless operator from Hamilton, Ont., had been endeavouring up aloft to re-rig the wireless aerial leading-in at very considerable risk. I repeatedly warned him and told him to keep one hand for himself and one for the ship while doing the work, but he said: "It's got to be done and I'll have to take a chance of going over the side." He was successful in getting the aerial temporarily working and immediately this was finished our S.O.S. call was sent out, but was only sent once, as young Clement, who was trying to make a more permanent job of our temporary aerial, was most unfortunately washed overboard by a tremendous sea, the mast, aerial and most of the things on deck going with him."

"I can't speak too highly of the pluck of this youngster, who was only about 19," went on Lieut. Fry. "His heroism would no doubt have been recognized in some substantial form and he survived."

TORONTO MAN'S DEATH.

"It was not without great difficulty that the ship could now be kept running before the sea. Soon after this a tremendous sea was observed following the ship, and although everything was done to take the sea properly, the ship swung round and broached to, and thousands of tons of water poured over her decks. Chief Petty Officer Trenbee, who was at that time trying to cut the boats adrift, and Signalman McAuliffe were washed overboard by this sea, which took the boats and everything movable on the deck.

"Chief Engineer Wilkinson, who had just come up from below, was also washed overboard. Chief P. O. Trenbee displayed great heroism in trying to save the ship at the sacrifice of his life.

THE STOKERS' DEVOTION.

"In order to save the ship at this time it was absolutely imperative that the engines be kept going. The stokehold staff had naturally come up after the ship had nearly foundered to see what was going on, but to a man, at the request of the captain, they all returned to the stokehold, showing great pluck, as there is but one manhole entrance to the stoke-hold, which is screwed down while the men are below, and affords absolutely no chance for escape.

"Second Engineer Swarbrick now took charge, and, showing great skill, the engine-room staff again got the engines running, although the turbines were completely covered with water. The speed was now necessarily slow, being in the vicinity of six knots, as the engines were running under water and the propellers all tangled up with wire and wreckage which had gone overboard.

"The ship was now practically waterlogged, as the forward compartment was full and the engine room three parts full, leaving only about one foot of freeboard.

"It seemed the end. Were the engine room to fill completely the ship

Wheat Markets Closed Weak

Cash Prices Are a Little Easier —The Cattle Markets

Wheat markets were weak at the close yesterday, due in part to the action of the British Government in refusing to allow information as to wheat prices at Liverpool or as to visible supply. This action had the effect of checking speculative buying of futures. Cash prices are a little easier.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.12, track, bay ports; No. 2 $2.09; No. 3 $2.05 1-2; No. 4 $1.91; old crop 4c above new crop.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W. 72 1-2.

American corn—No. 3 72 1-2; shipment within 30 days.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 64c to 66c; No. 3 white 63c to 65c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lot, $1.78 to $1.80; No. 3 $1.76 to $1.78.

Peas—No. 2 nominal, car lots $2.40.

Barley—Good malting, $1.16 to $1.18; feed barley, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal, $1.25.

Rye—No. 1 commercial, nominal; No. 2 new, $1.35 to $1.37.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags $9.90; second patents in jute $9.40; strong bakers, in jute $9, Toronto.

Ontario flour—New winter, $7.30 to $7.50, in bags, track, Toronto, prompt shipment.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal; shorts $37; bran $32; feed flour, per bag, $2.80.

Hay—Baled, No. 1 track, Toronto, best grade new hay, car lots $13 to $13.50; No. 2 $9 to $11; straw $9.50 to $10.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday 48 cars, with 838 cattle, 185 calves, 597 hogs, and 117 sheep and lambs.

There was but a light run and business was comparatively quiet, with prices good and steady at Monday's advances. Sheep and lambs steady, but trade not quite so brisk.

There were very few hogs in and price quotations were somewhat mixed, but the market was firm and sales were made 15c to 25c higher than Monday's quotations.

Iron Acts Wonders on a Week, Run-Down Nervous System

Puts Roses in Pale Cheeks

Give you pep, vigour, and 100 p.c. more strength in 10 days.

Dr. Malmprise of Saskatchewan, advises people who are weak, run-down, anaemic and nervous, to start to-day to strengthen themselves by taking Iron for their blood. It has always been an understood fact that Iron was an excellent remedy for the blood, but owing to its constipating, and resenting effect it has been eliminated from use. Doctors have overcome this by combining the iron with phosphorus which forms a new iron and at the same time the phosphorus used acts as one of the greatest nerve tonics known to medical science. You now have what is known to your druggist as Bonised Phosphorus with Iron. Dr. Malmprise finds this to be four fold in action. It charges the system with new blood, strength, greater strength and a new digestion. Your stomach will now be ready for those big hearty meals that will be thoroughly digested. Start to-day and Phosphorus with Iron if you are thin, pale, weak, tired, run down, anaemic, nervous, etc., and in ten days you will be full of pep, bright, vigorous, alert, attaining the glow of happiness. Stop taking all sorts of worthless patent medicines, cheap laxatives, for what you imagine will cure kidney troubles, stomach pains, rheumatism, etc. What you want is good strong pure blood and strong nerves, making your system immune to all these everyday complaints.

Bonised Phosphorus with Iron, as spoken of here does not contain one atom of arsenic or strychnine, which is found so harmful in almost every tonic. Arsenic and strychnine act only as a temporary stimulant, making you feel better only for the time you are taking them; while Bonised Phosphorus with Iron goes to the root of the trouble, builds you up, strengthens your nerves, giving you a new lease of life. It is dispensed only by one druggist in each city. Agent for Peterborough is F. O Weese, Charlotte Street.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

CHAPTER XXIV.

After the low scream that came moaningly up from her breast, which was drowned in the echoes of her report, Mary Burton made no outcry. She no longer leaned limp and nerveless against the support of the doorway. Something had seemed to snap the cords of her paralysis and out of her blanched face her eyes stared wide and piteous. As the older banker staggered back she was quick to reach the motionless figure and to lift its head to her breast. Yet she did not really have to look, something fateful and unquestionable told her from the first instant that no human aid could avail—and that he would not speak again or move a muscle in life. His employees found her supporting the weight of his shoulders against her bosom and seeking to staunch with her handkerchief the flow of blood from the temple.

In one trivial respect the cruelities of her day of cumulative tragedy were abated. The steel-nosed bullet, even at that close range, had cut clean and spared his face, save for the trickle of red and the smirch of powder burn—such defacement as she could not have endured. The eyes, not yet glazed, gazed out with their accustomed resolute calm and the lips were firm, a little grim with the purpose of thwarting another's death, but it was still, though lifeless, a face without surrender.

The girl bent low, whispered into the ear which could not hear her, and then she raised her eyes, still holding his head against her shoulder, to see the little circle of stunned faces, and hear Fairley's voice announcing in broken syllables, but very quietly, "I was—attempting suicide—and he grappled with me."

She knew even while she waited the physicians that no spark of life remained and that this was the last time her arms would ever be closed around him in life or death, and she stood there, for the time upheld by a strength beyond her ordinary physical powers, strange inconsequential little fragments of talk, things he had said to her and she to him, were repeating themselves in her memory, and the exact inflections of his voice were renewing themselves in her ears.

Then as two physicians hurried in, closely heeled by two policemen, she surrendered her beloved burden to stronger hands, and, as she moved back with still no trace of tears in her wide eyes, the whole picture darkened and but of muscle and nerve and brain-cell went every vestige of autonomy and consciousness. They caught her as she fell and laid her on a broad upholstered window seat. When her eyes next opened hot pains were scorching her temples and her gaze turned instinctively toward the desk. It was empty of its human burden, and, save for the clerk who had that morning received her in the outer room and a physician, the private office was empty, too.

Following the hungry question of her mismated eyes, the doctor gravely nodded his head.

"It was instantaneous and painless," he said. Then he added, "We who have sent for your brother. He was not in his office, but—"

With the startling ferocity of an aroused tigress, Mary strove to rise, and make her way to the door, but the physician restrained her. "Not yet," he gently commanded. "You are hardly ready for exertion," and even before he had finished speaking her knees gave away and she sank back.

"My brother!" she whispered, and her eyes burned feverishly. "It will kill me to see him. I shall try to murder him—I—"

She was interrupted by noiseless opening of the door, and Hamilton Burton stood across the treshold of the enemy whose life he had that day broken.

He was no longer the Napoleonic Burton. For the instant he was stunned and pale. It was breaking on him that the price of conquest may be excessive. Even before this staggering news had reached him he had seen the headlines of the extras, had read his name coupled with the open and bitter denunciation of public hate.

The Value of Brains

Business success is the result of a careful and proper combination of CAPITAL and BRAINS and the lives of such men are a valuable asset to every Company, and as such should be adequately insured.

In proof of above Elbert Hubbard consulted a New York Financier who agreed to take a Bond issue for $100,000 at par, provided he held a Life Insurance Policy on Mr. Hubbard's life for a like amount. Why? Because Mr. Hubbard's brains were the CHIEF ASSET of the "Roycrofters." His mind was the THINK FACTORY, and the product of the business was the direct result of Mr. Hubbard's ideas. With Hubbard alive success was reasonably assured, but with Hubbard gone his loan would not be considered for a moment.

John Wanmaemeker and his son Rodman carry large amounts of Business Insurance, because it strengthens their credit and banks are beginning to require it.

Have you ever SERIOUSLY CONSIDERED what YOUR POSITION would be should your FIRM or Partnership lose through DEATH the BRAINS that have been the means of bringing success to your Institution. For a small sum you can guarantee again such misfortunes.

THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA have already saved hundreds from misfortune and Calamity, and will also protect you.

Don't say "Breakfast Food"—say "Shredded Wheat"—for while you no doubt mean Shredded Wheat, you may get one of those mushy porridges that are a poor substitute for the crisp, delicious shreds of baked whole wheat—that supply all the nutriment for a half day's work. Two Biscuits with milk or cream make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents.

Made in Canada.

At his shoulder stood young Carl Bristoll, as pallid as a specter. But the brother came quickly over, dropped to his knees by the girl's side. At the sight of her stricken face all the tenderness of family love leaped into a freshly blazing power in his heart until for the time it burned out the remembrance of every other thing. He thrust out his arms and said in a shaken voice, "Little sister, little sister!"

But with a cry as though for protection from the touch of something unspeakably foul, she threw both arms across her face and turned, shuddering, from his touch.

"Doctor," she besought in a voice of supreme loathing, "in God's name protect me from this murderer!"

She struggled to her feet and stood with her back to the wall, her breast heaving and her pupils blazing out of the death like pallor of a drawn face. Her hands lay flat against the wainscoting with spread fingers that convulsively twitched as if she were seeking to press back the solid partition and escape that way.

"Listen to me, or you will break my heart!" pleaded Hamilton tensely. "I thought it was a curable infatuation. If I had known that you cared so much—"

"Break your heart! I wish to God I could, but you have no heart," she screamed, and she swayed to the side, until had the doctor not supported her shoulder, she would have fallen, but her words flowed on in a fierce torrent. "You have broken my heart, and you have killed him. You know how much I cared. You are a monster but not an idiot. You have sacrificed a country to your one unspeakable Moloch of a god—I hope you—and your god—are satisfied."

For an instant some echo of the old dominance flickered in the man's face. "Edwardes fought and defied me," he said. "I punished—" But his sister interrupted with a wrath which nothing could stem:

"You have overreached yourself—you, too, will go down in this carnage—I shall pray God that you do—my God who is over your god; my God and his." Her voice became calmer, but her phrases were broken by gasping pauses. She spoke as though her God had commanded her to read this bitter indictment against her brother. "Because he shrined his honor above your insatiable greed you undertook to doom him. You have written a page into history....a page full of horror....you have made criminals of honest men....and suicides of brave ones. Now in the trail of your incendiary malice you cast his life—" her voice fell in a tortured sob—"the life....he so bravely fought for there in the hills....and after it you toss my heart!"

The financier moved a step forward and his lips opened, but the doctor laid a hand on his arm. "You must leave her, sir," he said quietly but firmly. "She is in no condition to stand more of this."

"How can I leave her like this!" remonstrated Hamilton and once more the physician raised his hand. "In such a case the doctor must be obeyed—unless—" his own voice hardened—"you are anxious to add even worse results to to-day's work."

Hamilton Burton turned. "Do what you can," he said. "I will send Paul." So he left the place, passing between the employees of the bankrupt firm of Edwardes and Edwardes in the anterooms.

At his elbow followed young Bristoll but when they had reached the ground floor the secretary halted his chief with an impetuous touch on the arm.

"It is of no use, sir—we separate here," he said passionately. "I must give you my resignation at once."

At another time such an announcement as this would have been greeted by this imperious master with swift acceptance and quiet irony. This day he had smitten his enemies and they had withered before his power. Results had differed in no respect from the outlines of his preparations and yet so poignantly personal had been the recoil that he found himself when his brain needed its most alert resourcefulness, inwardly admitting a new and strange sense of uncertainty—almost of uneasiness.

Once before for a weak moment he had felt that sagging of confidence—when Mary had left his house, but he had swiftly conquered it. He would as summarily conquer its repetition. His nerves were not such unconstrolled agents as to be shaken by the wild folly and accidents that grew out of weaker natures. All battlefields have black scars and pictures which are not pretty pictures. To pause and surrender to brooding over these details is to clip one's wings and dull one's talons. He forced a smile.

"As you please, Carl," he said "Though I had made the mistake of counting on your loyalty as dependable."

The young man answered with an effort.

"It's a hard thing to do. I have not just worked for the salary. I have made a hero of you and been very proud of even my small part in your career. It was as though I were a staff officer to a Man of Destiny."

"And now," the voice was bitingly satirical, "finding that the Man of Destiny cannot always fight with confetti and the blowing of kisses, you grow fainthearted."

"Put it as you like, Mr. Burton.... All I know is that, after to-day, I should no longer feel proud. I should feel like an accomplice in crime."

Hamilton Burton laughed. It was a short and not a pleasant laugh.

"Please yourself. To me no man is indispensable. Good- night."

Mary did not wait for Paul. As she drove up town with the physician, she had in her ears the shouts of newsboys heralding the death of Jefferson Edwardes and other deaths.

When she was in her own bed they mercifully gave her something which smoothed her brain into the black velvet softness of sleep. The future must tell whether her body and mind could ever be brought back to the harbour of health.

* * *

Hamilton Burton's lights burned late that night at his office, and up to them many baleful glances turned from the sidewalk below. The financier told himself that he was the same man that he had been, safeguarded by his star; but as he worked he soon found himself instinctively turning to the chair where Carl Bristoll should be and where now sat a more inept subordinate. Each such moment brought its tiny stab at his pride and self assurance and brain which he must concentrate kept straying to the disquieting vision of a grief-maddened girl leaning against the wall, with her fingers twitching in little groping gestures as lips rained accusations. To-day he had made a panic, but between the opening and the closing peals of to-morrow's gong each hour must be filled with the most exact and brilliant manoeuvrings.

All day to-day he had borne down the market on a scale unprecedented. All day to-morrow he must be in a position to reap the harvest he had sown—else he might find himself the victim of a trap which he had prepared at a mighty cost for others. No one knew so well as he how even his colossal strength had been strained with the titantic effort of pushing apart the masonry of the temple's pillars.

He had no doubts of the morrow, but these troubling remembrances came blurringly across the crystal of his brain.

Abruptly he took up his telephone, and rang his house number. "Yamuho," he said when he heard the sibilant, quaintly distorted voice of the Japanese from the other end, "ask Mr. Paul to wait for me there until I come in." Paul's music should soothe him.

"'Scuse, please," came the apologetic reply. "Mr. Paul, she no here. When she come Yamuro tell. Thanks."

It was late when the financier left his car at his own door, and demanded of Harrow, "Where is my brother?"

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WEALTH IN JAPAN.

Two Thousand Are Worth More Than Quarter Million.

There are 2,201 people in Japan who are worth more than $250,000, according to an informal census taken recently. As indicating the fact the number of wealthy people is constantly increasing in Japan it is to be noted that those having more than $250,000, or half a million men, has increased by 1,076 since the last investigation made in 1911. The ratio of increase is 115 per cent.

The aggregate wealth of the 2,201 rich is estimated at 3,470,000,000 yen or $1,735,000,000. Those with over ten million yen, or five million dollars, number 43, those with over 5,000,000 yen, or $2,500,000, 73, and those with over 1,000,000 yen or $500,000, aggregate 401. Classified by profession, business men head the list, totally 1,433. Then came land owners, directors of banks and other companies, factory and mine owners and peers. Twenty-seven per cent. of the rich live in Tokio and seventeen per cent. at Osaka.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THEIR PHYSICIAN

Copyright, 1917, by the S. S. McClure Company

"Now, then, young man," yawned Uncle Bill as he got slowly out of his easy chair and surveyed his oldest nephew, who had begun to show marked signs of unrest over his occupation of building block churches. "what shall we do to put in the rest of this rainy Sunday afternoon?"

"Let's play pingpong," Bobby suggested.

"You're not big enough yet. Guess again, or I'll pingpong you."

"Let's tell stories," ventured Bobby.

"All right, old sport. You begin."

"We-ell," drawled the youngster in the singsong of rote, climbing into Uncle Bill's lap, "once on a time, w'y, they wasn't an-ny little boys 'n' little girls, 'n' pretty soon they was Cain 'n' Abel. 'N' they didn't have an-ny sisters or brothers or nothin' 'cept just a papa 'n' mamma, nor no Uncle Bills or nothin'. 'N' their papa 'n' mamma were cross one time 'n' told their little boys to go 'n' play, 'n' Cain he played too rough, 'n' he killed his little brother with a jawbone of a jackass!"

"UNCLE BILL, WHAT MAKES YOUR EYES SO BIG 'N' SHINY?"

"No!" ejaculated Uncle Bill in horror. "Did he now, really?"

"Yes, sir. 'N' that's all of that story. Now you tell one, Uncle Bill."

"Well," began Uncle Bill, "once there was a lazy old uncle, and he had a nephew whom he loved very much."

"I know somebody else you love," remarked Bobby, wriggling. "Don't you, Uncle Bill?"

"Oh, lots of people," the young man agreed boldly. "Whom in particular, Bobby?"

"Miss Josephine," said Bobby in accents of firm conviction.

Uncle Bill shifted uneasily, but gave his nephew a hug.

"What made you think so?" he asked, with a studied air of indifference.

Bobby was silent, but his little mind busied itself wondering what caused Uncle Bill's chest to rise so high when he breathed the long breath he had just taken. It was intoxicating to feel oneself lifted up and let down exactly like being on a seesaw.

"Do it again, Uncle Bill!" he cried. "It's lot of fun."

Uncle Bill did not seem to hear. He was looking wistfully out of the window, and Bobby looked, too, but saw nothing.

"Do you love her, Bobby?" Uncle Bill inquired presently, smoothing the child's yellow hair. "Bobby, do you love Miss Josephine?"

"Yes," Bobby answered.

"Why? What makes you do you know?"

"W'y, Uncle Bill, the other day I fell 'n' hurted my knee, 'n' she—w'y, she kissed me 'n' made my knee all well."

"H'm!" muttered Uncle Bill. "Should think it might."

"Uncle Bill," asked Bobby, "did Miss Josephine ever kiss you?"

"Little boys shouldn't ask questions," was the quick reply, and a soft cheek was drawn close to a rougher one.

"I won't," Bobby agreed. "But did she, Uncle Bill?"

"Yes, little boy, she did."

"Well, but didn't it make you all well?"

"No."

"Did you hurt yourself?"

"Yes."

"Where—in your knee?"

"No."

"In your stomach?"

"There or thereabout."

"Did it hurt much?"

"I say, Bobby," exclaimed Uncle Bill, with more or less feeling, "let you and me talk of something else. You are a very little boy, and you ask questions that are painful. I don't"—

"Does it hurt you yet?" queried Bobby, thinking of stomachs.

"Yes. Now, Bobby, if I"—

"Why don't you go 'n' see Miss Josephine? She'll try again. Maybe—w'y, she'll have better luck."

"I can't."

"Why?"

"Oh, because. What a lot of questions you can ask and how little you know, Bobby!"

"I know the 'twos' in multiplication table anyway—so now. Miss Josephine taught me yistiday. See? I wrote 'em all down."

Bobby put a chubby hand inside his small jacket, where was a pocket, and proudly drew forth an assortment of documents.

"There it is," he announced after a careful search, spreading a paper on Uncle Bill's knee. "It's the 'twos,'" he remarked, indicating a tipsy column of hieroglyphics, the only legible character in which was the letter X. "That means 'times.'"

"A very interesting exhibit," observed Uncle Bill. "What is that letter you have with the—the bunch, Bobby? No, not the picture card, the letter—the one in the blue envelope. Let me see it. What don't boys have in their pockets? Why, bless me, it's for me!"

"W'y, w'y, Uncle Bill," stammered Bobby in a sudden spasm, "w'y, I forgot! Miss Josephine gived me that for you. She said to bring it right straight to you. I—I—forgot, Uncle Bill. W'y—w'y, Uncle Bill, what makes your eyes so big 'n' shiny? Oh, Uncle Bill! Don't—don't hug me so! You're hurtin' me awful!"

"Am I, old man?" Uncle Bill said in a queer voice. "Tell me, Bobby, when Miss Josephine kissed you, how did you feel?"

"All nice," answered Bobby, with full satisfaction.

Uncle Bill hugged his nephew again.

"Did that hug hurt you, Bobby?" he asked.

"Some," the child replied.

"Then you get an umbrella, Bobby, just as quickly as ever you can, and I'll take you on my back, and we'll run over and see if Miss Josephine can make us feel all nice again, as you call it."

"Are you going, too, Uncle Bill?"

"Yes."

"Right now?"

"The sooner the better."

"Yes," said childish philosophy sagely, "when you hurt anywhere, it's best to get it cured right away."

Frocks Are Quilted.

Quilted frocks for the wee ones are replacing smocked effects, for quilting is now the very last note in fashionable revivals. The quilting is done in tiny hand stitches through two layers of fabric and is added to the frock in the way of pockets, cuffs, round yoke sections, and trimming bands. Linen does not take as kindly to quilting as very fine cotton. All the quilted counterpanes of great-grandma's day were of patchwork made of scraps of cotton or muslin fabric, with usually a quilt lining of unbleached muslin. Frocks for little girls are now made of very fine cream colored cotton fabric, with quilted trimmings set in with piped edges in color. The effect is novel and very good.

POET AND TRAMP.

W. H. Davies Called the "Genius in a Doss-House."

Poets seem born to poverty, and the vicissitudes of their lives have provided stories far beyond the imagination of the novelist. Yet even Chatterton, the boy whose poetical genius has since been sung the world over, but who, penniless and starving, locked himself in his London garret, poisoned himself with arsenic, and was buried in the paupers' pit of the Shoe Lane Workhouse, did not suffer the prolonged hardships which Mr. W. H. Davies, the Welsh poet, has had to bear. To-day a Civil pension of £100 a year enables Mr. Davies to live and work in quiet retirement; but he has known what it is to tramp hundreds of miles without a penny in his pocket, earning a livelihood at odd jobs as he went along.

Mr. Davies' literary talent evinced itself when, at a very early age, he wrote a paper at Newport, Mon., where he was born, "In Defence of the Stage," which he read to a religious gathering, and which so startled the deacons that they prophesied for him an unhappy end. Young Davies, however, was not allowed to follow his literary bent. In due course he was apprenticed to a picture-frame maker, and became an efficient workman. The "wanderlust" seized him, however, and when, on the death of his grandmother, he found that he benefited under her will to the extent of a few pounds, he promptly paid for a passage to America, where he proceeded to tramp the States in search of those adventures and experiences which so appealed to him.

It was through trying to board a train that the poet, missing his footing, caught his foot in the step of the car and was dragged several yards, the accident necessitating the amputation of his leg at the ankle.

It was shortly after this that Mr. Davies returned to England, and with his belongings—a cotton shirt, a pair of stockings, and a handkerchief, wrapped up in brown paper, he reached London with a couple of sovereigns in his pocket. Then he settled down to literary work, composing verses, tragedies, and comedies in the kitchen of a doss-house. And as no one would publish his verses, he had a couple of thousand copies printed in pamphlet form, which he hawked from door to door.

In due course he got together a few pounds, which he promptly paid to a London printer to print and bind an edition of 250 copies of his poems. This cost him £19.

Once again, however, he was doomed to disappointment. Nobody would buy the book, and he was thinking of destroying the lot, when it got into the hands of Mr. A. St. John Adcock, the distinguished author and critic, who read it, went and interviewed Davies, and wrote a column article for an evening paper on how he found a great poet living in a common doss-house. And it was in this singular fashion that the genius of this Welsh writer became known.

HAD BOILS
FOR SIX MONTHS
B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work. I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but so well and favourably is it known that there are many imitations on the market. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

Kitchener Heir in Navy.

The new Earl Kitchener's only son and heir, Commander Henry Kitchener, will be styled Viscount Broome, after the family seat near Canterbury, Broome Park. Viscount Broome, who is nearly 40, has been a commander in the navy for several years and has acquired a reputation as a gunnery expert. He has an only sister, Norah, the wife of a captain of artillery. As Viscount Broome is unmarried the second in succession to the Kitchener peerage is now Lt. Henry Kitchener, of the Royal Flying Corps. This young officer, "K. of K.'s nephew, was engaged to be married last March, and the announcement of his betrothal was made on the same day as that of his sister, Philippa.

Silence Often Best Rebuke.

Because a fault exists is no reason that it should be pointed out with no regard to time or place. It might not be difficult to prove that there is wisdom in allowing persons to make mistakes unrebuked for the time, but such wisdom can only flourish in a mind strong enough not to accept the evil of the day as final.

No mother, for instance, really thinks that her little daughter of twelve or fourteen is going to be a lifelong slattern because she keeps her bureau drawers in a tumble and is often seen without proper buttons, nor does any mother believe that a lie on the lips of her little son condemns him to a life of shame.

The faults must be met, but if they are not met by instant fault finding, but rather by the inculcation of higher standards and better habits, the actual offense needs little comment. Indeed absolute silence after a misdemeanor is often a more severe rebuke than a storm of protest and correction.

To make this silence judicious we must first of all cultivate in ourselves a just perception of values and proportions. We must train ourselves when to see and when not to see, what to leave out and what to keep in our lives.

Charles Lever's Characters.

Whence did Charles Lever get his rollicking Irishman? Professor Oman in his preface to the reissue of William Grattan's "Adventures With the Connaught Rangers" discloses the secret. It was clearly, he avows, from the domestic annals of the old Eighty-eighth foot in peninsular days that Lever drew the greater part of the good stories which made the fortune of "Charles O'Malley." Many of the characters in that romance appear in the flesh in Grattan's reminiscences. Notably:

"The fame of the eccentric surgeon, Maurice Quill, was so great throughout the British army that the novelist did not even take the trouble to change his name. His colleague, Dr. O'Reilly, was almost as great an original. Many of the humors of Micky Free seem to be drawn from the doings of Grattan's servant, Dan Carsons."

"Comparing the 'real thing,'" Mr. Oman goes on, "with the work of fiction, one is driven to conclude that much of what was regarded as rollicking invention on Lever's part was only a photographic reproduction of anecdotes that he had heard from old soldiers of the Connaught rangers."—London Outlook.

KITCHENER'S RELIGION.

His Conduct at Cairo Proved a Real Tonic to That City.

Rev. J. H. Molesworth, late incumbent of All Saints', Cairo, writes as follows on Lord Kitchener's religion:

"No one could be long in his company without realising that he was a man who viewed life seriously. I may illustrate this from the effect he produced on society in Cairo, when he went there to take up his position as British Agent and Consul-General. Cosmopolitan places like the capital of Egypt, which are largely the haunts of pleasure, are often given over to a frivolity which is not seen in cities of commerce and business. There is frequently a relaxing of morals beyond what is witnessed elsewhere, and a general air of undisciplined, and it goes without saying that in such places Sunday and Sunday worship are at a discount.

"It would be foolish to assert that Cairo was free from these vices. But the coming of Lord Kitchener instantaneously wrought a change. He was known to be a man of unswerving devotion to duty, of disciplined life, of resolute purpose. Instinctively we all braced ourselves up, and it was as though a tonic had been administered to the place. So far as his work permitted, Lord Kitchener was regular and punctual in his church attendance, and this at once told beneficially upon the Sunday habits of the community.

"He was president of All Saints' Church committee, and I never remember his omitting to take the chair, even when hard pressed by State business.

"Earl Kitchener was indeed a type of that simple, manly, straightforward Christianity which we associate with the best English laity, which does not trouble itself indeed about subtle questions and, controversies but rests on the broad facts of revelation, and in simplicity practises its tenets."

WONDERFUL BILIOUS REMEDY ACTUALLY PREVENTS ATTACKS

There are two great causes of biliousness—they are constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken, they not only correct constipated bowels, but act upon the liver as well.

Quite unlike ordinary medicines, which purge and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the conditions which cause biliousness, and thus permanent benefit can be effected. No person who occasionally uses Dr. Hamilton's Pills will ever suffer from the headache, bad stomach or bilious complaint. Get a 25c. box today.

Averaged With Enemy.

There's a story going the rounds just now that shows how Austria was deprived of one of her fighting men.

A visitor to a West-End restaurant in London, being waited on by a particularly tall and fine-looking waiter with a foreign accent, asked the man his nationality.

"Oh, I'm a Hungarian."

"How comes it, then, that a big, strong fellow like you is not in the firing line?" asked the visitor.

"Well, sir, it's like this," replied the knight of the napkin, pointing to a brother waiter a few tables off. "You see that man? Well, he's a Serb, and we have what you call 'paired.'"

Best Nerve Specialist In England Was Consulted

But Nervous System Failed to Respond to Treatment Prescribed

Nervous disorders frequently result from injury to the nerves in accidents or because of the shock to the system.

The writer of this letter was injured in a mix-up with some colts, remained unconscious for three weeks, and in spite of continued treatment in hospital could not obtain restoration of the internal nerves which control the action of the digestive and other vital organs. He travelled to Europe and consulted England's greatest nerve specialist. Relief was only temporary, in spite of many treatments used.

His letter gives the facts briefly and tells how he was finally cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Can you imagine any more severe test of this great nerve restorative?

Mr. Henry F. Vean, Cedu Beach Malahwa, B. C., writes: "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has restored my nervous system and given me new health. Having met with a severe accident seven years ago, from which I was unconscious and which left my nerves in a very sore plight. I was treated by doctors galore and consulted one of the greatest nerve specialists in England, but nothing seemed to do me much good. Hypophosphites and, in fact, all and every kind of nerve mixture in almost every form was used, but gave with more than temporary benefit.

"But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has acted very differently, for it has built up my nervous system until I feel like my old self again. If this medicine will do for others what it has done for me, I shall not regret having written this letter. I have recommended the Nerve Food personally to many, and shall always esteem its great restorative value."

would sink. It was necessary to get some kind of temporary covering over the now-open engine room skylight down which every sea was running. I had left the bridge by this time. The engines were going but she would not steer but picked up her own course and ran fairly decently. In company with four seamen I tried to fix this temporary covering. We had succeeded completely, though all the men engaged were pretty severely knocked about, when another big sea hit us. I lost my hold, carried along the deck and smashed my face against the torpedo's propellers.

STEAMER SCARED AWAY.

"This was now about 10 o'clock on Tuesday evening. All hands were now engaged on the pumps, when the welcome lights of a steamer hove in sight. Although it would have been impossible to assit us in the sea that was running we fired rockets to attract their attention. The only result was that the ship immediately put out her lights and disappeared, as merchant ships are highly suspicious of anything unusual seen nowadays in the North Atlantic.

"The engines and pump brigade were kept going all night. By morning the sea had gone down somewhat but the turbine bearings were all frozen for want of lubrication and it was evident we could not get further without reducing the water in the engine rooms below the bearings of the turbines, so all hands were now transferred to the engine rooms and with buckets baled all that day (Wednesday) and that night.

"There was no fresh water in the ship, as it had been near where the leak occurred, and there was also no food, as it had all been destroyed by seawater, but ten dozen bottles of beer which belonged to the officers' mess proved an absolute godsend. The only half bottle of water we could find was by common consent reserved for the ship's bulldog, who did not seem to care for beer.

"On Thursday morning about eight o'clock, as the result of very strenuous efforts by all hands, the water was reduced, with the result that the engines were started again. The position now was found to be 120 miles south of Shelburne. The course was accordingly set, and the Shelburne lighthouse sighted about 9 a.m. that evening

"ARE WE DOWNHEARTED?"

"During the day several steamers were sighted, but they all showed great concern in making a quick get-away on spotting us, as we doubtless looked pretty much like a sub. in a half-sunken condition. We miraculously managed to make Shelburne harbour, the ship steering so badly that she sometimes took a complete cricle of her own accord.

"We eventually reached the wharf about 11 p.m., where every kindness and consideration was shown us by the people. As soon as we made fast a soldier on the wharf called out: 'Are we downhearted?' which was met with a simultaneous yell of 'No!' from all the crew."

Lieut. Fry was sent to Yarmouth hospital, and Seaman Chantler to Halifax. The Grilse is now being repaired at Halifax, and all the remaining men, according to Lieut. Fry, "are looking forward to rejoining the little ship when required."

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD.

Installation of Officers.

An interesting meeting was held in the W.O.W. Hall last night and the following officers were installed for the ensuing year, 1917:

P. C. C.—Robert H. Carr.
C. C.—Ernest S. Ivey.
Adv. Lt.—Maitland Wells.
Banker—Richard Waram.
Clerk—Fred Sutcliffe.
Escort—Edgar Lebar.
Watchman—Robert G. Symonds.
Sentry—Charles H. Cress.
Managers—John Penrose, Jos. Wm. Worth and Wm. Dummitt.

At the close of the Installation ceremony, Lawyer G. W. Gordon, a member of the Head Executive delivered a splendid address on the "Sound financial standing of our Order" and also complimented the members of Sherwood Forest Camp in general for the way they were showing the fraternalism towards each other in our city. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Gordon by Fred. Sutcliffe and seconded by Jos. Wm. Worth for his address which was carried unanimously. Refreshments were afterwards served by the ladies.

DUTCH TAKE OVER SUBS INTERNED DURING WAR

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Dutch Minister of Marine, J. J. Rambonnet, says, a Reuter despatch from The Hague, announces that because naval construction has been hampered by the war, negotiations have been opened by the British and German Governments with a view to Holland taking over interned submarines. The transfer of one British and one German submarine has thus far been arranged.

If one is to judge by the skirts seen in the smart New York shops there is a very strong tendency toward the panel front, and often it is made prominent by being formed of contrasting goods.

The model illustrated is in six gores, designed according to the latest fashion notes. It is an excellent model for either one or two materials. At back below a yoke that is simulated, the plaited effect is a noteworthy development; at front the button decoration adds to the yoke effect and below it the front gore, which may be of separate material, prominently marks the panel—this is the distinctive feature of the garment.

Those who make over their clothes will find this a most desirable model for using goods left over from another season or transforming a skirt of different design. One may have something "striking" on really dignified lines by developing this in serge and satin, silk and velvet or similar combination.

The skirt pattern, No. 8,027, cuts in sizes 24-32 waist. To make in size 24 requires 8¾ yards 44 inch material, with 1¼ yards 22 inch silk for panel front; or 4⅞ yards of all one material.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

MR. BERT ARMSTRONG ORDAINED PRIEST

Mr. Albert E. ("Bert") Armstrong, a resident of Peterborough for a number of years, while engaged in the engineering department of the Trent Valley Canal, was ordained to the priesthood by Archbishop Gauthier in Ottawa on Sunday. He had many friends in this city, to whom the news of his consecration will be of more than passing interest. Father Armstrong forsook a promising career, for which he had equipped himself, and after two years at the Grand Seminary, Montreal, began his theology and other studies at St. Augustine's, Toronto, when it opened. The Ottawa Citizen refers to the ordination, in part, as follows:

Yesterday was a big day in the history of the Blessed Sacrament church. At eight o'clock mass His Grace, Archbishop Gauthier, raised to the priesthood, Albert E. Armstrong, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Armstrong, of 152 Carling avenue, and grandson of the late Senator Costigan. The ordination ceremony, which was impressive, extended over an hour, and was the first of its kind to take place in the Blessed Sacrament parish, and the church during the ceremony was thronged to the doors.

The Rev. Father Armstrong was the first student to complete his theological course at the newly constructed seminary of St. Augustine's, Toronto, and he only came from there on Saturday night for his ordination.

Yesterday afternoon a private dinner was served at his father's home, 152 Carling avenue, at which were present several of the clergy and his brother, H. Armstrong, and Mrs. Armstrong's brother, Mr. H. A. Costigan, of New Brunswick.

In the church last evening at 7:30 the young priest offered the benediction. As yet he has not been appointed to any parish.

Father Armstrong was a very popular member of the Blessed Sacrament parish and on the eve of his ordination was the recipient of many beautiful presents which he will use in his priestly office.

WEAK, AILING CHILD

Made Strong By Delicious Vinol.

Lakeport, N.H.—"Our little girl 8 years of age was in a debilitated, rundown condition and had a stubborn cough so she was weak and ailing all the time. Nothing helped her until we tried Vinol. Then her appetite increased and she is strong and well, and I wish other parents of weak, delicate children would try Vinol." — Geo.-A. Collins.

This is because Vinol contains the beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates, and glycerophosphates which a weak and rundown system needs.

Questionable Character.— The Sergeant halted the new sentry opposite the man he was to relieve. "Give over your order," he said. The old sentry reeled off the routine instructions with confidence, but one of the special orders baffled him. "Come on, man," said the sergeant impatiently. "On no account," stammered the sentry, "are you to let any questionable character pass the lines, except the Colonel's wife."

Dropped Dead.

Havelock citizens were greatly shocked on Friday evening on hearing of the sudden death of Mr. Matthew Foley, who dropped dead while on duty from heart failure. Deceased was employed by Mr. F. J. Squire, as clerk and delivery man, and while engaged in loading some bags of feed in the store house about 5 p.m. dropped dead. When found three bags of feed were lying across him, and it was thought at first that he had been smothered, but Dr. Holdcroft was called in, and after examining the body, found that death was due to heart failure.

Deceased was 68 years of age, and has resided in Havelock for a number of years, moving here from Norwood. During his residence here he had won many warm friends by his kind manner and actions. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow and eight children, Mrs. Henry of Peterborough, Mrs. McGregor of Detroit, Laura of Toronto, Helen and Elsie at home, Vincent of Toronto, Leo of Peterborough and Pte. Foley, now at the front. To them the heartfelt sympathy of the citizens is extended in their sad bereavement."

The funeral took place on Monday at 9 a.m. services being held at "Our Lady of Mt. Carmel church," thence to the Catholic cemetery for burial.

HAVELOCK RECRUITS

The latest recruit in Havelock is Mr. Jas. A. Freeman, a C.P.R. fireman. Mr. George Pymer of Cordova has also enlisted in the 247th Battalion. Mr. W. O. Buchanan, son of Mr. A. M. Buchanan, and who has but lately returned from his homestead at Claydon, Sask., has also signed up with the 247th.

The farm stock and implements of Mr. Wellington Hart were sold by auction on Saturday, January 6th at the residence of Mr. Freeman Hart, Round Lake.

OMITTED WAR STAMPS.

Three Stratford Merchants Fined $50 and Costs Each.

STRATFORD, Jan. 9.— Three local merchants, James Bremner, A. Searth and H. J. Near were yesterday afternoon fined $50 each and $3 costs for selling articles subject to war tariff without affixing the required war stamps. Bremner sold a bottle of Florida water, value 25 cents; Searth ten cents' worth of health salts, and Near a bottle of Castoria for thirty cents. Inspector Dakir, Inland Revenue Officer, laid the charges. Bremner runs a notions store and the other two dealers fined are grocers.

WOMEN SHOULD GET THIS HABIT AS WELL AS MEN

Don't eat bite of Breakfast until you drink glass of water

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty, or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," 'brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE IS SPREADING OUT OVER A VERY WIDE FRONT

Czar's Troops Are Attacking the German Line on a Three Hundred Mile Front---Berlin Admits the Loss of an Island in the Dvina River--Russians Are Gaining Ground--Berlin Claims Further Gains in Roumania.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, January 10.—(Special Cable) — A brief phrase in to-day's Berlin official statement indicates that the Russian offensive which first manifested itself in the Riga region has now spread over a front of approximately three hundred miles. Berlin speaks of the Russian attacks as extending from the coast to Lake Narocz, and yesterday the Germans admitted losing an island in the Dvina River, north of Dvinsk. Lake Narocz is about seventy-five miles south of Dvinsk, and only a little further north than Vilna. The Russians are, therefore, sturdily assaulting the German line from the Gulf of Riga to the Vilna region, a front which in itself equals in distance the whole front held by the Italians against the Austrians.

Russians Forced Back at Sereth River

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, January 10.—German forces have gained a footing on the left bank of the Hutna River, in Roumania, and have forced the enemy to give up positions behind that river and retreat behind the Sereth line, it was officially announced to-day.

A REPORT FROM BERLIN.

BERLIN, January 10.—An Italian submarine destroyer was recently sunk off Corfu with an army staff on board, said Basler Anzeiger newspaper.

British armoured cruiser Shannon, of 14,800 tons, built in 1905, was sunk last November by a mine explosion, according to a statement from the same newspaper.

The London Admiralty has not confirmed this.

Calm On the Entire Front, Says Paris

Examiner Special:

PARIS, January 10.—"The night was calm on the entire front," the French official statement asserted to-day.

Consolidated Replaces The Country School

Lincoln, Neb., January 8.—"Take a good, lingering look at the little red school house, for so far as Nebraska is concerned it is going. By the end of another generation it will be little more than a memory, a vanishing landmark."

That in effect is the advice and conclusion of State Superintendent of Schools Thomas in one of a series of reports he has made in turning the office over to his successor.

Supt. Thomas says the people of the state should look upon it with reverence and its leave taking with regret, because it was the beginning and the making of a new era. The little red school house, lonesome and boxlike on the prairies of Nebraska, he says, must go, because it has had its day. In its place is springing up the consolidated school and the community centre.

The closing weeks of Thomas' administration has witnessed the disappearance of five of the district schools—one in Washington county, which is merged with a nearby larger school, and the consolidation of four in a southeastern Nebraska district, two in Richardson, and two in Nemaha county, the four to form what will be known as the Bratton union, an educational institution which will be ready for occupation the coming week.

The Bratton union is a large two story building with schoolrooms, an auditorium, and a basement fitted for a gymnasium and for domestic science, and manual training work.

The advent of the automobile, the community centre, and the consolidated school has brought about the end of the district school and the red schoolhouse.

MANY OF MILITARY AGE LEAVE CANADA

Figures compiled by the immigration department show that immigration from Canada into the United States during the past few months has surpassed that of any period in the country's history. Kingston and district has contributed her share to the "skedaddler" roll, and reports here show that in the last three months many of military age have left for the United States. Some go for their health, others to seek wealth, but none admit that the fear of enlistment has sent ice chills spineward. The majority, however, are suffering from a bad cold, which, strange to say, has settled in their feet.

Anniversary of Penny Postage

Today marks the seventy-seventh anniversary of the inception of penny postage in Great Britain. It was some time later before it was introduced in Canada. Penny postage was introduced in Great Britain on January 10th, 1840.

"ROUGH ON RATS" THE PROBABLE POISON THAT KILLED BOY

Howard Clarke, Park Street, Ten Years Old, Died on Dec. 22nd—Jury Enquired Into Cause of Death

ARSENICAL POISONING

That Howard W. Clark died, according to the evidence, of arsenical poisoning from some source your jury has been unable to determine; but there is strong presumption that he obtained it from rat poison placed on bread for rats.

Such was the verdict presented to Coroner T. N. Greer, M.D., last night in the police court room, by the jury that enquired into the death of Howard W. Clark, the ten year old boy who died at his home, 46d Park street, on Friday, December 22nd. The jury was composed as follows: W. J. Stacey, foreman; J. E. Firth, H. P. Beal, Wm. Menzies, And. Brown, S. Houlihan, T. Borland, R. J. G. Sutherland, William Lytle, Adelard Guerin, J. Malane, and Elrio White.

DR. McCULLOCH.

The evidence of the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark, and of Drs. McCulloch and Eastwood, who performed a post mortem examination was heard. Dr. McCulloch, whose testimony was corroborated by Dr. Eastwood, stated that he believed death was caused by an overdose of arsenic. The boy's body was beginning to grow cold when the doctor arrived, but the symptoms described by the mother, the convulsions and other signs, were those of arsenical poisoning. Mrs. Clark had stated in her evidence that she thought that it was only a stomach disturbance, resulting from soup made from canned tomatoes, but afterwards in conversation with the doctor recalled having placed some "Rough on Rats" in a closet. She had mixed it with jam and spread it on two pieces of bread which she had placed on top of a hat box. Dr. McCulloch stated that only one piece of the bread was found, and there were no crumbs or other likely evidences of a mouse having eaten it. Dr. McCulloch stated that he had received word last night from Toronto prior to the inquest, that the report on the examination of the internal organs disclosed the presence of arsenic in quantities in the viscera of the child. By the qualifying expression "in quantities" Dr. McCulloch explained as being sufficient to cause poisoning.

Mrs Clark had told him that she put out the bread with the poison on it the previous night and had warned Howard about it. He had no occasion for going into the closet, except for picture books. His wraps were not there. The regular dose of arsenic was from 1-60 to 1-50 of a grain. "Quantities" would be more than that. Dr. McCulloch said he had been Clark's family physician for four or five years. The bread was on a hat box about ten or twelve inches from the floor. The boy had become ill about noon and died shortly before Dr. McCulloch arrived that evening at nine o'clock. The father said when he called for the doctor that he did not regard the child as in a serious condition.

It was assumed from the evidence that Howard Clrak had picked up a piece of the bread with its inviting jam covering, and was poisoned by the arsenic in the "Rough on Rats" it contained. The mother and the father, according to the evidence, regarded the illness as the effect of soup that he had eaten and were not unduly alarmed. This was indicated by the fact that the father did not leave home for a doctor until the boy was near to death.

SAVE YOUR PAPERS

The Ladies' Patriotic League of Ashburnham beg to announce their intention of again making a collection of papers, old books, magazines, etc., in about three months' time. The League takes this opportunity of thanking the citizens who saved papers for them in the past, and solicit their further efforts in the next collection, the date of which will be announced later.

Anyone desirous of having their papers taken away before the general collection will please telephone Mrs. R. H. Parsons, Mrs. G. L. Hay, or Miss Lizzie Scott, Ashburnham.

Another Peterboro' Boy Mentioned In Gen. Haig's Despatches

Sergt. Alex. Gillespie Recently Reported Seriously Ill is Honoured---Lieut. Jesse Ketchum, Formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Tells of an Exciting Experience at the Front---Lieut. Crisp Reported a Prisoner--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Another Peterborough boy has been mentioned in despatches by Sir Douglas Haig in the person of Sergt. Alex. Gillespie, whose name appears in the last list issued by the Commander-in-Chief of the British Army. Sergt. Gillespie, who only a few days ago was reported seriously ill, went overseas with a Canadian Pioneer Battalion. He is a well known local boy, whose exploits on the rugby field are well remembered by Peterborough followers of the game.

Lieut. Jesse Ketchum, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and is now at the front with the 20th Battalion, gives a vivid account of a recent adventure in no man's land in a letter to a member of The Examiner staff. This time last year Lieut. Ketchum was playing hockey with the 93rd Intermediates—now he is in the thick of things on the western front.

He says: "I was chosen with a small party for patrol duty in no man's land, and it was my first experience of that kind. We ran into a Hun patrol out there and had some fight with bombs and revolvers. We got the worst of it, sorry to say. I discovered the Huns coming from behind us to attack, and with our party and went after them. It was one grand fight, bombs all around us. One let right at my feet but I did not get hit. Two of our party were badly wounded, and when the fight was over here I was with moving to get that man on my back and go for our wire. When I got not a person around but one wounded man. Believe me I had some tall about 200 yards away in front of our own wire I found I could not get through.. Just as I was picking the wounded man up to carry him across no man's land the Huns opened their machine guns on us but failed to hit us. Finally I found a hole in our wire and got in."

Lieut. Ketchum adds: "I see where Dick Crisp (former machine gun officer of the 93rd, who went to the Royal Flying Corps, has been taken prisoner in the flying corps."

TO-DAY'S ORDERS

Daily orders by Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, Commanding 247th Batt., C. E. F.

Orders for Wednesday, Jan. 10th, 1917:

1. District Orders No. 42: ((Extracts from). It is published for the information of all concerned, that attention has been drawn to the fact that numerous soldiers who have been given employment by the Department of Militia and Defence, and who are indirectly employed in connection with Military work, such as with the Military Hospitals Commission, Patriotic Fund, etc., are in the habit of wearing uniform.

As such men are liable to arrest under the provisions of the Order-in-Council, relating to the wearing of uniform, instructions are to be issued that in future no man who has been discharged from the Canadian Expeditionary Force, may be permitted to wear military uniform without special authority, in writing, from competent military authority, (i.e., District Headquarters.)

2. Recruiting Competition:

Silver Cup, presented by the Mayor of Kingston:

The Unit as undermentioned, who secures the greatest number of recruits (not counting transfers) between the 1st of January and the 30th of April, 1917, will become sole possessor of this cup. Said cup will have the number or designation of the unit engraved on the shield and attached to the base stating number of recruits obtained during the specified period.

The officer commanding hopes that officers, N.C.O.'s and men will vie with each other in bringing up the recruiting average of this unit, so that the winning of the cup may be possible for this Batt.

3. Duties: Orderly Officer for Wednesday, Jan 10, Lt. T. Quinn.

Next for duty: Lt. Strickland.

A. E. Brittain, Adjt.,
247th Batt., C. E. F.

The Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club have been taking up the matter of "honourably discharged" badges, with the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The last quota of soldiers home from England were not given these buttons which are very similar in design to the Active Service badges. The following letter received by Pte. C. J. Wilcox of the local Returned Soldiers' Club gives the reason.

Dear Sir,—Replying to your letter of the 19th re honourably discharge badge, I regret to inform you that the issue of these badges was discontinued some months ago.

The "Active Service" badge is given only to those men who have been in France.

If you will apply to the director of recruiting for your district he will advise you re the government badge shortly to be issued.

E. M. McNAUGHTON.

Wallace Kennedy of Peterborough who enlisted with the 52nd Battery, C.F.A., has been awarded a commission in England, and has passed his examinations successfully at Witley Camp.

Suicide Was Not the Man

Examiner Special:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 10.—B. C. Brown, a travelling salesman who was passing the Wilton apartment in Philadelphia at the time the murderer of Marie Colbert a corset model, leaped from the apartment window, said positively to-day that Bernard W. Lewis, who suicided later, was not the man he saw leaving the Wilton apartments.

Conference Opened This Afternoon

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The conference between the Government and Provincial representatives in connection with returned soldiers, opened to-day at two-thirty. The Provincial delegates were lunched by Sir Robert Borden at noon.

This afternoon Hon. Robert Rogers stated that no definite settlement on the western coal difficulty had been arrived at. He appeared to be hopeful, however, of early success.

FUNERAL HELD THIS MORNING

The funeral took place this morning of the late Thomas Laplante, first to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery. The funeral was largely attended. The pallbearers were Messrs. T. B. McGrath, L. D. Letellier, Clement Gordon, John Clancy, John Grady and D. Donoghue.

Mr. Frank Laplante of Rochester, eldest son of the deceased, was in the city attending the funeral.

Fifteen Years Of Wedded Life

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Rooke, Prince street, celebrated their crystal wedding anniversary last evening. About twenty-five relatives and friends gathered and an enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Rooke were the recipients of a large number of presents.

Brings A Message From Boys At Front

PTE. GEORGE COWAN RETURNS HOME WITH LEFT LEG MISSING

Was Blown Up By Shell in Engagement in Which 21st Battalion Was Decimated

WEARS OTHER SCARS

With his left leg amputated close to his hip and bearing other and less conspicuous scars of battle, Pte. George Cowan, of the 39th Batt. arrived home yesterday evening at 5.30 o'clock unannounced and unwelcomed, except by his wife and children and several friends. He walked with the aid of crutches, and after a two weeks' stay at his home on Chamberlen street west, he will return to Toronto to be fitted with an artificial leg.

Although he went over nearly two years ago with a draft of the 39th Batt., Pte. Cowan has been in the 6th, 8th, 10th and other battalions, and when he was wounded was with the 21st Batt., when it was nearly cut up. In that engagement he was blown into the air by a shell. He underwent four or five operations on his left leg. Pieces of it had to be removed at different occasions until only a short stump remained.

Besides this disability Pte. Cowan has parts of three fingers missing, and scars in both arms above the elbow with a piece of shell still remaining in one arm.

Pte. Cowan landed at Halifax on January 2nd, and has been at a Toronto hospital since. He brought home with him a gift pipe he received when leaving Peterboro. He clung to it with his teeth when he was shot into the air and afterwards finding it still with him decided not to part with it.

An explanation of his return unannounced is found in the fact that Mrs. Cowan did not receive his telegram until four o'clock yesterday afternoon that he was coming to Peterboro from Toronto.

Big Fire in Quebec City

Special to The Examiner:

QUEBEC, Jan. 10.— The business section of this city suffered another big fire this morning, when damage to the extent of $125,000 resulted in a blaze which started in the wine shops of Turcotte and Co. and spread to other premises.

THE WEATHER

A decided change in temperature has occurred during the past 24 hours. This morning at 8 o'clock the thermometer stood at 2 deg. above zero. Later on it went to 2 deg. below, and all day it has hovered around the cipher mark. A strong wind from the north makes the cold severely felt.—W.P.

NOT GUILTY.

In the course of last night's inquest, which showed that the death of the lad Clark did not result from ptomaine, but other, poisoning, Coroner Greer made some apposite remarks. He said it was regrettable that the press was so ready to ascribe the causes of deaths from suspected poisoning, to ptomaines, thus, as had been done in the present case, by printing erroneous statements, doing an injustice to, and discrediting tinned fruits, meats, etc. While the coroner was amply justified in referring to the offence of the press, he would have done no injustice by being more discriminating. While the Examiner does not claim exemption from the weaknesses of its class, it is only justice to ourselves to say that in this case the Examiner was not an offender and should not be classed with a contemporary that specifically earned the coroner's condemnation. Nor should the Examiner be punished by exclusion from the meetings of the Utilities Commission for the indiscretion and bad faith of which, not it but another, was guilty.

"Don't See Us Stuck" Say the Canadians in France—Capt. Burnham Talks of Conditions Overseas.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

The following letter has been received by The Examiner from Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who has just returned from Europe:

Having been asked to give some little account of my experiences since last July, I am very glad to do so if they are of interest or can serve any good purpose. We landed last Tuesday from a Cunarder which had just come from Salonika and had missed there the fate of her sister ship by a narrow margin. We were sixteen days at sea and travelled about 4,000 miles passing boats recently torpedoed and pursuing a zig-zag course. One day out from Ireland we were stopped by a French cruiser and our course was immediately changed going south as far as the latitude of Florida. We were more than a week over-due and war vessels were sent out to meet us as they said, but we did not see any.

The enemy submarines soon learned the despicable trick of sending out S.O.S. signals, and when rescuers flew to answer torpedoed them. As a consequence no ship takes any notice of wireless messages, and people out in boats can get to land the best way they can. We had 250 wounded men aboard coming home for further treatment and discharge. Fifty of them were minus either a leg or an arm. I had charge of one of the ships boats which were kept slung over the side with the list of the ship after mine or torpedo strikes it, and with half of my 60 passengers unable to help themselves in such an event, and with ships sinking in from 3 to 10 minutes after being struck, the prospects were not at any time cheering.

Still one gets used to these things when once one makes up the mind to it just as we did at the front where large shells that shook the earth and nearly shook our teeth out exploded within a hundred yards of us and sent up a houseful of clay, failed to shake our nerves. Such is the nerve of a politician. Our visit to the front was most interesting and complete. We explored Ypres which is a mass of ruins, and the region of Hill 60, and the Sanctuary Wood. The Germans were shelling it and the battle raged round about just as before. Ypres may come and go, but the glory of the Canadians there and at Givenchy (where Lt.-Col. Charles Ackerman was wounded) and Festubert, will never fade. The general who failed to send up reinforcements to them is now wandering about England unemployed. At the Vimi Ridge and Souchez where no less than three of our divisions hold the line, I visited the firing line, the front trenches, and went out into the foremost sap and into the observation post where 40 yards away I saw Germans in their trenches looking past sandbags for any unlucky wight who might stick his head up. The minenwerfers which the Germans send up high in the air to fall near by on the trenches exploded with appalling force and nearly shook our heads off. But the only sound that hurts the ear is that of the 18-pounder which is sharp and high-pitched. When we went down to the Somme on the forward line the shells fell in some cases very near us, but it is impossible to see things as one must see them if it is to be from start to finish, from Canada to the very face of the foe, unless all these things are taken as a matter of course just as the troops take them. We, of course, saw plenty of tanks and examined them. We saw all the generals and talked with them from the Corps Commander-in-Chief down.

We talked with the brave lads in the trenches, and General Currie told me next morning that one hour after I left a certain front trench it was raided by the Germans. Eight of the lads I had been taking to were killed, fourteen wounded, and the remaining men of the 20 held the trench with a Lewis machine gun! That is the sort of stuff our lads are made of.

I explained to them that if we were to get more recruits there must be a message from the boys in the trenches, and they have sent one by me. On board ship when I told the wounded lads about it they asked to be allowed to sign, and it was worth a King's ransom to see them hobbling up at the double to put their names down in so good a cause. Two hundred of them were able to sign this appeal or message which I am preparing for publication and use in the recruiting campaign. There is a vast deal to tell, but it would take too long, and what Canada wants, and must have, is recruits, not talk.

The boys at the front say: "Don't see us stuck," and stuck they must be if you do not prepare to reinforce them by next September.

RECOGNITION.

It is noticed by press reports that among other places Brantford and Windsor opened their inaugural council meetings with prayers. Whether this is due to piety only, or to deeper religious sentiment, it is an encouraging sign. A man who by even formally religious acts or attitude recognizes the fact of divine rulership in his life is still within the zone of hope. Why, indeed, should not city councils as well as parliaments have prayers? In this terrible time of testing, the sense of the vanity of the help of man comes over us all, and there is a greater inclination to put trust in and invoke the alliance of the divine. If we are a Christian people; if we at all believe that the Almighty Father exists, that the principles He represents have their origin in Him; if we believe as we say that this war is a fight of Christianity against the powers of darkness, we are not consistent but merely hypocritical, if we do not by our actions show that we believe in, trust to, and depend upon divine aid.

THE SWORD OF DAMOCLES

Hunters of big game tell us that a wounded anaconda is more dangerous, more capable of doing injury in his death struggles, than perhaps when in possession of his natural strength. Germany in the desperation of her dying struggles, shows signs of new energy of "frightfulness" and outrage. Not content with sinking allied ships and committing wholesale murder in the process, she has adopted flat piracy. Content before this with merely sinking ships and their cargo and crews and passengers, she is now seizing—stealing—the cargoes of neutral shipping. She claimed a sort of excuse for her other forms of outrage at sea, but there is nothing but black-flag piracy in stealing the cargoes of neutral ships.

The one redeeming feature of this latest display of Germany's utter degeneracy of morals is the indication it gives of Germany's consciousness, of the desperate character of her prospects in this war. She feels and knows herself beaten, but is determined to make the inevitable victory of the allies as bloody and costly as possible. Another good thing about something utterly bad, is the stiffened impulse Germany's attitude of frightfulness gives to renewed and more aggressive measures to destroy the spirit by destroying the fact of power to implement it. We must all do more, do our most to help strangle the military power of Germany and bring her to stern reckoning.

The appeal comes to us in Canada with intensified emphasis. We must turn out more and more munitions, and we must provide more and more men to use them. The whole citizenship is called upon. The call is not only for recruits at for military service, but for recruits of all kinds. Those who cannot fight must do their share in their own way.

If Germany is allowed to triumph in her damnable enterprise of destruction, the blow will fall upon us. "World domination," the German dream, if accomplished, will include among the first Canada, to be subjected to the tender mercies of the Teuton conqueror if he is permitted to prevail.

We must smash as we have done in Canada, do more. We must mobilize all our forces. One means of doing this is through national registration. We must accept that as a present vital fact. We must not argue. It is not a question of what better and more direct means might have been employed. The duty is to accept and make the most and best of the method now presented. There should be universal cooperation in making the registration complete, for its effectiveness depends upon its completeness. All the help we can give in men and munitions or in other ways is part of the national service— links in the chain that is destined to bind the German giant of militarism. We all want to see the war end. It will end by the destruction of Germany's military power to outrage and destroy, if we contribute our share, each in his or her own way, to the eclipse that is impending; if we help cut the hair that holds the sword of Damocles, menacing over the head of the Hohenzollern bandit.

IS IT RIGHT?

At a time when the Premiers of Ontario and Quebec, Tory and Grit; at a time when patriotic Canadians of both races, and both provinces, irrespective of party considerations, are striving to better the commercial, social and citizenship relations between the people of Ontario and Quebec—when these splendidly patriotic efforts are being made, does it seem right that the Dominion Government should help the dividing work; should retain in its ranks, and promote in and to its ranks, rank Nationalists? Hon. Mr. Blondin, of flag-shooting fame, has been advanced from the nominal portfolio of Secretary of State to the highly important office of Postmaster-General; Devigny, another Nationalist, is taken into the Cabinet, and Patenude, former Minister of Inland Revenue, is made Secretary of State. The Nationalist succession in the Borden Cabinet is sacredly guarded. Nationalism is not allowed to lose a fraction of its grip on fat offices, while loyal supporters of the Empire, and loyal supporters of the Government, have to stand by wondering, and see the enemies of the Empire feed successively and comfortably, with no fear of dispossession at the public crib.

This influence of Nationalism has been the dominant force in the Borden Cabinet, from the day the government was formed, five years ago, and the price of Nationalist support was bought by the government consenting to the destruction of the idea and fact of a Canadian navy.

Why is this sinister influence allowed to mar the Borden Cabinet? We all know, for it has been proclaimed from the house tops, that Nationalism is anything but national or imperial. It is a doctrine of negation—it denies that Canada owes anything to Great Britain, it denies that Canada has any responsibility in respect of helping Britain or the Empire in her wars. It is, and has been, a hostile element to recruiting, especially in the Province of Quebec.

And yet it is retained as an antagonistic influence to national effort to do the national duty at the present. The Government is very properly demanding extraordinary response to an extraordinary call to national service. From the Prime Minister down the call comes for a united—altogether—effort to help forward the fortunes of this war. Yet the Government perpetuate the gruesome paradox of asking popular response to an appeal from a government that contains, official authority that has preached and still preaches he doctrine that we must not—have no duty, no obligation—to contribute, especially in the way of manhood, to Britain's success in war in a righteous cause. The government's ringing appeal to national service has the machinery of its application placed in the hands of the Nationalist Postmaster-General, the man who declared that we owe nothing to the English or the flag—"we had to shoot holes through it to breathe the air of liberty."

Does this pattering with treason, this enthroning of treason in high places, create conditions that favour enthusiastic national response to national cooperation in promoting the success of the war?

The adverse effect such conditions have had on national service may not be reducible to detailed record; and it speaks highly for the patriotic spirit of Canadians that in spite of this they have made a magnificent response to the call of duty; and, Canadians will continue to respond to the pressing need of the hour, national and individual cooperation. The people are big enough to see above and beyond—to look over, if not altogether overlook, the shifts of partizanship to protect party interests even at the expense of national efficiency and national interests. Is it right? Is Nationalism in the Borden Government, that denies the duty of helping in the war, an inspiring influence in meeting the appeal of the government to the people to strain every muscle to help Britain in her hour of crisis?

THE POOR WOMAN'S LAWYER.

During and after the American Civil War a horde of pension lawyers arose, who filled the halls of Congress with clamourings for larger and larger pensions to their clients.

In Canada, so far, there has been no such development. The Canadian Patriotic Fund has acted for the woman bereft of her soldier husband, and has set in operation all machinery necessary to secure her the pension a grateful nation is proud to give to her. It has constituted itself the poor woman's lawyer, her pension agent, her guide and friend—and all in the name of Patriotism, without money and without price.

BRITAIN'S MEASURELESS MONEY RESOURCES FOR WAR WAGING MEASURES

When nearly $8,000 million in new money was subscribed in Britain to the war loan of 1915, Mr. McKenna, then the Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared the amount to be "far and away beyond any amount ever subscribed in the world's history." So it was at that time. No belligerent nation has since equaled that performance. The last German war loan, the fifth of the kind, brought subscriptions of $9,980 million; but that amount consisted largely on conversions, re-subscriptions and of loans advanced by Government agencies. France subscribed nearly $2,200 million of new money to the "loan of victory" last Spring. None of these loans, even that in Britain almost two years ago, will approach in magnitude the new loan to be announced on Thursday by the British Treasury.

There are British Treasury bills outstanding of more than $5,500 million, exchequer bonds of $2,500 million and former war stock, on a 4 1-2 per cent. basis of $4,500 million. Since the new loan will clear the market of the Treasury bills, the Exchequer bonds, and most of the 4 1-2 per cent. stock, conversion alone will account for about $12,500 million in the new loan. If the British investors subscribe as patriotically with fresh resources to the new war loan as they did to the former one the new stock to be issued will reach $15,000 million. Mr. McKenna said of the former loan that the Government had not wished for a large subscription than the three billions of dollars. To that loan 500,000 subscribers put their applications through the Bank of England, and 550,000 subscribed $75 millions through the post-office. Unquestionably, on the eve of a tremendous stroke for victory, determined to put up the last man and last dollar for it, the people of Britain will open wide the storehouse of their wealth. The "all-far ballet" will go direct at Germany's vital parts. The "Re-cold haberdashers" will prove to the world that haberdashers can sacrifice for the world's liberty as zealously as the Prussian sword can jump from its scabbard against that liberty. The quiet confidence with which the new Lloyd George Government proceeds to make the vast preparations necessary demonstrates complete faith in the will and ability of the British people to make sacrifices.

It has been a remarkable exhibition of the strength of British financing that Exchequer bonds and Treasury bills should have been issued, in the last year and a half, to the extent of about $8,000 million. The British markets have steadily taken the temporary Government issues, million upon million, without any psychological incentive such as the issue of a special loan brings. Some surprise has been felt that the Government let its temporary financing go on so long without permanently funding its obligations. Had the money market shown ill-effects from the flood of Treasury bills the interval between loans could scarcely have been a year and a half. Germany has issued five loans to Britain's two. The German Finance Secretary boasted that Germany has put all its war obligations, except a few hundred millions, on a long-term basis, whereas the British Government financed from hand to mouth. The truth is that Germany could not have accomplished anything like an issue of $8,000 million of temporary paper. It has had to make practically all loans long-term, because otherwise it could not handle the financial situation. The new loan will demonstrate that in permanently funding its temporary issues, the British Treasury, backed by the strong will of the people, will be as great financially as in carrying along from day to day.—Mail and Empire.

FERGUSONISM AND MUD-SLINGING ARE SYNONYMOUS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—Fergusonism in politics is being exhibited in the province again this time in West Simcoe. The Hon. G. H. Ferguson himself has been in the riding "slinging mud" and conducting the campaign on the level that he usually manages to put it on. The trouble about his system of using violent invectives is that the novelty soon wears off and the re-action sets in. This Minister and the methods he represents played a prominent part in both the North Perth and South West Toronto elections, with results disastrous to the government, yet the same tactics are being repeated in West Simcoe. The influence of Fergusonism spreads; the campaign literature of the Conservatives in this contest is violent to a point bordering on hysteria and like most hysteria is almost ludicrously rambling and confused. The more it is circulated in the riding the more public opinion veers toward Mr. Scott, who in such a manly way summed up the case in saying, "If any of my friends should write such stuff about the Conservatives I'd quit. We are going to fight this contest fairly and cleanly and not on any such level."

Another old-timer, who has helped valiantly in losing recent bye-elections for the government is in the riding—the Hon I. B. Lucas. It will be interesting to see what particular sort of gymnastics he attempts in this contest. Whether he will resume his posture of standing on his head with his ear to the ground or whether he has some new act will soon be revealed.

The panicky hurry-scurrying of Cabinet Ministers and government leaders, the jostling each other in their excitement throughout the constituency is an amazing spectacle. Here is a rural constituency with a government majority in 1914 of 1,000 and yet it is obvious that the government is struggling under the shadow of a great fear.

Hastings Welcomes Returned Soldier

Gold Locket Presented to Sergeant Learmouth—Asphodel Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding

HASTINGS, Jan. 10.—On Monday night last, a reception was given in the town hall by the citizens of Hastings, to Sergeant T. E. Learmouth, who has returned from the front. MILITIA OFFICIALS BRIBED?

Faulty Motor Truck Parts Said to Have Been Passed.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Charles Ledoux of the Ledoux Carriage Company of Montreal, was placed on trial in the criminal branch of the Ontario Supreme Court here yesterday on the charge of bribing employes of the Militia Department to pass faulty parts in motor truck bodies supplied to the department by the defendant. Ledoux took the stand in his own default, and, while admitting that he paid the money, $10, to Foreman W. F. Young of the assembling plant, here, and $100 to Inspector F. W. Gray, who was stationed in the Ledoux factory at Montreal, he claimed that it was not done as a bribe, but for services rendered the defendant by the two men outside their duties as Government inspectors.

PETERBORO' JUNIORS OPEN THEIR SEASON WITH NEAT VICTORY OVER BOWMANVILLE

Local Youngsters Won Handily by 8 to 1 and Were Never in Danger Leading by 2 to 0 at the End of the First Period, and 6 to 1 at the Close of the Second.

VISITORS WERE HEAVY

The Peterborough junior got away to a good start in the opening O.H.A. game at Brock street rink last night when they defeated Bowmanville handily by 8 goals to 1. The local youngsters were never in danger at any time. They were in front 2 to 0 at the end of the first period and 6 to 1 ahead at the close of the second, while they boosted their total by two more in the final stanza. The ice was very bad and the conditions did not give the homesters much of a chance to display any team work, but they did their best under the circumstances to play combination, and the fans seemed pleased with their efforts. They are at their best, however, on hard ice, and last night's going did not suit them very much, especially as they were outweighed by the visitors, who loomed up like an intermediate team.

The home brigade had it on the visitors both in speed and stick-handling and on hard ice would have increased their margin, as they had little difficulty in outskating the boys from the Lake front. The latter, however, stick to their guns well and never let up trying. The game was played with the best of feeling on both sides, and although heavy ice usually has the tendency to roughen up the play, the contest was clean all the way through, and although a couple of men were slightly hurt, it was accidental in all cases. Dr. Jerry Laflamme handled the game to perfection. Nothing got away from him, and he kept the teams playing legitimate hockey all the way.

The Peterborough team seemed to look pretty good to the fans. Young Murray, playing his first O.H.A. game in the nets, was as cool as a veteran, handling the fire of the Bowmanville team in good style. He had no chance with the goal that beat him, which was scored on a rebound. In front of him Montgomery and McIntyre made a hard-checking defence, and the former's rushes were a feature of the play. The lanky youngster galloped through the opposition for three pretty goals. Graham was as good as ever at rover, rushing nicely, while his persistent back-checking was a great help to the defence. Bartley shone all night at left wing, showing plenty of speed and stick-handling ability. Cherrett worked well in centre, although the ice conditions were not in his favour. McFee was handicapped by a very sore leg and was hardly in shape to do himself justice, but he tried hard all the way.

The visitors were bigger all along the line than the Petes, but they failed to take any advantage of their weight, not a body check being handed out. Jeffrey was good in the nets, and Corden and Rowe, although they did not help the attack any, played a good defence game, refusing to be drawn out. Grant was the best of the forwards, although Williams, the left wing, did some nice work in spots.

The line-up:

Bowmanville		Peterborough.
Jeffrey	Goal	Murray
Corden Rowe	Defence	McIntyre Montgomery
Grant	Rover	Graham
Tucker	Centre	Cherrett
Mingeaud	R. Wing	McFee
Williams	L. Wing	Bartley

The pace was fast at the start and the Petes breaking away well gave Jeffrey some busy moments. The Bowmanville goaler tore off two pretty stops on shots from the side by Bartley and a hard one from Cherrett. McFee drew a penalty for tripping, but the odd man advantage did not seem to help the visitors any. Finally after five minutes playing Montgomery broke away for a rink length rush that carried him in on top of Jeffrey for a goal.

A minute and a half later Cherrett bulged the curtains with a neat shot on a pass from behind the nets. There was no further scoring in the period although the homesters lost several chances by wild shooting. Corden was chased for holding and Graham was also banished. Mingeaud was hurt and retired for the rest of the period, Cherrett being dropped to even up. Just before the end of the period Graham was hurt when he was spilled tearing into the Bowmanville nets.

The teams were at full strength when the second session started. The Petes threw away several good opportunities right at the go-in, and then Montgomery got away again and sailed in alone for Goal No. 3. Almost from the face-off, Cherrett broke loose, and after a neat rush, passed to McFee, who fooled Jeffery at close range. That made it 4 to 0, and Graham added another on a pretty rush and quick shot.

Then Bowmanville took a hand, and after Murray had turned aside one hard shot, Williams secured and beat the Peterborough goaler at close range.

Graham boosted the figures to 6 to 1 when he scored from a scrimmage on his second attempt. Jeffrey stopped the first one, but the puck drifted out to Graham again and he made sure of this time.

Just before the period ended McFee retired to repair his skate and Montgomery hurt his knee. Bowmanville dropped two men and the teams were only five men aside at the end of the period.

All the casualties were on again when the last period started. Montgomery once more opened the scoring by a pretty rush and shot after three minutes' playing. That made it 7 to 1, and Cherrett hammered in a rebound on a shot from Bartley 30 seconds after, bringing the total 8 to 1. There was no further scoring and the teams were pretty tired when it was all over. Just before the finish Graham was hurt and retired for the evening. The summary:—

First Period.

1 Peterborough, Montgomery.
2 Peterborough Cherrett.

Second Period.

3 Peterborough, Montgomery.
4 Peterborough, McFee.
5 Peterborough, Graham.
6 Bowmanville, Williams.
7 Peterborough, Graham.

Third Period.

8 Peterborough, Montgomery.
9 Peterborough, Cherrett.

O. H. A. To Blame For Delay Over the Referee Question

In regard to the delay in starting last night's game the Peterborough Junior Hockey Club wish to make the explanation to the fans that the wait was not the fault of either team, the players of both clubs being ready to start at the advertised time. The O. H. A. is entirely to blame, and both Peterborough clubs, the 247th and the Juniors are taking the matter up with that body in order that referees may reach Peterborough on the 5:30 G. T. R. train instead of on the C. P. R. local, which invariably means a delay. Yesterday morning the local management called up Secretary Hewitt and asked that the referee be sent down in good time. Dr. Laflamme had been decided upon but Secretary Hewitt stated that he could not leave Toronto until 5 o'clock, whereupon the local club asked for another official who could be here at 5:30. The O. H. A. secretary promised to secure Whitehead and send him down. However, he did not arrive as promised, but Jack Moxon, a well known referee, happened to be in town, so the local club again called Secretary Hewitt at 7 o'clock to find out that Laflamme had left Toronto on the C. P. R. local. They asked that Moxon be permitted to referee the first period in order that there would be no delay, but Mr. Hewitt advised against this, and so the game was held up until Dr. Laflamme arrived at 9 o'clock. To give the popular official credit though he rushed the game through in good style when he got the contest under way.

There should be no further trouble about referees, as both Peterborough clubs are insisting that the officials henceforth must leave on an earlier train than that of the local C. P. R., which after this week will be still later, not being due until 8:40.

LADY CURLERS FORSAKE THE GAME TO DEVOTE TIME TO RED CROSS

With home duties, Red Cross sewing and curling in conflict and with one of these activities to be dispensed with, the members of the Ladies' Curling Club this morning blackballed this season's curling. The grave demands of the Red Cross for which a special effort of six weeks of sewing was recently begun left little room for discussion in so far as the lady curlers were concerned. Naturally they looked forward to the morning games they had enjoyed during recent winters, but, without any hesitation, they decided to forget the game this season and apply the fees for a greater cause. In this disbanding of the Club until another time and, it is hoped, a happier winter rolls around. The ladies acted without any expression of regret, but with the calm conviction arising from an appreciation of the requirements of the Red Cross. Doubtless there was an involuntary sigh at the relinquishing of the pleasure of the old game at which the ladies have been growing quite proficient for the ice looked very inviting this morning.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Lindsay Warder says:

It will be a case of when Greek meets Greek and a titanic struggle at the Lindsay street rink Wednesday night, when the Peterborough intermediates will clash with the local Midgets. If the ice conditions remain firm the play will be fast, for be it known that the old-time rivalry still exists between these two teams.

The Peterborough soldiers will be as strong, if not stronger, than they were in the game at Peterborough last week, but the Midgets may spring a surprise on them. At least "Cap" Simpson is rather reticent as to the personnel of his Midgets for this fray.

Last night's game is the last O.H.A. game scheduled for Brock Street Rink until a week from Friday, when Oshawa will clash with the Peterborough juniors. In the meantime the Peterborough teams have three games away from home, the 247th playing in Lindsay and Cobourg and the juniors in Oshawa. It is likely that the 247th will arrange an exhibition game with one of the fast Toronto senior teams for the beginning of next week.

The Peterborough juniors will go to Oshawa to-morrow for a junior O.H.A. game with manager Bradley's outfit. The team came through last night's game in good shape and with fast ice assured, should give a good account of themselves in their first game away from home. The team will leave for Oshawa on the 11.40 G.T.R. train to-morrow. The following junior players are asked to report at Brock Street Rink to-night between 7 and 8 o'clock: Murray, McIntyre, Montgomery, Graham, Cherrett, McFee, Bartley, Frost, Park.

CURLING

To-night's scheduled games at the Curling Rink are as follows:

Sturgeon vs. Morrow.
Hicks vs. Denham.
Archibald vs. Foote.
W. G. Ferguson vs. Davidson.
Kay vs. Wightman.

The sudden turn to colder weather quickly hardened the ice during the night and this morning, and a good sheet is promised for this evening's games. One of these days winter will settle down to real earnest business, and the curling games will proceed with something of the regularity of an ordinary season.

PRINTERS WON THREE GAMES

Last night at the Water street Bowling Alleys the biggest surprise of the season was pulled off when the Printers took all three games from the Business Men, who were somewhat handicapped by the absence of Lush. Hard spares were made by Miller and Henderson for the Prints Miller had the high single game with a 206 count.

THE NEW PINS.

The new pins which were used for the first time were accountable for the low scores and a number of splits were made.

The score:—

AN OLD-TIME SPORT CAME TO TOWN

The Visit of Jimmy Sheehy the Star "Centre" of the Victorious Lacrosse Teams of the Eighties, Recalls the Good Old Sporting Days

The name "Jimmy Sheehy" has a big meaning, or had a big meaning before he left the city and went to Chicago, where he thrived as he deserved to do and became secretary of the Hyland Publishing Company, and became dignified into Mr. J. J. Sheehy. The name, "Jimmy" Sheehy means a good deal to the Examiner— when the daily was established he was the first member of the reporting staff and the best—he was the only reporter and also the best of reporters. His name meant a great deal to the citizenship of the town, for he was in every way a good citizen and a good fellow. It meant, and it yet means, a lot to the sporting side of the city, especially among old timers. He took, when he was in Peterborough, a great interest in sport. He still takes a big interest in it, and has it next to his heart—for instance. When he called upon the Examiner to-day to say good-bye, "Jimmie"—to keep up the familiar cognomen of his sporting days—drew from the pocket over his heart, and displayed with pride, a pocket scrap book containing reports clipped from the Examiner of all the chief sporting events of his time in the district. The first was a long report of the walking match in the old departed drill shed in May, 1879, when Mark Spencely won the pedestrian championship—in a walk. The scrap book contained also reports of all the lacrosse matches in the district, when the Peterborough lacrosse team held the championship for years, and captured the Gildersleeve cup. They were lacrosse giants in those days, when "Jimmy" Sheehy played "centre" and ranked as perhaps the best man in that position in Canada at the time. Other prominent players, many of whom have retired from the game of life as well as lacrosse, were Harry LeBrun, "Ike" Yelland, "Dod" Fortye, Joe Joyal, the stonewall defence; "Billy" Rudkins, "Paddy" Rudkins, (the late Father Rudkins), "Billy" (W. A.) Sanderson, George Giroux and many others. "Jimmie" Sheehy is full of the sporting events of his day and, get him going, he shoulders his crutch—or "crosse"—and tells how games were won, with graphic enthusiasm.

CARPENTIER WILL REMAIN IN FRANCE

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Georges Carpentier will remain in France until after the war is over, according to word received from the French capital. The Sportsman, one of the most prominent authorities on boxing in England says that it is improbable that the necessary leave of absence will be granted by the War Department of France to enable Carpentier to leave the country.

This news practically kills whatever hope may have lingered in the breasts of the promoters of boxing in America to have the dauntless Frenchman cross the Atlantic and take part in any boxing match, or series of matches.

Carpentier is said to have expressed his willingness to box Darcy provided that his share of the money were turned over to the funds for the benefit of the French war sufferers.

Carpentier's fortune, made in the roped arena, has been wiped out during the war. His mining properties in the Lens district were captured by the invading Germans, and are being operated by the Teutons. The home that he bought for his parents has been destroyed, and it is thought that his father and mother have been driven into exile. No word has been received from them since the start of the war and careful search has revealed no word of their fate.

Losing his fortune, Carpentier has won fame in his country. He has been cited for distinguished bravery under fire and was decorated with the Military Medal, the highest honor in France. Several times he has flown over the German lines at a height of 200 metres, directing the French artillery fire. His plane has been hit and riddled with shrapnel, but he has escaped unhurt.

FRENCH LIKE TEDDY.

"The French too keen interest in the American presidential election," Miss Ethel Thomson, a nurse in the American Hospital Corps, just returned from Neuilly, France, said recently to the Boston Post. "Teddy Roosevelt is to them almost a god. When his picture is flashed on a screen in Paris, it is given more applause than the picture of General Joffre. The French wanted Hughes to win. They were wildly enthusiastic when the first news came that he had won, and they were keenly disappointed when it was announced Wilson had defeated him."

ROMANCE IN WAR.

The romance of war is far from dead, says London Globe. Witness the reports of the French parachutist at Monastir, who jumped from his balloon at a height of 3,000 feet, who too kept his pocket-book with one hand and, holding it in his teeth inserted therein all his important papers, threw it into the French lines as he sailed over them, and himself reached the Serbian front. Then again, we have the account of the fight in the Adriatic between an Italian torpedo boat and an Austrian submarine. Both were sunk, but the survivors of the torpedo boat captured the submarine crew.

She Confessed.—A young woman called at the Post Office in a provincial town and bashfully inquired if there was a letter for her. "Business or love letter?" jokingly inquired the clerk. "Business," was the reply, accompanied by a blush of the deepest crimson. "As there was no such letter to be found, the young lady took her departure. She came back, however, after a little while, and said, in faltering tones, "Please, would you mind looking among the love-letters?"

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—If you can spare a small space in your valuable paper, I would like to reply to some of the soldiers' wives who have inserted letters recently; these women seem to be kicking about the small pay they receive. Now although our pay is not colossal, all these women know that even those with no children get more than forty dollars a month, and those with no children are perhaps the better paid in proportion, however, we will leave that question on one side. For my own part I have six children and I receive three cheques monthly, namely, assigned pay, separation allowance, and patriotic; each for twenty dollars. Now, I'm not saying I've got much to spare but I find that I can keep myself and children within my present income, and it is not fair to the rest of us for these women to create the impression which their expressions convey to the public, one says she hasn't sufficient bread, and another doesn't get enough meat, such things are untrue and disgusting; are they trying to class us all as paupers? Then there is the women who says that if the same thing came up again, "Would she let her husband go to the front? No, No, No." Now an expression like that isn't worthy of a soldiers' wife, and I would remind her, that if the same thing were to start again, she might not be able to help herself. Now Mr. Editor, my husband is in khaki, and has been for some time in the thick of it, and although I'd be only too glad to get him back home, still, like all of my P.T.O. friends whose husbands are also in France, I'm proud of him, and was quite willing for him to do his bit to help his comrades. When our husbands leave us for the front we place ourselves in the hands of the Canadian Government and the Patriotic Society, surely these are two splendid institutions and I'm satisfied that we can all have the assurance that neither will see us want, even if there are little extravagant things which we manage without in these times of high prices, surely we need not make a fuss about it, when others in different parts of this world are suffering such privations, rather, we should all, thank God that we are in Canada. Now Mr. Editor I'm afraid I'm taking up quite a bit of space, but I hope you will grant me just a little more, for I would like to thank the Patriotic Society and particularly Alderman Dobbin, whom we all know works so hard in our interests, and I'm sure all the other ladies will be glad to join me in wishing him a most happy and prosperous New Year, and now thanking you Mr. Editor and wishing your paper every success. Believe me a loyal soldier's wife.

GREAT PANIC IN BUCHAREST.

Population Fought to Get on Train as Teuton Army Approached

LONDON, Saturday, Jan. 8.—The Daily Chronicle publishes the following, sent by its correspondent at Jassy the new Rumanian capital, under date of December 15.

"Persons who left Bucharest just before the entry of the German and Hungarian forces, give terrible descriptions of the state of panic which seized the inhabitants. It may be said to have commenced from the day after it became known that the Government had decided to move to this city, and that the allied Ministers, with their staffs, had already left.

"At the station there was a scene of indescribable muddle and disorder. People in hundreds, civil and military with mountains of baggage, in one hopeless mass, were fighting and struggling. Train after train was sent off as fast as it could be made up, either northward toward Jassy or to the west with Galats as its final destination. The writer left in one consisting of no fewer than sixty carriages of all kinds. This train, drawn and pushed by three engines, presented an extraordinary spectacle, as every corner of carriages and corridors, the steps and even the buffers, were packed with people of every class, and the roofs were green with soldiers. It crawled slowly along.

"This, however, was nothing to what occurred a few days later when it became known that the town was not to be defended. Although cordons of military barred the way a regular seige of the station took place. Revolvers were used freely. Many deaths occurred from people being knocked down and trampled under foot. More than one soldier is also stated to have paid with his life for his devotion to duty. An Englishman who left on the day before the occupation of the town states that he saw the most savage of fights for places on the train by which he travelled and that persons fought on the roofs for a few feet of space, more than one being hurled to death on the stone pavement below.

"Those of the better classes who had motor cars at their disposal left town by road on the first alarm and it must be said with regret that many of those whose duty it was to remain were the first to sneak off in the night."

BRITISH FOOD PRICES FIXED.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Baron Devonport, the Food Controller, has fixed the following prices which home growers may charge for their 1917 crops: Wheat, sixty shillings per 504 pounds; oats, thirty-eight shillings six pence per 336 pounds, and potatoes a varying price of 115 to 130 shillings per ton.

The Minister of Munitions, under the defence of the realm act, has forbidden any manufacturer or assembling of internal combustion engines except under Government permit.

RUN PROFESSOR IN ASTOUNDING WAR ADMISSION

London, January 4. — Professor Meinecke, of Freiburg University, the distinguished historian, contributed to the Frankfurt Zeitung on New Year's Eve, the most remarkable article on the history of the war which has yet appeared in any German newspaper.

Being compelled to lie about the origin of the war plans which Germany began, German writers generally had to lie on all the inconvenient events during the war. Professor Meinecke, on the other hand, adopts the convenient formula that it was only in a "political sense" that Germany "began the war as a defensive war," while in a military sense it is distinctly a knock-out war.

Professor Meinecke has the courage to describe the first phase as follows:

"Our first object was to overthrow France rapidly and compel her to make peace. If we succeeded we would then turn quickly and carry out the same military idea against Russia. We would have the prospect of success then to conclude a final peace with England.

"This peace would have had to assume the character of a compromise, since we did not hope to overthrow England's naval supremacy."

This whole programme, brilliantly begun, collapsed at the gates of Paris during the battle of the Marne. This battle was not a tactical victory but a great strategical success of the French. Perhaps our programme would not have collapsed if we had carried through our original strategical idea with perfect strictness, keeping the Marne forces firmly together, and at the same time abandoning East Prussia."

He then sketches subsequent events. The Germans took to trench warfare and the enemy did likewise. The Germans tried and failed to break through both at the Yser and Bapaume, while the French tried and failed to break through in Champagne.

WAR OF ATTRITION.

People in Germany began to argue that the war had become a war of attrition. Then the Germans succeeded in breaking through in Galicia, but ultimately had to settle again on defensive positions. The British and French then tried and failed again to break through in the West in the battles of Loos and Champagne.

VERDUN AND THE SOMME.

The Professor then gives the following account of the battles of Verdun and the Somme:

"The argument used a year ago was that a decision must be sought, not in the intangible and distant East, but in the concentrated West, the nerve centre of the enemy's forces. The decision however must not be a decision in the old sense. We should break through in a particularly critical position, destroy one of the most important French fortresses, and prove to the French that they could no longer win.

"That was the origin of the undertaking against Verdun. This time the new politico-military idea led only to an heroic episode. But meanwhile the enemies pulled themselves together for still more gigantic achievements. England adopted universal military service and converted industries for the production of a mighty supply of arms and ammunition. At the same time she leaned upon the industrial strength of America. So while Japan helped, she was able to equip the new Russian formations with apparatus which we smashed a year before.

"Thus in June and July, 1916, came a great double offensive by the enemies in the East and West. The result was we had to interrupt operations at Verdun. The enemy offensive also achieved partial successes especially in the East, although the real object to break through and roll up our lines could not be achieved. This was due to the fact that we in the interval had still further developed the possibilities of trench warfare."

NO VICTORY POSSIBLE.

"Professor Meinecke says the battle of the Somme led to the conviction in Germany that it is no longer possible to arrive at a military decision in the full peace-compelling sense, so he describes the German peace overture as arising naturally from the idea that the sacrifices demanded in its continuation no longer bear any relation to the military results which can still be extended.

He contends that it is statesmanlike, intelligent and wise to abandon further destruction and seek a reasonable compromise. With regard to the real guarantees which Germany professes to require, he makes two final observations.

First, Germany has taught all the small Powers in Europe that they are risking their lives if they "touch the electric wire which protects Central Europe."

Second, the war has proved there are limits to the possibilities of a "knock-out strategy war between the great powers." Consequently the knock-out policy aimed at producing fundamental revolutions in European relations of the Powers does not pay.

Thus, according to the Professor, the motto in the future must be: Not overthrow, but balance."

Although no other writers are allowed, like Meinecke, to confess German failures, his account of the peace manoeuvres is confirmed in other quarters.

There is now little or no talk about German benevolence or that Germans dislike bloodshed. It is simply argued that the enemy ought to be persuaded to agree with Germany to a compromise that is inevitable, and then discuss with Germany peace based upon the war map.

TO BE SHOT IN THE BACK.

An Austrian spy named Larace and two Italians have been condemned to be shot in the back by the Ancona court martial for complicity in the attempt to burn the port of Genoa.

With this conspiracy, it seems, were connected explosions in munition factories in Milan and elsewhere, aggregating in damages a total of several millions of dollars.

The Austrian who was at the head of the plot, sought out Italian criminals, gaining an ascendancy over them so that he could command their co-operation for only nominal sums. In one case the price for an attempt to blow up one of Italy's greatest steel works at Terni, was about $80. If this attempt had been successful it would have retarded military operations for several months.

Larace had in his possession when arrested eight jointed walking sticks of about the size of a man's little finger, painted a gray-green, and filled with dynamite. They were hidden in umbrellas when he tried to escape. These dynamite canes had no time fuses but were so arranged as to explode a few weeks after being placed in position.

"GET OVER HERE FOR THE FINISH BOYS," IS THE WORD FROM FRONT

Lance-Corp. J. T. Hardwicke Says There is a Grand Old Victory Coming — A Cheerful Letter From a Well Known Peterboro' Boy in France.

MORE MEN ARE NEEDED

The following letter has been received from Lance Corp. J. T. Hardwicke, a well known Peterborough boy at the front:

Trenches, France, Dec. 8, 1916.

Sir,—Once again we take the opportunity of writing you a few lines to let you know that we are still playing the game and permeated with the same invincible spirit that has carried us through many months of heavy conflict with the enemy, the same spirit which has brought victory to us and honour and glory to our native land, as you know from your own press despatches, our Canadian battalion have been in the thick of the heavy offensive and they have accomplished objectives that were deemed unsurmountable. Their dash and fearlessness through the terrific shell fire and machine gun fire has carried them along until their objective was reached. The awfulness of the terrific fire and chaos caused by the heavy artillery barrage is indescribable; it is beyond the powers of imagination. One has to be there to realize what it really is. The havoc wrought by our guns on the German trenches and implacements has been unthinkable; hills have been made into powdered dust and valleys into mountains of clay. The whole nature of the country has been changed. Where there was a ridge yesterday, a muddy river may be running to-day. We see some strange sights out here. We live by experience out here, not by days or years, and war makes some strange bed-fellows. Every branch of the Empire from the noblest to the most humble, the rich and the poor, the aristocrat and the plebian have been moulded into a new and wonderful kinship by the sorrow, the sacrifice and the heroic purpose of this war. Perhaps for the first time in our history, the British peoples are actually brothers all; have, in fact, on the battlefields of Europe, found a sense of unity that obliterates all differences of rank and creed. The strife and the hatred, the horror that seems hopeless and the struggle that seems blind, are but a prelude to that new world we hope will emerge from the wreckage. A sense of brotherhood, a larger sympathy, a groping towards a knowledge of men and things in our social life that have hitherto been strange, an acceptance of class aspirations and individual wants that were before incomprehensible — these are but a part of that new sense revealed to our young, heroic British boys by the lurid flames of war. The blood of Britain's youth has made of this war a sacrament for us all. And the message of Britain's youth passing from us, as so many have passed, into the great unknown, contains in itself the seds of a new existence—that better unity of comradeship, that "welding" of our folk in one, which has been handed on to you and me (by the spirits of our fallen comrades) immortally for or realisation To use our own vernacular "it's up to you and me to carry on, to see the universal brotherhood of man, these lofty ideals of our comrades realised."

This war has altered a good many of our lives. Some of us who have been careless thinkers have become serious minded. We take life and the essential things of life more seriously, and I know that when we do return to our native land, we will be the better citizens for all our experiences out here. We try to our "bit" and be a credit to the land that gave us birth, while we are out here fighting for our honour, for justice and liberty, and we should more so try to be a credit to our country when we return. With our work here an accomplished fact, we all look forward to that day when peace will once more reign supreme in all the world, when German militarism will be crushed beyond all hope of reconstruction.

Now, sir, you will think this is a very rambling letter, but we get enough of the hardships and difficulties of war, as it is here, with the rain and mud, cold frost and snow. The weather at times is our worst enemy, the roads are almost impassable, making it difficult to get the transport up with ammunition and rations, the trenches are waist deep in mud, the dug-outs half full of water, and everything seems to be going against you and you feel miserable and "fed up," but there is no use grouching or worrying over it. We are here to "stick it" and we have the nerve to do it. Don't think we always have things our way. We have our brushes up against Fritz every now and again, but we are too much for him to start anything on a large scale. We are improving in artillery and increasing our strength, while on the other hand he is decreasing and deteriorating. "Are we winning?" Well, we wouldn't be staying here if we were not. It's coming our way slowly and steadily, but we need your co-operation, we need your cheering letters, your sympathy for the boys, to help them travel over the rough spots, to imbue them with new spirit, and we need more of our pals at home to come out and give us a helping hand. Get over here for the finish, boys, for she is sure going to be a grand old victory.

Now, I will draw my letter to a close and wish you and all my many friends in my home town a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Remember us boys who will be spending both days in the front line trenches trying our best to do our duty like men.

OBITUARY.

On Saturday morning, December 6th in St. Michael's Hospital Toronto, the very sad death took place of Katie McCarthy, wife of Mr. Michael McGowan of Toronto.

Deceased was the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie McCarthy, who for many years resided in Norwood and vicinity before going to Toronto a few years ago.

She leaves to mourn her early loss, her husband and four small children also her parents, one sister, May and a brother Ambrose.

A number of the young people from here attended the dance given by the young men of Hastings on Monday night last.

Miss Mary McNichol registered nurse of St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, N. Y., leaves on Thursday next to resume her professional duties. She will be accompanied by her sister, Miss Josephine, who intends training in the same hospital.

Miss Marguerite McNealy, nurse in training at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, who has been home for the past few weeks returned to the city on Saturday.

Mr. John Weir spent Saturday in Madoc.

Miss Annie Farrel of Malone spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Thompson.

Confederation Calendar

The 1917 Calendar issued by the Confederation Life Association, is quite a striking hanger, with bold clear months and dates in two colors. Another feature is the striking military illustration which accompanies it, which presents an impressive scene entitled "Canadians in Flanders." This is printed in chromatic colours, and the artist has depicted an incident in the experience of our Canadian soldiers, which is not without its lesson. Mr. S. Taylor is the District Manager for the Confederation.

Contentment Comes to This Prussian Prisoner After Eating a British Meal

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 10.—The latest war stories brought back from the Somme front by Will Irwin, war correspondent, were told at the National Press Club one with apologies to Bertrand Russel and Sir Chas Ramsay, pacifists, who are charged in England with being tools of the German government.

"Things were quiet on a little stretch of the western front one day when some Canadians got hold of two top hats, which put an idea into their minds. A big sign was hoisted over the Canadian trenches, reading:

"Asquith and Lloyd George will be in this part of the line to-morrow morning."

"The next morning the two high silk hats were plainly visible above the Canadian trenches to German observers. As the hats went bobbing along a furious bombardment was begun by the Germans. The hats disappeared, and as soon as the German guns were silenced another sign appeared over the Canadian trenches.

"You d—d fools. You've killed Barty Russell and Charley Ramsay."

The British army, said Mr. Irwin, was undoubtedly the best fed in the world. He told of a German-American captured by the Canadians on the western front who had for breakfast all the boiled beef he could eat, with bacon on the side.

"Do you eat like this every day?" asked the prisoner.

"Sure," said the Canadian cook.

"Dinner, too?"

"Oh, dinner is better than this."

"How about supper?"

"That's the best meal of all."

The prisoner lit a cigarette and gave a contented sign of satisfaction. "Oh, well, to hell with the Kaiser, anyway," he said.

Mr. Irwin described a visit to the Italian front, where, he said, about all that was left of romance in war was to be seen in the Alpine fighting. He told of an artillery duel which he had witnessed from a dugout at the bottom of a mountain.

An Italian battery hidden in a cliff high above the dugout where he was, said Mr. Irwin, located an Austrian battery on an opposite mountainside. An artillery duel followed, which he described as the "most horribly exciting" thing he had ever witnessed.

Mr. Irwin said that the number of American citizens now fighting in Europe is so large that it might be said we are training more of an army over there than on this side of the water. Many of these Americans, he said, had risen to high commands and their services should prove invaluable to the United States army after this war.

He explained that under existing legislation there was no way to get these men into the United States army except in the grade of second lieutenant, and that it was useless, of course, to expect men who had held higher rank in the European war to enter the American army in such circumstances. He urged an amendment to the law which would take these men into the army at higher rank.

"These men are with all the armies in Europe," said Mr. Irwin. "Many of them are native born Americans and some naturalized. There are probably 30,000 of them. I remember on the Italian front meeting a lieutenant in a dugout where the fighting was pretty lively who, recognizing me as an American said:—

"Say, can you give me a cigarette? I can't get one here. This is a hell of a place."

A WOMAN APPEALS TO HER LOCAL SISTERS TO HELP RECRUITING

Editor of the Examiner:

Mr. Editor,—Would you kindly allow me a little space in your paper for a few words to the women of Peterborough. I am still convinced in my own mind that at the bottom of this recruiting campaign, we must get at the women, that "the hand that rocks the cradle still rules the world" and that the women have more influence either for good or bad over the eligible men than the recruiting sergeants or recruiting sermons. Do the young girls of Peterborough know what they are doing when they use their influence to keep their sweethearts with them instead of letting them go out into the world to play a man's part, how can you girls have any respect for a man who can stand by at a time like this and see poor Belgium, who gave up her country, the women gave up their husbands, sons and loved ones and homes to save us. They did not have to do it—they could have let Germany have a free passage through their country and saved themselves, but to Belgium to keep their honour even at the price of death was better than dishonour and life, now when they have saved us and we are pledged in honour to help save them. Can we go back on our word and our men still walk the streets deaf to the cry of the people whom we owe everything to be carried into slavery? Can you men sleep with a clear conscience at night with the cries of women and babies ringing in your ears? Your sweethearts may persuade you not to go, but in after years she will loathe you for not going. You may stay at home and marry but let me tell you the first tiff you have she will throw it up at you, and you will tell her she persuaded you not to go; but she will wriggle out of it some way and will tell you, you should have been a man and chosen for yourself and your life will not be happy. I once remember talking to a great big man, 6 ft. 4in., and he said I can't understand women, they have such funny little ways; but they can make it very unpleasant for a fellow if he doesn't see things their way, his wife could walk under his arm easily, and I am sure that if it had been necessary for him to enlist in those days and she had advised him he would have done it. Surely the girls of Peterborough will not let it be said we had to fill this Battalion with conscripts. What a disgrace it will be to our town, but girls and women the last card is on the table, there is only one card to be played and that is the trump card, conscription and as you know the trump takes the trick. How will you like walking the streets with a conscript, for myself I would feel too humiliated to be seen out and his life will not be happy with the regiment. How can the men who have joined voluntary respect a man who is forced to do his duty? Oh girls and women let me beg of you to do your part, we have been given every chance with the other countries, conscription is the first card, with us it is the last, and the officers and authorities have given to men every chance, nor you don't do your part and send your boys, either to don the khaki or get a button and you can take your pleasure with a clear conscience, knowing that you have done your part. We women generally get what we want in the long run and there is more than one way of killing a cat and it is possible to lead a man without him knowing he is being led. The women of England are brave, both rich and poor. What do you think it means to the women who have ancestral homes to see heir after heir killed and their homes passing to strangers; what do you think it means to see beautiful lawns like velvet that have taken a 100 years rolling and weeding and mowing, ploughed up and growing potatoes, beds that grew the loveliest of flowers used for vegetables? You cannot understand because most people in Canada born have reared in such luxury—but let me tell you those people are suffering more than we will suffer. But again I say our women are brave and I don't believe the women of Canada will be less brave now the test has come. We don't want to shame the men, but the time may come when they will feel ashamed of themselves. You may remember the story of the "Women of Mumbles Head" years ago on the south coast of Wales; there was a terrible wreck, there was a high sea and the vessel was being beaten to pieces on the rock. the people of the Mumbles saw the rockets and begged the men to go to the rescue, the men said no boat could live in such a sea. At last the women could stand it no longer, they launched the boats themselves and brought every soul safely to shore. When the papers printed the story and the women were rewarded, the men denied it was true and made all sorts of excuses, but it was no use and now when you go to the Mumbles and ask the men if it was true, they hang their head and walk away. Then we have Grace Darling and Florence Nightingale and a host of names to be added. After this war is over women of Peterborough, let one name be among them and let us be known as the women who sent their men and not held them back. This very week use your influence for good and let it be a record breaking week for the regiment—you can do it if you will, we are all suffering. If we can smash the Germans this Spring our worries will all be over, our boys home and we will have such a national thanksgiving next New Year's as the country has never known. Now, mothers, wives and sweethearts join me this week and let us see what we can do to help along our soldier boys in our midst. You know the old song:

Bravo the officers, who lead us to the fray,
Bravo the generals who point us out the way;
But when it comes to Tommy—cheer with all your might,
For after all, 'tis Mr. Tommy Atkins, wins the fight.

We have read this week of 2,000 people going to the States, well "birds of a feather flock together" and they have gone to a country worthy of them. We only hope the authorities will see that their return to Canada is barred and if the States gets into the war, we will see if they will get separation allowances and patriotic assistance from Uncle Sam—perhaps they will wish they had stayed to help us in our hour of need for if we fail "the lights of freedom go out all over the world," and it is up to us to see that we do not fail and they can't and shan't beat the boys of the bull dog creed, that's made Old England's fame.

MICHAEL KELLY DEAD.

Composed "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall."

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 8.—Michael Kelly, of St. John, who died this morning in the County Hospital, as the result of tuberculosis, was the composer of the music for "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," a song which has become well-known over the entire Empire since the war began. He was a professional musician and the composer of many other works which were less well known. Last year he abandoned a large and profitable connection to become bandmaster of the 132nd Overseas Battalion, but was forced to give up the post on account of ill-health. He was thirty-five years of age and was unmarried.

JACK LONDON'S ODD MALADY

Suffered From Australian Light and Also Had Leprosy

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 9. — The recent death of Jack London, the California novelist, recalls the extraordinary physical reasons for his stay of about five months in Australia in 1908-09. London was a blonde, and his sojourn from what he himself subsequently wrote in "The Cruise of the Shark," and the alcoholic memoir of "John Barleycorn," and those in the Commonwealth who became intimate with him now remember, was one of torture. He left the cockleboat Snark in which he and his wife had been cruising about the Pacific, at one of the islands, and came with Mrs. London to Sydney in November, 1908, by steamer. He said of his Australian sojourn:

"I went to Australia to go into an hospital, where I spent some five weeks. I spent five months miserably sick in the hotels. The mysterious malady that afflicted my hands was too much for the Australian specialists. It was unknown in the literature of medicine. No case like it had ever been reported. It extended from my hands to my feet so that at times I was as helpless as a child. On occasion my hands were twice their natural size with seven dead or dying skins peeling off at the same time. There were times when my toenails in 24 hours grew as thick as they were long. After filing them off, inside of another 24 hours they were as thick as before. The Australian specialists agreed that the malady was non-parasitic and therefore it must be nervous."

The ailment did not mend and the novelist and his wife had to abandon the cruise in the Snark. Yet when London had returned to California, where his health had invariably been excellent, his recovery was complete, and strangely enough the California climate is very much like that of Australia. Later on London ran across the book written by Colonel C. E. Woodruff, United States Army Medical Corps, entitled "Effects of Tropical Light on White Men," and what had baffled the Australian specialists was no longer a mystery. London wrote to Colonel Woodruff describing his illness in Australia; and the latter whose researches in tropical medicine, especially in the Philippines have given him a high repute in his profession, replied that he had been similarly afflicted in the Philippines. Besides himself, Colonel Woodruff wrote to the novelist, no fewer than sixteen other United States Army surgeons were utterly at a loss to account for the Colonel's malady. But in time the Colonel solved the riddle. London says:

"I had a strong predisposition toward tissue destructiveness by tropical light. I had been torn to pieces by ultra violet rays."

Not only did Jack London suffer from the effects of ultra-violet rays, but while in Australia he had what he described as the "healthy man's disease, European leprosy or Biblical leprosy," according to him its occurrences are attributable to no known cause, although spontaneous cures are on record. The novelist was among those spontaneously cured, for on his return to California the telltale silvery skin which he had in Australia vanished.

It was characteristic of the man that, although he was nerve racked and sick when the editor of a Sydney paper asked him in a private hospital in North Sydney whether he would be willing to write an account of the Burns-Johnson prizefight, which was set for December 26, 1908, at the Rushcutter Bay stadium, he jumped at the chance. He first stipulated, however, that Mrs. London should have a seat beside him.

"She is some boxer herself," he explained. "One day coming over from Fiji we were having a little sparring with the gloves. I gave her an opening, and well, the boat (the Snark) was without a conscious navigator for a minute or two."

At the ringside London confessed to an Australian friend, "I'd rather be the champion heavy weight of the world than the King of England and the President of the United States Rolled into one."

CANADIAN CASUALTY TOTAL

Aggregate Now is Nearly Seventy Thousand.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Canadian casualties from the outbreak of war until December 31, 1916, have been 68,290. These casualties were: killed in action 10,854; died of wounds 4,010; died of sickness, 494; presumed dead 1,108; wounded, 48,454; missing, 2,970. The total Canadian casualties up to December 31, 1915, were 14,459 and during 1916 were 53,837.

The deaths and sickness have been only 494, which if considered a wonderful testimonial to the efficiency of the Canadian Medical Service.

In all other wars the deaths from sickness always outnumbered those killed in action and died of wounds. In the present war the precautionary and effective sanitary measures and the efficient treatment have made losses from sickness only about three per cent. of those killed in action and died of wounds.

Footbinding in China Is Still in Existence

The Ministry of Interior, prompted by Chinese medical men with western scientific training, has just issued a circular to provincial officials calling attention to the edict issued ten years ago against foot-binding and urging them to put it into effect. In remote sections the practice is almost as general as it ever was, and it is no uncommon sight to see young girls with bound feet even in Pekin and other North China cities where the practice never was as much in favor as in the south.

Missionaries throughout China have discouraged the practice to some extent by announcing that girls with small feet would not be admitted to mission school.

Rewards are now to be offered to family and clan chiefs who succeed in stamping out foothinding among the persons under their patriarchal jurisdiction.

A MOTHER'S SON

The following was composed by the nine year old daughter of Mr. P. F. Higgins, chef of the Oriental Hotel.

I see her still—
Sitting close to the window sill,
Waiting patiently for her soldier son
Who has gone to help fight the Hun.
She thinks of his boyhood days,
When he used to play in such childish ways;
But at last she has had to give him up,
And for his welfare she always prays.
In her heart some prayer she mumbles,
Thinking how the cannon grumbles,
Around her dear son,
Who has gone to fight the Hun.
A letter she received two days ago,
Telling her all about his woe.
That he had been wounded in the field;
And, Oh, how her mother's heart must bleed!
She must have prayed for her noble son
Who went to help fight the Hun.

Beatrice Higgins,
Age nine.

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

NO ROUMANIAN OIL FOR GERMANS

Oil drillers from Lambton County were in Roumania, as oil drillers from that county are in all parts of the earth where wells have to be sunk. Two or three advance agents of the exodus of Canadian oil drillers from Roumania have already been heard from. Their story is a record of good work done for the Allies and of disappointment for Germany in the oil fields of Roumania.

They report that the Roumanian production of oil will be absolutely nil until new wells are drilled. The Canadian oil drillers worked with the British officers in the Roumanian oil fields. Their letters tell of the complete destruction of machinery and buildings in the Roumanian fields. As for the wells, a Canadian says: Iron was dropped down the bore of every well and concrete poured in on top of the iron. When the drill gets through the concrete it strikes the iron. The drill will go round and round. It will be three years before the Roumanian oil fields are again on a producing basis.

British engineers and Canadian oil drillers seem to have combined to disappoint Germany's hopes of securing an immediate supply of oil from the Roumanian wells.

Council of North Monaghan Pass a Resolution to That Effect---Business Transacted at the Inaugural Meeting ---Assessor and Other Municipal Officers Appointed

REEVE RYE PRESIDED

The inaugural meeting of the council of North Monaghan was held at the town hall on Monday, Jan. 8th, at 11 a.m. The new council is composed of the following members: Harold B. Rye, reeve; Jos. H. Bell, deputy; Thos. Henry, R. A. Dobbin and John A. Williams, councillors. Each of the members took the declaration of qualification and office.

Reeve Rye addressed the meeting. He referred to the harmony and good will that prevailed last year, and assured Mr. Dobbin that he wished him, as the only representative of the west side of the township, to bring in any matter which is necessary before the council, and the same would receive just and due consideration.

Communications were dealt with as follows:

From City Clerk Armstrong, re thanks of the committee to the members of the Monaghan Council re the Quaker Oats fire.—Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Bell that the council hereby acknowledge receipt of the communication re the Quaker Oats fire, and extend their sympathy to the families of those who have met with such terrible deaths, and to the Quaker Oats Co., who have met with such a tremendous loss of property.

From the Department of Public Highways re township road construction.

Children's Aid Society.

From C. A. G. Spence re Children's Aid Society, asking grant from council. — Moved by Messrs Williams and Henry, that communication be received.

From the organization of resources committee, asking for full particulars of all grants and contributions given by the citizens and the council since the war broke out in 1914.—Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Williams that the clerk fill in the report referred to above and return the same to the committee in charge.

From the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, asking for a grant.—On motion, Messrs. Dobbin and Williams, received.

A Refund.

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Dobbin and Henry that Mrs. F. A. Thomas be refunded the difference on the assessment as per schedule and the tax bill, a difference in assessment of $80, amounting to 60 cents.

From Bert Sanderson, applying for position as assessor at a salary of $150 and postage.—Moved and seconded by Messrs. Williams and Henry that the application be received and that the same be dealt with in the regular order of business.

Moved by Messrs. Henry and Dobbin that the question of the statute labour tax on Mr. W. R. Mather's property be referred to Mr. Peck for advice on the same.

Collect Five Per Cent.

Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Bell that the meeting refer back to deputations, and that Mr. Thos. M. Hunter be heard. The question then arose regarding the by-law authorizing the tax collector to collect 5 per cent. after Dec. 20; it was fully discussed. Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Bell that the by-law authorizing the tax collector to collect 5 per cent. after Dec. 20 remain in force and that 5 per cent. be collected according to the by-law.

It was moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Bell that the reeve and Mr. Dobbin be a committee to engage an auditor for the accounts of 1916.

Appointed Assessor.

Bert Sanderson was appointed assessor, salary $150 per annum, payable half yearly, the above amount to include postage and other expenses, on motion of Messrs. Henry and Dobbin. The assessor suggested that the clerk advertise and ask anyone who had not been assessed properly in the past year to notify the assessor as soon as possible, that a proper assessment may be made this year; also if there is any change in the ownership of property, or any property being sub-divided and sold, that the name of the new owner be given; also lot No., and owner's address.

On motion, Messrs. Bell and Dobbin, Mr. J. N. Lillico was appointed to look after Road Div. No. 2, pro tem., or until such time as the road commissioners are appointed for the year 1917.

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Dobbin, that the question of the three days from Dec. 20 to 23 as advertised by the tax collector in the local papers, and which was almost compulsory owing to abolishing the custom of collector going to the bank on Wednesdays, be confirmed, and that the collector be exempt from any obligation regarding said three days.

Bylaw No. 731, appointing Dr. T. N. Greer medical health and indigent officer for the township, and defining his duties, was passed.

Mr. Dobbin reported that the work on the Long Swamp road was done under Mr. Ward's commissionership, and had been completed.

It was moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Williams that the township do not pay the Peterboro Hardware Co. $3 for cartage on cement.

The following bills were presented: Examiner Printing Co., supplies for 1916, $190.73; Peter Hamilton Co., grinding knife, $1.50; [illegible] re judge's voters list court, $20.32. — Moved and [illegible] Henry and Bell that bills be paid.

Allowances Made.

The following allowances were made under bylaws:

Wm. Laing, D.R.O.	$3.50
James B. Fowler, P.C.	2.50
W. B. Anderson, D.R.O.	2.50
Walter T. Byers, P.C.	2.50

Andrew Kent, P.C.	2.50
Treas. S.S. No. 2, use of the school for election	4.00
W. J. Brady, use of store for election	4.00

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Bell that the council next meet in May's school house the second Monday in each month at 7 p.m.

Moved and seconded by Messrs. Henry and Williams that a meeting be held in May's school house on Monday, Jan. 15, 1917, at 8 p.m., for the purpose of discussing the road question and the advisability of having stones drawn this winter to be crushed and put on the road next spring. All interested ratepayers are requested to be present.

JAIL BREAKER WAS CAPTURED

BOWMANVILLE, Jan. 10.—Excitement prevails in town over the arrest of George Arnold, the one-armed man who escaped from Whitby jail a week ago by knocking the jailer down and making his escape. The arrest was made by Chief Constable R. Jarvis. When taken Arnold was eating a lunch in the C.P.R. station. On being searched, a loaded revolver was found in his hip pocket, which, fortunately, he did not get an opportunity to use. He is now in the town lock-up, under close guard.

Suffragettes Are Active

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Carrying their fight for suffrage to the gates of the White House, 13 congressional union women pickets took their positions at the east and west entrances to the mansion grounds at 10 o'clock, and will be relieved at stated periods by other sentinels.

The women stand as mute symbols of women's desire for the vote, and their purpose marked the beginning of a campaign of more militancy to accomplish their ends.

Lindsay Woman Fined $203.20

LINDSAY, Jan. 10.—As a session of the police court on Monday, a woman residing in the southeast section of the town was fined $203.20 by Police Magistrate Moore for selling liquor without a license.

License Inspector Thornbury laid the information. He had suspected that liquor was being doled out in a certain house, and proceeded to make investigation. It was not long before he received sufficient information to warrant him laying an information.

For the past few days heavy fines have been imposed on a number of citizens who have bid the law defiance. The authorities are determined to enforce the law to the letter and will show no mercy to those who attempt to violate it. Public sentiment is behind the new prohibitory law so it is useless for anyone to try and evade it and expect to escape punishment.

AGED PRISONER LIBERATED

Robert Parker Was Serving Life Term on a Charge of Murder.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 9.—Robert Parker, aged about seventy-seven years, has been liberated from Portsmouth Penitentiary after nearly seven years' imprisonment on a charge of the murder of his neighbour, Wm. Masters, near Tweed, in April 1910. In October, 1910 he was sentenced to die by hanging in December, but early in December his sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life. He has been an exemplary prisoner. His son will take him to the West and give him a home. Parker was a trapper by occupation, and was convicted on circumstantial evidence.

TEA MARKET STILL RISING.

An increase in the ocean freight rates of two and one-half cents a pound added to an advance of from six to ten cents a pound in the cost of Tea at the primary markets, has necessitated the recent increase in the cost of tea in Canada. To keep faith with the public and maintain exactly the same high standard of quality as always, "SALADA" has advanced in price, but, as yet, only five cents a pound.

Dry House Has Been Cleaned Out

The removal of debris from what is left of the dry-house of the Quaker Oats plant has been completed. This section of the building has been cleaned out right to the bottom. A large gang of men are now working on the north section of the mill. The dry-house where so many men lost their lives presents a strange sight. The debris has been cleaned out right down to the basement floor. A few steel columns supporting a number of twisted girders are all that remain of the structure. The boiler room, transformer room have both been cleaned out. Directly north of the plant is enough scrap metal to start a foundry. In fact there are acres of it. It is difficult to believe that any one plant could have housed so much machinery which in a little over an hour was reduced to scrap. It is estimated that at least seventy-five per cent. of the metal will be available for scrap metal. The rest is so badly burned as to be unfit for any commercial purpose.

Considerable speculation exists as to how the remains of the six-storey fire proof warehouse will be taken down. From what is known at present it is the intention of the wreckers to take the building down from the top and not blow it down as was first proposed. The building is bound together with reinforced concrete and will present a number of difficulties.

Harry K. Thaw Is Returning To New York

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 10.—Harry Kendall Thaw is now on his way to New York to surrender to the authorities for trial on an indictment charging that he kidnapped and brutally whipped a Kansas City Youth. That was the declaration shortly after noon by Thaw's attorney.

At Home Was Great Success

The 'At Home' held under the auspices of St. Peter's ladies in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum on Monday p.m. was a financial as well as a social success.

The amount realised being $63.25. In view of the short notice, this was very gratifying.

The gentleman's prize, a silk umbrella, donated by Rev. Father Phelan, was won by Mr. J. McDonald, Sacred Heart parish, and the ladies' prize, a beautiful piece of hand-painted china, donated by Miss M. Lynch, Park street, was won by Miss Marguerite Merrill.

The ladies of the society are very grateful to all those who kindly helped to make it a success. Those contributing towards the music, etc., and to the people who so kindly came to help the orphans. Their reward will be the prayers of the orphans, who never forget to pray for their benefactors.

1400 Birds A New Record At Poultry Show

If you have never heard a "cock-a-doodle-do" chorus, you should look in at the poultry show in the market hall, where fourteen hundred birds are performing. These are not the usual back yard pikers that have neither name nor fame, except that of neighborhood nuisance on summer evenings and early mornings. These are real class, some of them a hundred dollar bill could not separate from their present owners. Fixing the average price at seven or eight dollars a bird, and that is said to be a moderate estimate the value of the entire exhibit runs close to the ten thousand dollar mark.

For these are birds of distinction and class, blue-blooded and blue beribboned, and in spite of, or perhaps because of their rank in the poultry artistocracy, their vocal work is of a high order. The big buff Wyan, dottes, the White and Barred Rocks, and Buff Cochins, constitute the base section. The sopranos are strong in the Leghorns, Games, Andalusians, and others, the Orpingtons take the lead in the tenor row, but the altos are weak or inarticulate. But the supporting symphony comprising the ducks, guinea fowl and other fowls,

The local poultry enthusiasts are delighted with the exhibition and its entry list of 300 or more birds, than ever before. Harry Lush, George Paxman, Archie Brault and others are in their glory with all the birds around, especially fancy birds. Mr. George Robertson of Ottawa, is the judge, and will scarcely complete his work today. Mr. James Baptie, of Springville, is assisting. Both are performing their duties thoroughly and are followed by quite a gathering of poultry fanciers.

Mr. J. J. Hartley had eight birds entered and took eight prizes with his Silver Grey Dorkings. Mr. James Booth is also a winner in this class. W. J. Munroe of Grafton, is represented with White Orpingtons and Langhorns; F. L. Walsh, of Warkworth, and Mr. H. T. Lush practically divide the Buff Cochins. The Brahmas include birds shown by C. H. Bartow of Peterborough, Curtis Bros. of Norham ,and E. S. Waite of Belleville.

Archie Brault has taken two special prizes for White Wyandottes, cock and cockerell.

Miss Yates will give another address to-night on the handling of poultry. If you are interested in fowl you should see this show. It is stated that there are birds shown here that are not placed in the prize list, yet they were winners at Guelph. If you have just plain hens at home you will find an inspiration in the quality of the poultry that crowd the numerous coops at the market hall.

The only change affecting Peterboro in the C.P.R. revised schedule is in connection with the local which will leave here at 7.35 a.m., and arrive in Toronto at 10.20 a.m. It will leave Toronto at 5.40 p.m. and reach Peterboro at 8.40 p.m. The change becomes effective on Jan. 15th.

REFORMATORY BURNS.

Two Negro Prisoners Meet Death in Flames.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 10. — Two negro prisoners were suffocated, one was probably fatally burned, and more than fifty others narrowly escaped death in a fire which started in cell house "A" at the State Reformatory at Frankfort.

The building was the oldest reformatory, and it was necessary to unlock each cell individually. Before the rescue could be completed the entrance was blocked by flames, leaving more than fifty prisoners cut off.

A hurry call was sent for dynamite. A hole was blown through the wall and the work of rescue resumed.

More than fifty prisoners overcome by smoke were sent to the reformatory hospital after being revived.

The burned building housed more than 800 prisoners.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Soup bones, dried fruits, the baking of bread or any food that requires long cooking, should be done on the ironing days. This is one method of saving fuel.

To keep a meringue from falling dust the beaten whites of eggs with powdered sugar, then shake a little cornstarch over it, beat quickly again and spread on the pie.

When a head of lettuce or a bunch of celery comes in from the market, clean it at once, wrap it in a cloth and put it in the ice box. It will be ready and crisp when you want it.

FAVOURITE STARS AT THE ROYAL THEATRE

A rare treat is in store for the patrons of the Royal Theatre to-night. The attractions are William Farnum in "Fighting Blood," presenting six magnificent reels. Mr. Farnum may be called one of the world's famous and distinguished actors. "Fighting Blood" was inspired by the popular old song "My Old Kentucky Home." Other star actors of the William Fox Corporation will be presented. And then the new Mutual Charlie Chaplin will be seen in his humorous comedy entitled "The Vagabond," in two awfully funny reels. Hundreds of laughs are in store for the patrons of the Royal to-night.

NO GAME IN LINDSAY

There will be no game in Lindsay to-night, the 247th and the Lindsay management not being able to make the arrangements. The soldiers will practice to-night and may go to Lindsay to-morrow.

STILL "ENGLAND!"

In Britain's day of stress, Scotsmen, Irishmen, Englishmen, Canadians, etc.,—Britons all—are rallying around the old flag; yet Englishmen and the English press continue to speak and write of "England" at war and "English" troops, ships, etc. They may mean well, but we Scotsmen feel "out of it" when the country "runs the Tweed" is seemingly belittled.

The English navy in its might
Is out upon the main;
The English army—some in kilts—
Is at the front again..
The dogs of war are loosened,
And gathering for the fray;
But the British troops and British ships—
I wonder, where are they?

'Twas England that declared war,
And she will see it through:
How kind she is to Britain,
Doing all there is to do!
We Scots and Irish do not count,
We're nothing in the scale;
I wonder if the Scotsmen fled,
Would England have turned tail!

England will stand by Belgium,
And France and Russia, too;
But English papers never say
What Britain means to do.
For treaty obligations
We are told that England fights,
Yet our country's name is "Britain,"
As all know, by treaty rights.

To our treaty obligations,
We Scots have aye been true,
In every clime o'er all the world,
Fought for the Red, White and Blue;
Still Englishmen continue—
Though to their lasting shame—
To speak and write of Britain
Falsely under "England's" name.

When blood has flowed like water,
And midst the heaps of slain
Lie stalwart Scot and brawny Celt
Who victory helped to gain—
The glory will be England's,
Like every other thing!
'Tis England this and England that,
Flag, Navy, Army, King!

Still let Scotsmen do their duty,
In Britain's day of war,
A greater cause than England's
Nerves Scottish hearts by far.
For Britain and the Empire
We Scotsmen draw the sword,
And not like hired mercenaries,
As if England were our lord!

—A Scot of Scots.

EVERYDAY READING

"How can we get acquainted with God? How can we know His will concerning us? These are questions that concern us, and demand a clear, unmistakable answer to the same. It was said to me once, quite a few years ago: The trouble with us is: we are not willing not to know; we want to have it as it were down in black and white. In my unsettled and restless state of mind at that time I made answer, saying, I could not believe that God Almighty allowed us to come into the world, and then allowed us to grope our way through in the dark. And yet I did not know how He would let the light shine upon my pathway. Previous to that, when perhaps a mere child, I read in the Old Testament Scriptures of God speaking to different persons at different times, and I looked around to see if I could find anyone who God spoke to in my day. I failed to find anyone. What was I to believe? That these statements in Scripture were untrue? That God never spoke to man in the past, does not now and never will, or God did speak to man in the past, does now, and will do so in the future? I did not accept either statements but remained in a state of doubt. Some one may say, we have the word of God (as they call the Scriptures). This will tell us all and answer our questions satisfactorily. You who speak thus have they done so for you? I suppose there are scores of people in our own little city whose ideas of God and His will concerning them are all different; and who will tell us that they have got their belief from (the word of God) the Scriptures. A man asked me a short time ago: What are you to understand in regard to the many creeds of the people, sincerity and common sense judgment being taken for granted, as being at as high a premium in one person as the other. The whole situation looks absurd, when we look at the many religious organizations calling themselves the "church of God." Surely if God is a pure and holy God His church must be pure, and united. It is said Charles Finney, a noted member of the Presbyterian organization, in his day, stated that until the people came to the conclusion that the religion of the churches was not the religion of the Lord Jesus, there was no hope of a genuine revival. "God is love." "God willeth not the eternal death of any." Man is a trinity of being, body, mind and spirit. God is a spirit, and in order to get acquainted with God we must do so through our spiritual nature. There are a few who attempt to seek God through their bodily nature, very many through their mental nature, and a few find Him truly through their spiritual nature. God speaks to man by the Holy Spirit, in no uncertain way. An ignoring of the Holy Spirit will bring to us no certain conclusion in regard to God, and His will concerning us. Divine assurance is a confidence that is satisfactory. Let us know God for ourselves. Yield to the Holy Spirit, who will reveal to you Jesus as the way, the truth and the life.

VICTOR.

SOLDIERS IN GOOD HEALTH.

French soldiers have withstood the awful rigors and privations of the fighting during the wet fall in the sector around Verdun with notably little sickness. The army doctor in charge of a division told the Associated Press correspondent the number of sick in many of the battalions was as low as three or four per thousand.

Men in the front line are put to the trying experience of remaining for days at a time in the open, crouching in shell holes which have been joined together by stiff spade work. At this period of the year the frequent rains and the wet mists drench them to the skin while the mud in which they lie soon changes their uniforms from a light blue to a colour which is indistinguishable from the field gray of the Germans or the khaki of the British. At the same time their food, which of course has to be eaten cold, is often spoilt by the foul water penetrating their haversacks, and their small supply of water or other drink is often exhausted long before they are relieved.

King Constantine Writes Letter To The President Approving Plea For Peace

Hellenic Monarch Declares That Mr. Wilson's Proposal Was Prompted by a High Spirit of Political Sagacity—Ruler Outlines "Wrongs Done to Greece" By Entente Powers.

"THE SOUL OF GREECE"

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 11.—King Constantine of Greece has set the seal of his approval upon the peace proposal of President Wilson, declaring that the President's action looks "to a peace honourable to all" and that the President has been "prompted by a spirit of high political sagacity."

A personal letter from King Constantine to President Wilson was received at the State Department.

After two paragraphs of praise for President Wilson King Constantine employs the rest of his letter to set forth "a succinct and necessarily incomplete picture" of the wrongs done to Greece by the Entente Powers, declaring the suspicions of those Powers of the intentions of the Greek government to be unfounded. After the most bitter denunciation of the Entente Powers, Constantine declares that his letter "is not intended to be a criticism of the cruel attacks on her (Greece) sovereignty and neutrality, the effects of which Greece has been obliged to suffer." Here is the full text of the letter:—

"ATHENS, 16-29, Dec., 1916.

Mr. President:—I desire to express to you, Mr. President, my sentiments of sincere admiration and of heartfelt sympathy for the generous initiative that you have taken with a view of determining whether this is nit a propitous moment to undertake a negotiation that might put an end to the sanguinary struggle which is devastating the earth.

HIGH POLITICAL SAGACITY.

"Coming from a statesman who in this critical period of humanity is at the head of the great American republic, your humanitarian efforts, prompted by a spirit of high political sagacity and looking to a peace honourable for all, can only contribute notably to hastening the re-establishment of normal conditions and to assure in a permanent state of international relations the evolution of humanity toward progress in which the United States of America have at all times taken a large part.

"Greece, more than any other neutral country, has suffered in this world wide crisis; without being a belligerent she has known the horrors of war; for more than a year since the landing of the Allied troops at Salonika the entire territory of Macedonia has been invaded on all side by the opposing armies, which entered the cities and ports, suppressed the authorities of the country and even seized war material therein. Long before this the islands and ports of Greece were occupied by the foreign fleets, and this desire of the Powers to insure the safety of the Allied armies operating in Macedonia, which no one in Greece had any thought of threatening, has brought about the guarantees that have been required and furnished, even to measures of violence and coercion, after thrusting themselves into the domestic life of the country, abolishing, in fact, the functioning of the constitutional Powers. Our fleet has been sequestrated and our army, reduced so as hardly to suffice for the preserving of order, has been forced to disperse and withdraw toward the south.

"A misunderstanding which we, ourselves, were the first to regret and which resulted in a sanguinary conflagration when the foreign battalions attempted to occupy the heights dominating the capital even provoked a bombardment of an open city and of my palace.

STARVATION FACED.

"At the present time, in spite of the acceptance of the last ultimatum, a so-called pacific blockade has been established over the Greek coasts and islands, intercepting all communication and all commerce, even with neutral countries, and exposing the entire population of the country to starvation.

"We proposed a mixed commission of inquiry, which would have laid the responsibility where it belonged, and we were ready to accept its verdict in advance. We have never received a reply. As if that were not enough, a violent revolt has been added to a movement, which in the beginning appeared to have an object co-operation in the war with the hope of spreading to the capital when the sailors that had been landed marched against Athens after having spread terror throughout our new provinces, where action on our part was rendered impossible. The revolt was easily repressed, thanks to the loyalty of almost the whole of the Greek nation faithfully devoted to her institutions.

"Such are the conditions in which your proposal finds my country. This succinct and necessarily incomplete picture is not intended to be a criticism of the cruel attacks on her sovereignty and neutrality the effects of which Greece has been obliged to suffer.

"I have only desired to show you, Mr. President, how much the soul of Greece aspires to peace at the present time, and how greatly she appreciates your proposal, which marks so important a stage in the course of the sanguinary, world-wide tragedy which we are witnessing.

(Signed) CONSTANTINE R."

GERMAN RAIDER REPORTED SUNK IN THE ATLANTIC

But No Details Are Available to Back Up This Rumour—British Cruiser Credited With It—Lamport and Holt Liner Said to Have Been Recaptured.

RAIDER WAS WELL ARMED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, January 11.—Persistently rumoured here that a British cruiser has sunk a German raider in the Atlantic, and the French liner Voltaire has turned up at Bermudas.

NEW YORK, January 11.—Persistent reports that a German raider was met in the Atlantic and sunk by a British cruised were current yesterday in well-informed steamship cricles. Details are lacking, as is the identity of the vessels engaged and the location of the encounter.

Coupled with these reports was a statement by the Lamport and Holt line, owners of the overdue steamship Voltaire, that rumours had come to them that their vessel was in one of the ports of Bermuda. The officers of the line say they had heard that the Voltaire, after capture by a German raider, had been re-captured and taken to Bermuda, but that their information was unofficial. The Voltaire was last reported to have left Liverpool on November 28 for New York.

WAS WELL ARMED.

Cable advices from London under date of December 9 told of reports that a German raider had succeeded in getting through the British cordon around the North Sea. Soon after, wireless warnings from naval stations at Gibraltar and the Bermudas were heard at frequent intervals cautioning allied shipping to look out for a raider. One of the warnings intercepted by a neutral vessel and made public here, described the raider as a vessel of about 4,000 tons, 400 feet long, well armed, and fitted with torpedo tubes. Allied ships were instructed to "take all precautions when approaching any other ship at sea."

Several unconfirmed reports of a raider being sighted have reached shipping men here. One report put the unknown in the vicinity of the Azores; another several hundred miles off Halifax, and a recent report brought here by a pilot, was that the raider was 400 miles off Sandy Hook. The wireless warnings have been repeated daily since December 9.

Municipal Dairies Coming And Will Lower Milk Cost Declares Leading Expert

Farmers Are Urged to Grow More Potatoes Than Ever, by Speaker Who Tells of Big Profits To Be Made—A Comparison of the Production of Barley and Oats—Weed Eradication.

GUELPH, Jan. 11.—The 38th annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union opened at Massey Hall, Ontario Agricultural College. There was an exceptionally large attendance and the short course students completely filled the hall. In each of the past five years the annual meeting of the experimental union has been held at the time of the opening of the short courses in seed and stock judging, poultry and beekeeping. This year several other courses are also in proportion, so the attendance is exceptionally large.

President J. B. Fairbairn of Beamsville presided, and Dr. Creelman welcomed the delegates commenting on the importance of the work they are carrying on, and paying a tribute to the work of Dr. Zavitz, secretary of the conference and head of the field husbandry department at the college.

Splendid Growth.

Dr. Zavitz, in his report, showed the remarkable growth of the union and the experiments that had been carried on. In agriculture alone there had been no less than 84,306 district tests made throughout the province.

Owing to scarcity of labour and unfavourable weather conditions, the number of experiments in 1916 was only 3,336. The co-operative experiments of the past year, however, have furnished valuable results, which should assist in the betterment of crop production in Ontario.

"In each of the past two years," said Dr. Zavitz, "the weather conditions in Ontario have been abnormal, and the results of the experiments, therefore, have a peculiar interest, and in some instances a special value. Caution should be taken not to draw definite and permanent conclusions from the results of the past two years. In comparing these results, however, with those of other years, they are of special importance and in many cases are quite suggestive."

Highest in Test.

In his report on experiments, Dr. Zavitz pointed out that out of 46 tests of oats, O.A.C. No. 72 stood highest, with an average yield of 47.07 bushels to the acre; out of four tests of six-rowed barley and emmer, O.A.C. No. 21 was high, with a yield of 25.42 bushels per acre. Hulless barley yielded an average of 25.91 bushels to the acre; spring wheat an average of 20.37 bushels; winter wheat, Imperial Amber, stood high with 39.08 bushels; spring rye, O.A.C. No. 26, 23.14 bushels; field peas, Potter, 29.52 bushels; field beans, Pearce's Improved Tree, 22.09 bushels; soy beans, brown, 14.67 bushels.

A comparison of the production of oats and barley in 1915 and 1916 showed that the latter was very much lower than last year, in some cases the difference being very marked. The root crop of 1916 was also very poor. The growing of cabbage for feed was also urged.

Results showed the potato crop the poorest in Ontario for 35 years.

Weed Eradication.

"Weed Eradication" was the subject of Professor Hewitt's address. Seven experiments in all have been tried, viz.: The use of rape in the destruction of the perennial sow-thistle; a system of intensive cropping and cultivation to kill the same weeds; the use of rape to kill twitch grass; spraying with iron sulphate to destroy mustard in cereal crops; deep cultivation to destroy the ox-eye daisy. It was found that good cultivation, followed by rape sown in drills, provides a means of eradicating both perennial sow-thistle and twitch grass; rape is a more satisfactory crop to use in the destruction of twitch grass than buckwheat; in this the seeding should be done deep in a drill and not broadcast.

Professor Dean, in advocating the food value of milk, urged that at 10 cents a quart it was still cheap food. He had a new idea, as follows: "It looks as though the milk business will in the near future be controlled and managed by the municipalities, similar to the plan adopted for water supply, gas, electric lights, etc., thus doing away with unnecessary duplication of plants, etc., and the cost should come down as a result." He also urged Government control of cold storage plants.

On Potatoes.

F. C. Hart of Toronto, spoke on "Potato Growers' Co-operative Association.' The speaker stated that in the province of Ontario there were eight or nine organizations, but only two that were producing potatoes solely. One-third of the production of potatoes in Canada came from Ontario, and yet it was necessary to import from both ends of the Dominion. Ontario should grow enough to hold the position to export, because it had been proved that the potato-growing industry here was a profitable one. Where organizations had been effected this result had been particularly noted. The individual grower could not properly market his production properly. He strongly advocated the grading of potatoes, and suggested the following grades: Fancy, No. 1 and No. 2. In figures, the potato industry in Ontario amounted to nearly $20,000,000, and that was more than any three provinces in Canada.

Prices Not Proper.

Andrew Elliott of Galt, gave it as his opinion that the present high cost of living was due to the fact that the farmers in the past had not received the proper price for their produce. Since the days of the old time farmer education has been so pronounced in furthering farming, that the new school of farmers want the proper price for their produce, and insist on their farms paying. The new condition of the market for potatoes should make it a profitable industry, but still the farmer hesitates because, as the speaker said, he had been bitten before, and was wary of taking another chance.

In his opinion he Irish Cobbler was the best early potato and the Green Mountain a good late potato. He considered that at the present time it was a short-sighted policy on the part of the farmer to refrain from going in strongly for potatoes. But he should go in for one variety or a kindred of variety. He advocated an educational propaganda as to how potatoes should be grown and marketed. The market should be watched carefully and steady prices should prevail, or it would go back to old conditions again.

It is good economy to have a croquette pot in the refrigerator, and all odds and ends of meat that are good can be put into the pot and saved for croquettes.

Was Anaemic
FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from this or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more. When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"
By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"In the music room, I think, sir." Hamilton thought that he detected in the butler's voice a note of anxiety, and for a moment he glanced with a keen scrutiny into the servitor's eyes and the eyes dropped under his gaze.

"Very well. I shall not need you again to-night." The Titan turned, and climbed the stairs.

The lights of the music room were burning brightly and on a table stood siphons and bottles and glasses. At the door Hamilton paused and glanced uneasily about, then he saw Paul, and smiled. Weary with his vigil, Paul, the affectionate and faithful, had evidently fallen asleep in his chair. Hamilton crossed and laid a hand on his brother's shoulder. Then as quickly he withdrew it. Something unaccustomed in the younger man's appearance arrested him and he stood gazing down.

The musician sprawled in an attitude of demoralized inertia and over his cameo face the dark hair hung disordered. His hands fell grotesquely and his closed eyes were puffed. Hamilton bent down and with a low oath studied his brother. His sleep was no natural napning. It was a drunken stupor proclaiming itself in a stertorous and uneasy breathing.

Angrily Hamilton shook the sagging shoulders until the sleeper's lids opened heavily and his lips voiced some incoherent thing. Then Paul attempted to turn his face away and go to sleep again.

"So," exclaimed the elder as he began to drag his brother to his feet, and restored him to a semblance of consciousness, "so this is the way you waited for me?"

Paul blinked owlishly through the stupidity of his condition, and upon his delicate features the unaccustomed and swollen flush dwelt in a disfiguring blot. He shook his head and informed thickly, "Jefferson Edwardes is dead!"

"I know that—and you're drunk."

The musician stupidly nodded his assent to so incontrovertible a statement and as he gradually awoke to a fuller realization, he rose and made his way unsteadily to the piano. But his fingers were stiff and unresponsive, and after a brief effort he gave that up.

Once more he looked up and an expression of deep terror spread over his face. Tears welled into his eyes, and he wept for awhile in silence as Hamilton looked on.

"Jefferson Edwardes's dead," he reiterated with parrot like singleness of idea. "Mary's heart's broke. . . . I am drunk." One hand waved broadly in an oratorical gesture. After a moment he added in solemn afterthought "Father's drunk, too."

Hamilton ground his teeth. "I suppose," he said bitterly, "you regard the first two acts as justification for the others."

Paul rose and through his condition something of his more normal self asserted itself. He laid his hands on his brother's shoulders. "Hamilton, I think my heart's broke, too. Mary's a sweet girl. I haven't slept for a long, long time—been worrying—an' to-night—"

"Never mind explaining." Out of the elder brother's voice the wrath had died. 'That won't help now. Come, I'll put you to bed."

As he turned away from Paul's bedroom a half hour later the face of Hamilton Burton was not the face of a conqueror. In his own room he went to a window and looked out. He saw a star and some fancy identified it as the same star that had caught his eye that night when he came back to the farm house and found his father ill. Once more it was not in the east riding towards the upper heavens, but in the west, setting beyond the Palisades of Jersey—soon to drop from view.

For a breathing space Hamilton Burton felt faint and uncertain as one might feel in a dream which is half-wakefulness.

Then he was conscious of his own voice speaking half-aloud:

"Slivers Martin paid me ten for 'em and I got 'em for seven—an' he had to go after 'em."

The words had come involuntarily—as from another person speaking with his tongue; and they started him. With a fierce impatient gesture he brushed his hand across his forehead and picked up from a table a new appreciation of the life and the campaigns of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Yamuro slipped in with his cushioned tread and stood waiting orders, and after a while the master whose attention refused to remain fixed even on Napoleon, glanced upwards.

"You may go, Yamuro," he said in a wearied voice, but the Japanese valet did not go. Instead he approached and his face grew anxious as he noted the confused and fatigued droop of his master's eyes and lips.

"Souse, please," he hazarded as his white teeth flashed in an apologetic grin. "You tired. You go down gymnasium—take exercise—one half hour. Yes, one half hour, and me rub you Japanese way; make you sleep—yes, please."

Hamilton Burton raised his head slowly. "Perhaps," he acceded in a dull voice, "that might not be a bad idea. I do feel a bit fagged—for some reason—and I need to be fit to-morrow. To-morrow will be a decisive day."

So with the narrow-eyed little servitor in whose breast beat a heart of unquestioning loyalty, the un-triumphant victor went down into the basement of his house where between the marble slabs and porphyry columns he had equipped a small gymnasium finished with the magnificence of a Roman bath.

Beyond an arched portal was another room where the basin of a swimming pool spread cool and inviting between mosaic floors.

Here each morning Hamilton plunged into the icy water and came out with a splendid vitality glowing on his firm flesh. But at night he used only the warm shower and when they came into the gymnasium they did not touch the switch which lighted the pool.

Then Hamilton Burton stripped and attacked the punching bag until his muscles glistened and shone as if they had been freshly oiled. Yamuro stood looking on with sparkling eyes. Hamilton Barton stripped and in action, would have brought a glow of delight to the face of those Hellenic masters of training who saw in the human body the most sacred temple of the human soul and paid tribute to physical perfection. The flow and ripple of those strong, justly modelled sinews were like the play of steel under satin and their smoothness was as rhythmic and full of power as some young gladiator's, who might have stirred the appreciation of Phidias or Praxiteles. When at last he had burned his mental restlessness into physical weariness, Burton halted and stood with his shoulders thrown back, and his head erect, the breathing of chest and abdomen as regular and deep as the sequence of waves at flood tide. Yamuro went into still another room for the accessories of his Japanese art of muscle-kneading and Hamilton turned idly toward the darkened swimming pool. He strolled over to the edge of the marble basin and walked out on the spring board. It was all very dark in here but his feet were familiar with every foot of space

"I might as well cap it with a plunge," he told himself, and lifting his hands above his head launched outward in a graceful arc.

Yamuro came back a moment later and looked about the empty gymnasium. His face suddenly went pale. "Mr. Burton—please!" he screamed, and in his excitement his voice was more than ordinarily sibilant. Then he turned on the pool light and rushed frantically back. It had not occurred to him to warn his chief that that afternoon the basin had been emptied and repaired, and that below the diving board were only six inches of water, just enough to give back, in semi darkness, a liquid reflection, and beneath that solid slabs of marble.

Yamuro peered over the edge and a deep groan broke from him. At the bottom lay the figure of Hamilton Burton with its head bent to one side. It lay very still and the water was slowly coloring from a bad wound in the scalp.

CHAPTER XXV.

Hamilton Burton had always denied with scorn the existence of blind luck as an element in human greatness or failure. Now if he had leaped headforemost into an empty swimming pool, at the exact moment when he stood midway of an enterprise which should crown him as omnipotent—or ruin him, perhaps it was a thing beyond coincidence. Yesterday he had aligned colossal forces for to-day's conflict—and taken his toll of vengeance. To-day he must turn to profit the chaos he had wrought to that end through plans known only to himself—and to-day he lay with a fractured skull—sleeping the sleep of unconsciousness.

To-day every hand in the world of finance was turned against him with the desperation of a struggle for survival—save those of his own lieutenants who were leaderless. All the way down the line from the Department of Justice to the small sufferers of the province a slogan of war without quarter sounded against the most hated man in America. That such would be the case he had known yesterday but he also knew—or thought he did—that his directing hand would still be on the tiller and his uncannily shrewd brain would be puzzling, bewildering and deluding his enemies into unwittingly serving his ends.

From the morning papers the secret of his accident had been successfully withheld. So the press of the country sounded forth a united thunder peal of stinging and bitter anathema, pillorying Hamilton M. Burton as the most menacing of all public enemies and an ogre who had in a single day fattened his already superlative wealth on his sufferings, the starvation and the lives of his victims. Editorial pages from Park row to a thousand main street, double leaded and double-columned their clamorous demand that such a plunderer should be nailed to the cross of punishment. Burton-Phobia was epidemic. At first the physicians who gathered in his darkened room would not commit themselves to any promise of recovery. The skull was fractured. Ahead lay a long illness at best—after that—but here they left off words and resorted to a non-committal shrugging of frock-coated shoulders.

"Do you mean," Elizabeth Burton put the question with trembling lips and chalk white cheeks, "that perhaps—even if he gets physically well—She, too, broke off.

"Frankness is best," responded the family physician, who feeling the most personal responsibility, assumed the hard role of spokesman. "Sometimes in cases of this sort the brain is left—with a permanent scar upon its efficiency."

The mother groaned. At her home lay a daughter in that collapse which had followed the over taxed courage of the first shock. Here lay Hamilton, her oldest; her Napoleonic boy, for whose condign punishment a nation's voice cried out. To her they were simply her children, equally dear.

Only one child was left her in his proper condition of mind and body. He because of his sensitive clairvoyant nature, had always been very close to her. Now she turned to Paul, and Paul, although his heart was shaken with terror and distress, rose for the time beyond his weakness and was almost a man as he sought to brace his mother's need.

From her first interview with the doctors she went to the music room and pausing on the threshhold, heard him at the piano. He was singing very low.

"If I were hanged to the highest tree
—Mother o' mine, Mother o' mine,
I know whose prayers would come up to me—Mother o' mine.'"

She went in and Paul took her in his arms and then helped her to a chair. Then as he had used to do when a little boy he knelt down, gazing into her face while she talked, and she reached out a hand, which was much thinner since her own late illness, and ran it through the dark hair over his white forehead. For a merciful little moment it seemed to this grief stricken woman that she was no longer white-haired and beautifully gowned. In her fancy the fingers with their wealth of rings were again red with the drudgery of the washtub, and the head that she caressed was the head of a little boy who because he was delicate and shrinking found a greater delight here at her knee than in the rougher companionship of playmates. Paul spoke softly.

Women as Brave As the Men

THEIR STRUGGLE SHOWS A REMARKABLE SPIRIT.

Talk of the bravery of men, but where can you find a finer spirit than among the half-sick women who are fighting and struggling to do their duty against the terrible odds of ill-health, and who will not give up.

One woman in every three is struggling against weakness. Most of them are not exactly sick, but, oh, how miserable!

The burden and misery of it all has its foundation in the blood which is thin and watery. The red cells are too few. The very stream of life is reduced in vitality. Weakness and inevitable ill-health are the certain result.

Every ailing or weak woman can quickly regain her health in this very simple way. By filling the system with the nutrition that comes from rich red blood, a quick change for the better will result. To accomplish this, take two chocolate-coated Ferrosone Tablets after each meal. You'll feel better immediately for the simple reason that Ferrosone renews the blood. It gives you vim, vigor, endurance, restores a tired, worn-out system very quickly.

You'll feel like new all over once you get Ferrosone working through your blood. It puts color into faded cheeks, brightens the eye, quickens the step, brings back that wonderful feeling of youth.

One of the finest things Ferrosone does is to make you eat lots and digest it as well. With keen appetite, sound sleep, strong nerves and lots of nourishing blood you're bound to regain robust health. Any sickly girl or ailing woman that Ferrosone won't make well must be incurable. There is a secret power in Ferrosone and it is worth a trial at all events. Fifty cents per box, six for $2.50. At all dealers in medicine, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

BRAILA ONCE A FORTRESS.

Save for Galatz, ten miles below, Braila was the last defence on the right bank of the Danube, the last town in Wallachia on the threshold of Moldavia, opposite which lies the peninsula of Dobrudja, formed by the innumerable esturies of the great river.

In the approaches to Braila from the southeast on Dec. 21, the Russo-Rumanian forces made a firm stand. It was at Cerna, a village about 30 miles southeast of Braila. This gave the armies in the north an opportunity to consolidate their defences on the Sereth which flows almost due south through Moldavia and enters the Danube just south of Galatz. The importance of the stand made at Cerna on Dec. 21 and succeeding days, as obstacles of a drive on Braila and Galatz, may be judged from the following note from Berlin:

"The front of the Germanic powers has now been reduced by a distance of 560 miles, which is the limit to which it is considered possible to reduce it."

Still the capture of Braila reduces it a little more as will a further direct advance on Galatz.

Braila, a port of some 60,000 inhabitants, principally engaged in the export trade of grain, was once a formidable fortress, playing an important part in the varied history of the country. Since 1838 it has had communication by rail through Moldavia and to the Southwest, via Buzen, with Bucharest, 103 miles away. During the last 30 years it has rapidly supplanted Galatz in trade importance, but not in strategic importance, for Galatz forms the right of the important Sereth line of fortifications and has a modern fortified front of some ten miles facing north and west from Lake Bratisu to the mouth above the Sereth-Danube confluence.

During the Russo-Turkish war of 1828-29 Braila, one of the strongest Turkish fortresses, was besieged and captured by the Second Russian Corps. In the forty five weeks war of 1877-78 it again suffered the same fate.

When Rumania absorbed the terrain in 1878 the old fortifications were demolished, as those of Galatz were deemed of sufficient protection from the north. No measures had been taken before the present war to protect the port from the south, east or west.

Indigestion Resulted From An Inactive Liver
The Bowels Became Constipated and the Whole Digestive System Upset

With many people constipation becomes a habit. And it is a dangerous habit which is certain sooner or later to cause serious disease.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the first and most important rule of health. When the liver becomes torpid the flow of bile into the intestines is stopped and the bowels become constipated. But you can readily overcome this condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no treatment obtainable which so promptly awakens the activity of the liver and bowels and thereby corrects derangements of the digestive system.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, of Beaver Brook, Albert Co., N.B., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a great medicine for constipation. I have suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, but got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so benefited that I began to study this malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion. I cannot praise this medicine too highly, and would advise anyone suffering from indigestion or constipation to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. My husband also claims that these pills have done him more good than any medicine he ever used. You are at liberty to use this letter."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively relieve and cure torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, indigestion, backache and kidney disease. Put it to the test. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

SIDELIGHTS OF CONFLICT PORTRAYED BY PEN AND CAMERA

Prussian Super-Zeppelin Carries 60 Bombs, 9 Guns

Ruin of the L-33, Destroyed in Raid on England, Is Inspected by Party of Newspaper Men—Weaknesses of Air Monster Before Foe Is Shown.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

That airships of the Zeppelin type are vulnerable, that when they come in contact with things that can hit back they are helpless indeed, is what the remains of the L-33, now lying open to the public gaze in a field "somewhere in Essex," tell.

The most serious blow to the Prussians in their airship raids on London in September and October, in which they lost four airships, was the present they were compelled to make of a super-Zeppelin—the L-33—to the British authorities.

As some compensation to the suburbs which suffered damage on the night of September 23 it may be said that the Zeppelin which caused most of it has provided means to all the drawings in the construction of just such a machine—and a better—though it is doubtful whether the English want such things unless for naval reconnoissance. Otherwise they are useless, because it is no part of the English game to raid undefended places for the slaying of the helpless.

Under the guidance of experts a party of newspaper correspondents had a private view of this super-Zeppelin. As was said on the morning that she fell, she looks just like the Crystal Palace in need of glazing. There is a marked depression in the centre of the framework. She is big, certainly, but whichever way she is looked at in detail she suggests the thin skinned and mortal balloon. Yet she was the best that Count Zeppelin could do as things are. She was built this year, and it is believed that the raider was on her maiden voyage. Undamaged petrol tanks bear the date "July 14, 1916," and there are evidences to show that this date does not apply to the tanks alone, but indicates the period at which the fabric was completed and the "Zep" fully equipped for its mission of frightfulness.

Ingeniously Constructed.

There is not much about the structural details which was not fairly well known to the Admiralty before, but minute examination does not detract from the tribute which may, without prejudice, be paid to the ingenious lines on which this monster of the air was built.

"The weight of the Zeppelin," said an officer, "with crew and full load aboard is sixty tons," and for a full hour he talked figures full of interest.

There were six engines, he explained, each developing 250 horse power. All were in gondolas, small and large, shaped like boats.

"This is one of the gondolas," he said, and showed a little aluminum 18-foot boat. The inside was bristling with machinery. In the centre was a large engine which was started by a hand lever. In front of the engine was a little seat. "In that seat," explained the guide, "sat the man who tended the engines. Here, almost touching him, sat the man who manipulated the machine gun, and forward was the place for the sailor who looked after the wireless machinery."

That gondola told the story of the "Zep." Everything was compact, well thought out, strong and efficient, with not an inch of spare room. The beauty of the work and the excellent craftsmanship were apparent to all. Some of the work probably was done by women.

Fabric Was Burned.

Coming to the remains of the main body, which is 750 feet long, the guide explained that 2,000,000 cubic feet of gas were used to expand the twenty-four compartments. Nothing now remains of the fabric, some of which was made of Manchester shirting. It perished in the fire which was started by one of the crew before he deserted the ship.

But the girders remain, and they convey vividly the enormous size of the airship when intact. To demonstrate the lightness of the structure one of the officers lifted with one hand aloft a strip of laced aluminum metal work.

"This piece of wood," he proceeded, pointing to some charred remains in the centre of the tangled wreckage, "is all that remains of what is called the 'catwalk.' It is really the keel of the Zeppelin, which runs the whole length of the ship. Inside the keel is a tunnel, along which the crew can walk and reach any of the gondolas, or indeed any part of the ship."

Another part of the ship which was specially interesting was that which was used as a receptacle for bombs. "The actual bomb dropping apparatus," the guide explained, "has been taken away, but here is the window through which the bombs were dropped. All that the man in charge of the bombs had to do was to open this window and press a button. The machinery did the rest. There was room for sixty bombs in this 'Zep.'"

The guns, or rather the places where the guns had been, was one of the most interesting features. "One was there, two there, two there and another there," said the guide pointing to the sides of the ship. "Another was perched up in the tail and two were on top of the airship. There were nine in all. The calibre of some of them is greater than our English machine guns."

Small metal cylindrical tanks at intervals along the ship contained coiled ropes, which were used for mooring purposes. When the ship was about to come to anchor a lever was pulled and all these ropes shot to the ground simultaneously. By this means the soldiers were able to capture her quickly and guide her to her shed. But that shed will never see her again.

The commissary department of an army is undoubtedly the most necessary and important of all, for it is a well established fact that soldiers cannot fight on empty stomachs. Here we have a scene which conveys the impression that the French soldiers occasionally indulge in the luxury of lamb stew and the like. The large photograph shows a flock of sheep on their last gambol. The smaller one gives a view of the scalding tubs in the army slaughter house, "somewhere in France."

Increased British Maritime Losses Emphasize Menace of Submarines

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

The recent raid on allied and neutral commerce in the West Atlantic lends special interest to some new figures relating to the war losses of the British mercantile marine, which have been given out by the president of the Board of Trade. He informed the House of Commons during the debate on the increase of food prices that Great Britain had actually lost by enemy action and by marine risks 2,000,000 gross tons of shipping since the war began. Mr. Runciman was necessarily vague on this matter, but the round figure which he gave shows that of the 21,045,049 tons of shipping which the British Empire possessed at the start of the war in 1914, there has been a shrinkage of about nine and one-half per cent from all causes during the twenty-seven months of the conflict.

Some part of this large volume of lost tonnage has, of course, been replaced by new construction, but the proportion is very small. It is also considerably below the usual amount of mercantile shipbuilding turned out by the British yards. An article in the Liverpool Journal of Commerce shows the total shipbuilding for the present year to September 30 is 200,000 tons gross, which compares with a normal output of 1,000,000 tons for the same period.

It would be interesting to know how much of the 2,000,000 tons lost was due to the ordinary hazards of the sea and to breaking up, dismantling &c. Roughly, one may estimate that three and a half per cent may be set down to these causes, leaving six per cent as the proportion of loss inflicted by the action of the enemy. Taking the latter figure, it is clear that the rate of loss is on the increase. Nearly a year ago the Board of Trade issued an official return showing that between August 4, 1914, and October 31, 1915, the steamships and sailing vessels sunk, were of 658,190 tons, or a little over two and a half per cent of the whole British mercantile tonnage. If the proportion indicated above is to be accepted, the losses caused by the enemy have more than doubled within the twelve months.

It is manifest from these official figures that the extent and scope of the submarine menace is increasing. Though it is not developing to a vital degree, yet it is becoming more and more difficult to deal with. Earlier in the war the localities in which they operated made it simpler than it is now to find and combat the U-boats, but measures of suppression which are suited to narrow channels and shallow waters obviously cannot be applied when the submarines work in large areas of deep water.

This extension to ocean routes makes interesting a comparison between the operations of, and the damage inflicted by, the cruisers employed in raiding on the one hand, and submarines on the other. The two classes are typified by the Moewe and by the U-53. The former, during the three weeks or more that she was at large on the Atlantic trade routes sank or captured fifteen vessels of 57,835 aggregate tons. The submarine, in one day sank six ships of about 24,000 gross tons.

WHEN A "ZEP" APPEARS OVER OLD LONDON

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.—Thousands of incidents attend every Zeppelin raid on London. During one of the raids a physician, watching the giant airship from the roof of his house, became so excited that he dropped through the skylight into a room where two housemaids were sleeping. The latter rushed to the street in their night clothes and asked a policeman to apprehend the "burglar" in their room.

While many slept unconscious of the raid, others, terror stricken, ran about the streets in nightgowns and pajamas, not knowing what to do. As one raider was brought down a great crowd in one district sang the national anthem.

COMMODORE SUETER, EXPERT IN SEA AND AIR, CHIEF AUTHOR OF "TANKS"

Submarine Commander and Aviation Student Gets Credit for Innovation.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

Since the advent of the "tanks" in the second phase of the great offensive on the Somme some secrecy has shrouded their history. Mr. Lloyd George, in the House of Commons recently, mentioned the names of several officers to whom credit was due, but his statement went very little beyond the mention of names.

The story of the "tanks" has not and cannot yet be fully told, but the mention of the name of Commodore Murray Sueter, R. N., in the House of Commons has carried it one step further.

Commodore Murray Sueter, according to those who are familiar with the facts, had probably more to do with the appearance of the "tanks" as the most modern engine of war than any other man. To him, says the Pall Mall Gazette, must be given the credit for the inception of the idea, whatever part others may have played in its development and application.

In the early days of the war the naval authorities deemed it necessary to establish an aeroplane base at Dunkirk, with temporary bases as far inland as the circumstances at the time permitted. In connection with this plan it became essential that some system of armored car support should be developed. There was not a moment to spare, and Commander Samson, who was on the spot, with characteristic ingenuity and skill, made the most of the material available. Within a very short time there were armored, or protected, cars at work, based on Dunkirk.

These cars were protected by steel plating, but the thickness of the plates they were able to have gave them little real value.

The failure of his first effort did not discourage Commander Samson, and the experiments were continued until a protected car was produced which was capable of resisting enemy rifle fire at point blank range.

The immediate result of this success was that the War Office began to make inquiries, but they went on their own way, and the naval authorities continued to experiment along the lines they had worked out.

Commodore Murray Sueter is understood to have returned to London immediately before the fate of Antwerp, where he had, in the course of his duties, obtained a mass of valuable information with regard to the cars—their weaknesses and defects.

On every hand it was admitted that the wrong lines were being pursued. The cars which "worked" between Antwerp and Dunkirk were obviously lacking in overhead protection; their crews were exposed to fire from houses and trees, against which they were not secure. It was toward the remedying of this grave weakness that the attention of the authorities directly concerned was then directed, with the result that a car with a revolving turret was produced. This, of course, added materially to the weight, but it was found that several well known chassis were capable of carrying it. After much experimental work the cars were produced, and when the time for their employment came they were successful in doing all that was expected of them.

The need for heavier guns than the machine guns the cars carried presented another problem for solution, but lorries were built and protected by shields of armor plate which served the purpose with considerable efficiency.

At this period the insistent demand was for heavier guns, and to the naval men engaged upon the work the "land battle ship" idea made an irresistible appeal.

With energy, enthusiasm and skill Commodore Murray Sueter tackled the problem, and within a few weeks it was possible to subject to practical tests a "battle ship" which answered the requirements as to armor and armament.

Mr. Churchill, the then First Lord, and Lord Fisher, the First Sea Lord, approved the "land battle ship" idea, but when Sir Percy Scott was consulted he was not favorable to it, being convinced that the enemy would quickly succeed in wrecking the "battle ships" by heavy artillery even before they could be brought into action. The size of the target supported Sir Percy Scott's contention, and the strength of the position the famous gunnery expert took up was admitted.

It was at this point that Commodore Murray Sueter hit upon the idea of adapting the Pedrail system to the "land battle ship."

Without delay all the information available in this country and America was obtained, and before Mr. Churchill, Mr. Lloyd George and a group of high War Office officials a demonstration was given of the powers of the "caterpillar" in forcing wire entanglements and surmounting obstacles.

The demonstration was so convincing that instructions were given for the building of a considerable number of "battle ships." Commodore Murray Sueter was instructed to take an important part in bringing the squadron into being, but circumstances interfered to prevent his doing so.

Commodore Murray Sueter, to whom therefore a large share of the credit for the "tanks" must be accorded, was in the early days of the present century perhaps England's most distinguished submarine officer, the book he then wrote on the problems of organizing that service, in the light of his actual experiences as commander of a submarine, being still regarded as the standard work on the subject. He was at one time commander of the ill fated A-1, and before that he commanded the earlier Holland submarines.

From submarines he turned his attention to the air, and he may justly be described as the maker of the Royal Naval Air Service, both before the war and after.

He is an expert on the technicalities of both aeroplanes and seaplanes, and also of airships.

This war has taught France many lessons in the equipment of her soldiers and the transportation of vast armies. In this respect it is safe to say that she leads all other nations at war, with the exception of Germany, whose splendid arrangement in every department of her military system is well known. In the above photographs the reader gathers a fair idea of the efficiency of one branch of the equipment department of the French government. The large picture shows a number of women in the workroom rounding lines sent back from the front. The inset in the corner gives a view of the outfitter's shop.

OLD 13 FIGURES IN STRANGE SUIT OF LAW

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.—No. 13, king of superstitious signs, has caused the institution of an action in the Westminster County Court, a young married couple being the defendants.

It all came about this way:—The man and his wife looked over some new houses in a new street and decided they would like to live in one of the dwellings. They talked with the owners of the property and everything was rosy until they came around a week later to feast their eyes on their prospective home. Ah! No. 13 stared at them from its resting place over the front door.

Shivering with fear, they said "Nay! nay!" and left the premises. They later received notice of the suit begun by the solicitors because, it was alleged, they stopped negotiations for taking the house on mortgage.

HAS NO FEAR FOR IRON HAND OF THE LAW

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.—Michael Fitzpatrick has been convicted so many times in the police courts of London that he has the reputation of being one of the worst characters in the city. When arraigned at Marylebone for being "drunk and disorderly" Fitzpatrick was sentenced to twenty-one days. His familiar face recalled the numerous convictions against him. Records were produced, and a list of convictions measuring fully a yard in length was the result.

STORIES FROM BEHIND THE FIRING LINE

Indomitable Spirit of Wounded Soldiers of Allies Described.

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, Saturday.

The indomitable spirit of the French soldiers fighting at the front is nowhere so clearly set forth as in a series of articles by Miss Kathleen Burke, who has been to the trenches and knows whereof she speaks. The Litany of the Poilu, as revealed by Miss Burke is as follows:—

"Of two things one is certain; either you're mobilized or you're not mobilized. If you're not mobilized there's no need to worry; if you are mobilized, of two things one is certain; either you're behind the lines or you're on the front. If you are behind the lines there is no need to worry; if you're on the front, of two things one is certain; either you're resting in a safe place or you're exposed to danger.

"If you're resting in a safe place there is no need to worry; if you're exposed to danger, of two things one is certain; either you're wounded or you're not wounded. If you're not wounded there is no need to worry; if you are wounded, of two things one is certain; either you're wounded seriously or you're wounded slightly.

"If you're wounded slightly there is no need to worry; if you're wounded seriously, of two things one is certain; either you recover or you die. If you recover there is no need to worry, if you die you can't worry."

LONDON, Saturday.

Offers of as high as $25 were made for brooches made out of the Zeppelin which was wrecked at Cuffley. There were forty miles of wire in the wreck. This was all cut up into small pieces for souvenirs and the sale fetched many thousands of dollars for the Red Cross Society.

There have been several cases recently of soldier boys who were stricken dumb at the front suddenly recovering their speech. The latest is that of Private Thomas Shaw, a young Manchester lad and a member of the London regiment. In Shaw's case his speech was returned to him in a curious manner while he was confined at the Smithston War Hospital. A gramaphone was playing at his bedside when one of the records fell on the floor. Shaw suddenly made an attempt to catch the record and then shouted "Oh, it's back." He is now able to speak as well as ever.

Service as conductors on the street railways in England seems to be the best paying employment for women who work as unskilled laborers. Since the war has demanded the services of men who formerly were conductors, railway officials have experienced no trouble at all in filling their places.

Hundreds of young women are leaving the factories throughout England to seek employment on the tramway cars. Much machinery is now standing idle in the Manchester cotton mills, owing to a scarcity of female labor.

The following story is told describing the fate of a Church Army hut at the front:—

"One of our men invited a whole battalion to dinner and borrowed crockery amounting to some five hundred plates for the purpose. While they were in the midst of the festivities an enemy aeroplane came over and all the men were ordered out. Within a few minutes of their leaving a shell directed by the aeroplane fell on the hut and hut and plates were things of the past."

Stung by the marriage bee, many of London's fair telephone operators are leaving their posts to begin housekeeping. This epidemic of marriages, combined with the shortage of women workers, is likely to place the telephone exchanges in a difficult position.

Every week the list of resignations is increased. In one week the telephone company lost two assistant supervisors, four girls from the central exchanges and three from other exchanges. In the country districts the telephone girls are marrying as soon as they can find THE man. Thus far the marriage wave has spread from the London district to Belfast.

The luck that follows a man when he is intoxicated is proverbial. An instance of this sort of good fortune was noted in the Brentford police court during the arraignment of an inebriate who, with hilarious laughter and uncertain steps, had almost fallen as he entered the courtroom.

While his case was being heard the prisoner paid no attention to the testimony, but kept joking with one of the attendants. Finally he dug his hand into one of his pockets and drew forth a hand grenade. He raised the iron ball and was about to throw it when nearly one seized his arm, removing the weapon. The Chairman of the Magistrates was greatly excited and he remarked:—"For goodness' sake, take that thing out of here and have it destroyed."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Philosopher And King

By F. A. MITCHEL

There was once a boy who was born a prodigy. When he was twelve years old he could dispute with the most learned philosophers and when he was sixteen employed much of his leisure time in working out military problems as some persons in these days contend with an imaginary enemy at chess.

He would set up imaginary enemies, only to attack and overwhelm them. Then he would set them up again and conquer them by another method of campaign.

This boy's name was Paulus, and he was destined to accomplish great feats. Indeed, from the time he was five years old he seemed imbued with this idea. During his youth his only intimate friend was a philosopher named Heraclitus, who was a sort of Diogenes, placing small value on anything mundane. Heraclitus told Paulus that even if he conquered the world it would avail him nothing. "Whatever goes up," he said, "must come down, and the higher it goes the greater the ruin when it falls."

But Paulus being young this pessimistic statement had little effect upon him. "I feel," he said, "an impulse to climb and climb. I will, and I shall accumulate power as I rise. The higher I climb the greater my power. I cannot escape death in the end, but I can establish myself so strongly that I shall die at the summit of my career."

When Paulus was twenty years old a war broke out between his countrymen and a neighboring kingdom. In this war Paulus so distinguished himself that he was made a general. All the other generals on his side were whipped, but Paulus by his genius made up for all their defeats and with his own army alone conquered a peace.

He was then transferred from the army to the king's cabinet, and soon by his recommendations gained so much credit that he was made prime minister. The king meanwhile was growing old and relied more and more on Paulus. Xanthus, the prince who would inherit the crown, was a weakling, and the king, realizing that after his own death Paulus would be the only man able to protect the country against its enemies, gave him the hand of his daughter in marriage that he might reign as king.

When the king died the people insisted on Paulus and his wife assuming the reins of government, and Paulus yielded. He became king, and, since the presence of the legal heir to the throne was not desirable, he was banished.

Paulus then began a career of conquest, by which he subdued many neighboring kingdoms. When they were all brought under subjection he called his old friend Heraclitus to him and said:

"Behold my power. I am now an emperor instead of a king. I have accomplished all I set out to accomplish. It now remains to be seen whether I shall retain what I have or lose it."

"The stone that is thrown in the air must come down," replied the philosopher. "In your youth you were strong. You have passed the building up of your powers, and from this point you will begin a process of decay."

"I have provided against that," replied Paulus. "I am so strongly intrenched that my enemies cannot prevail against me."

For several years all went well, and Paulus again sent for the philosopher and said to him:

"Am I not as powerful as ever?"

"No," replied Heraclitus. "You are in the position of the stone when it has finished its ascent and before it begins to fall."

"What will be the cause of my fall?"

"Nothing in nature stands still. If we are not advancing we are retrograding."

The king dismissed his old friend with sorrow, for he felt that vigor had gone out of him. If called upon to defend his empire from enemies he could not do what he had done in building it up.

Meanwhile Cheros, the son of Xanthus, had been growing to manhood in exile and in the knowledge that his father was king and he heir presumptive to the throne. His father's death was the signal for him to begin secretly to dissatisfy the peoples that King Paul had brought under his sway. The prince had the advantage of legitimacy, and he not only pleaded this, but promised the conquered that if they would make him emperor he would give them their freedom.

Here was an opportunity that had not been given them before. The conquered peoples formed a league to dethrone Paulus and put Cheros on the throne. When all was ready the bolt was shot. Paulus, now an old man, put himself at the head of his armies, but he had lost the courage of youth and, finding his joints stiff, was not only unable to lead, but to keep pace with his subordinate commander. He was beaten in one battle after another and at last obliged to flee in order to save his life. Being hunted, he sought safety in an island where were no human beings except himself. His only companions were the beasts.

One person only visited him there, his old friend the philosopher.

"Do you come to triumph over me in that your prophesies have come true?" asked the exile.

"No; I come because you are the same to me as you have always been. A stone going up in the air, resting at the summit of its arc, falling or on the ground is still a stone."

Concert Was Well Attended

WARSAW, Jan. 10.—A large audience enjoyed the concert given in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening January 3rd by the pupils of the Presbyterian Sunday School. The programme was as follows:

Chorus—"The Maple Leaf."
Address—Rev. Mr. Brown.
Recitation—Marion Payne.
Song—Fred Gunn.
Girl's Doll Drill.
Recitation—Verna Miller.
Tableau—"Better bide a wee."
Recitation—Russell Payne.
Boy's Cane Drill.
Dialogue—"A close shave."
Khaki Song—Class of boys.

Intermission and presentation of Robert Raikes Diplomas by the Superintendent, Mr. Edward Hawthorne. These diplomas were awarded for steady attendance at Sunday School and were presented to Clifford Selkirk and Hector Munro, the latter's having a seal attached in recognition of his having won it for two consecutive years. Helena Miller and Gerald Crowe were each awarded a Bible for their attendance at church services during the year. Nursing Sister S.M. C. Miller, of Wear Bay House, Folkestone had sent a parcel containing a gift for each of the girls of her former class and these were distributed by Mr. Brown who spoke of the splendid sacrifices Mrs. Miller has made and her thoughtfulness in remembering old friends.

Tableau—"Preparedness."
Wand Drill—Class of girls.
Recitation—Beatrice Clifford.
Tableau—"Keep the home fires burning."
Recitation—Clifford Selkirk.
Tableau—"I want my Daddy."
Dialogue—"Playing school."
Address—Rev. Mr. Clare.
Address—Rev. Mr Robert.
Dialogue—"The quack doctor."
Distribution of Candy.

Mrs. Booth, of Peterborough, is visiting her niece, Mrs. J. A. Crowe.

A concert under the auspices of the Warsaw and Lakefield Choral Societies will be held in the Town Hall, Warsaw, on Friday evening, January 12th. Lunch will be served by the ladies of the Women's Institute.

Mr. Wasson Lynn, of Carstairs, Alta., who has enlisted in the British navy, was in the village for a few days this week renewing acquaintances prior to his departure for Halifax, N.S., where he will join the crew of the "Niobe" for training.

A basket social and dance will be held in S. S. No. 12 on the boundary line between Dummer and Douro at Mr. Forsythe's corner on Friday evening, January 12th. Ladies are requested to bring baskets.

The Women's Institute has made a shipment this week of the following articles to the amount of seventy dollars: Quilts, flannel day shirts, sculletus binders, pyjamas, flannel and eiderdown dressing gowns, trench caps, eiderdown mufflers, hot water bag covers.

IF KIDNEY'S ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

SHIPBUILDING IN ENGLAND.

Lloyds "Register of Shipbuilding" for the quarter ended September 30th, shows there were 409 merchant vessels of 1,780,054 tons under construction in the United Kingdom at the close of that quarter against 440 vessels of 1,540,218 tons in the June quarter and 432 vessels of 1,586,177 tons in the September quarter of 1915. Of the vessels under construction 185 are under 500 tons gross, 58 between 4,000 and 5,000, 47 between 6,000 and 8,000, 28 between 8,000 and 10,000, 16 between 10,000 and 20,000, 8 between 15,000 and 25,000, one of 30,000 and two between 30,000 and 40,000 tons.

Obstinate Coughs and Colds YIELD TO DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to "Dr. Wood's" containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree combined with the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks.

Mrs. H. F. McCormick, Rodney, N. S., writes: "I had a severe cold one winter, and had been coughing for a month. I could not sleep at night, nor could I speak above a whisper.

After I had taken a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I felt better so I took two or three more and was entirely cured. I have three children and I always give it to them when they have a cough or cold."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has been on the market for twenty-five years and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold you can possibly procure.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

With each season the shirt waist adds to its popularity and this season the models are all the more interesting because of the many new fabrics that have been added.

For practical purposes the waist illustrated is one that will give full measure of satisfaction. It is cut on lines that give the utmost freedom to the wearer and has the necessary style note to associate it with the newest designs.

An attractive touch of color may be given by employing contrasting goods for the lovely collar and to face the fronts that roll back to give "point revers." The full length sleeve is gathered into a band cuff, a feature of nearly all the late models. The neck may be less open by making the revers in narrower width. For the confines of the home one may like linen or other such material; for other wear, crepe, satin, silk, poplin and wool batiste are desirable. The simplicity of the design promises success to any one who causes the tissue with the pattern before her.

The waist pattern, No. 8024, cuts in sizes 30 to 44 bust. To make in size 36 requires 2⅞ yards of 36 inch material with ½ yard contrasting goods, or 2¼ yards all one material.

To obtain the pattern send ... to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

A recent feature of the market has been the announced strength that has developed in the price of live hogs. Locally they are quoted at $12.60 representing a steady advance in the past two weeks. A traveller for a packing house stated that he expected to see pork touch fifteen cents. There is nothing authoritative behind this prediction, and is merely offered as one opinion of what the coming months may produce.

Cattle prices are also advanced and the grain market shows further increases. But butter is off slightly and eggs are holding steadily, although the beginning of a new laying season is evidently at hand.

Some butter sold as high as 45c on the market a week ago but at that figure it was several cents above the general quotations. The winter dairy butter has depreciated in quality below the fall and summer article and the price should react in sympathy. The present trend in butter and eggs is slightly downward.

Most of the other markets are quiet. The grocery staples have not moved either way with the probable exception of flour.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Otonabee Agricultural Society will be held in the Town Hall, Keene, on Thursday, Jan. 18th at 1 p.m. for the purpose of receiving and dispensing of the report of the Board of Directors, and for the election of officers for the ensuing year, for the revising of the by-laws and for any other business in connection with the society.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. T. B. Sharpe at Ottawa.

The Red Cross meeting which was to have been held in the Town Hall last Friday evening, had to be postponed owing to inclement weather, until Friday night of this week.

Mr. William Fletcher, who has been spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fletcher, returned on Monday to Belleville, where he is attending school.

Messrs. James McNeil, Sr., and Richard Skinner had the rural 'phone put in their homes last week.

Mrs. Marshall Weir and family, of Bethany, have returned to their home at Bethany after a pleasant two weeks' visit with Keene friends.

Pte. Ernest O'Toole, of Barriefield, is a guest this week of Mrs. William Plunkett.

Mr. and Mrs. James Foley entertained about fifty guests with cards and dancing on Tuesday evening of last week. A very enjoyable time is reported.

Mr. John O'Han of Westwood, was a week end guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Roche.

Miss Eliza Stewart of Peterborough, spent Monday of last week with her sister, Mrs. R. N. Johnston.

Mr. J. Byers of Toronto, has accepted the position of manager of the Toronto Bank upon the resignation of N. A. Sawtell, the former manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley McBride and family were the guests the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson.

Sewing Bee.

A sewing bee and social afternoon will be held by the Keene Ladies' Patriotic Society on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 17th, at two p.m. in the Council chambers, to which all ladies are cordially invited to attend.

Miss Mary Foley spent the week end with friends at Peterborough.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist church will hold their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. L. Burley on Thursday afternoon of this week.

Mr. William Campbell returned on Friday from Toronto, where he spent the past week with friends.

Mr. Peter McFarlane is moving into the village this week. He will occupy the residence on High street which he purchased from G. F. Hall.

Miss A. McIntyre who has been quite ill of pneumonia, is improving nicely.

Mr. Richard Kylie, Mayor of Lindsay, and Mrs. Kylie, spent New Year's at the home of Mr. Edmond Foley.

Miss Isabella McCarthey returned on Tuesday to St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, after a pleasant holiday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McCarthey.

Mr. Robt. Brown, the manager of the Keene rink, is busy this week making ice and hopes if the weather permits to open the rink on Saturday night of this week.

Mr. W. A. Sawtell left on Saturday for his home in Montreal.

Miss Ella Foley, who has been spending the holidays at the home of her parents, has returned to Notre Dame Academy, Kingston.

Mrs. H. McLachlan requests that the parents and friends of the boys enlisted from Otonabee to send to her the regimental numbers with address, as soon as possible.

Miss Margaret Bolin has returned to St. Josephs Academy, Lindsay, after a pleasant holiday at her home.

Natural Protection.

India is one of the best-protected countries—naturally—in the whole world. Her shape is a triangular peninsula. Two sides are washed by the ocean and the third is bounded by the mighty wall of the Himalayas.

Probably the land most immune from invasion at this moment is New Zealand. Its nearest neighbor is the sister colony of Australia, over a thousand miles away. Japan is 5,000 miles distant, and 'Frisco 6,000 miles. Hardly any conceivable development of flying or submarine craft would suffice to get there.

An Equal Test.

It is an interesting fact that the two studies of arithmetic and geography often seem to be opposed to each other in the affections of school children. Pupils who are particularly proficient in the one are apt to be backward in the other.

A story is told of a youngster who was slow in arithmetic and whose apparent stupidity in this field was a great source of grief to his father, a clever mathematician.

One day when the father and son were walking out they passed a place where a "learned pig" was on exhibition, and the father took the boy in to see the prodigies that the animal could perform.

"Just look at that!" said the father. "Why, there's a pig that can count and add up numbers! Don't you wish you were as smart as he?"

"Ha!" answered the boy. "Just let me ask him a few questions in geography! I reckon I could beat him at that!"

BRITISH FORCES CAPTURE TWO THOUSAND TURKS

FOURTEEN THOUSAND TON BATTLESHIP SUNK BY SUB.

THE BRITISH BATTLESHIP "CORNWALLIS" WAS SUNK IN THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA

Thirteen Men Are Missing---The "Cornwallis" Was Built in 1901 and Carried Four Twelve inch Guns in Addition to Thirty Guns of Lesser Calibre--Large British Forces Marching Eastward From the Suez Canal in an Attempt to Wrest the Entire Holy Land From the Turks---Germans Gain in Roumania.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The British battleship Cornwallis, 14,000 tons, was torpedoed and sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean Sea on Tuesday, the Admiralty announced to-day. Thirteen men are missing.

The seaplane carrier Bonoychree was also sunk to-day in Kastelorrizo Harbour.

The Cornwallis was built in 1901. She carried four 12-inch guns and thirty guns of lesser calibre.

British Administer Heavy Blow to Turkish Forces

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Jan. 11. — (Special Cable). — Large British forces marching westward from the Suez Canal have administered a heavy blow to the Teutonic forces in a new and unexpected quarter, and are now on the borders of Palestine, with apparent designs on marching through that country, from Dan to Beersheba and wresting the entire Holy Land from the Turks.

This is indicated by the War Office announcement to-day that the British have advanced to Rafa, thirty miles north-east of El Arish, capturing nearly two thousand Turks, some guns and much stores on the way, as well as inflicting severe other losses on the enemy. Sheial was taken.

Another similar advance will bring the British to the important Turkish base of Beershaba, which is also regarded as the only important post left in the Turkish defences of Palestine. An early junction between this new British expedition and that of General Maude in Mesopotamia may also be expected.

German Attack Repulsed With Heavy Losses to the Ene my

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Jan. 11.—(French Official Communique).—A German attack in Caurrieres Woods, next to Verdun, was repulsed during the night, after a fively combat, in which the Germans suffered serious losses, the official statement asserted to-day.

HARRY K. THAW CUT HIS THROAT THIS AFTERNOON

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

Philadelphia, January 11.—Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, and now wanted in New York to answer an indictment charging that he flogged Frederick Gump, cut his throat in a West Philadelphia apartment this afternoon.

At St. Mary's Hospital at 2:10 this afternoon Thaw's condition was said by the attendants to be serious.

LANCE-CORP. HARVEY STAUNTON RETURNS INVALIDED HOME

Went Over With First Contingent in 1914 and Left Trenches Sept. 2nd 1916—Through the Thick of it

GOES TO TORONTO HOSPITAL

Lance Corporal Harvey Staunton a well known Peterborough boy who has seen many months of service on the firing line in France reached home yesterday and will spend ten days leave here before going to the Convalescent Home in Toronto for treatment. Lance Corporal Staunton was employed by the G.T.R. when war broke out and enlisted in Lindsay. At Valcartier he became a member of the 15th Battalion, 48th Highlanders and went overseas as a member of the Toronto Scottish. He was wounded at St. Julien and was in the hospital in England for some time afterwards, being attached to the 39th Reserve Battalion at West Sandling where he met many Peterborough boys. Lance Corporal Staunton returned to France as a member of a Trench Mortar Battery and as one of the crew of a stokes gun was attached to the 21st Battalion. Finally after months of service his health broke down and he was invalided back to England and eventually to Canada.

Lance Corporal Staunton was a member of the 57th Regiment for a long period before the war and was quick to respond to the call for men. His many friends in Peterborough will gladly welcome him back and unite in wishing him a speedy recovery.

His home-coming is saddened by the fact that his brother Ernest Staunton was one of the victims of the Quaker Oats fire.

Demonstration Will Be Continued

Interesting Demonstration of Electricity's Curative Power at Madill's Drug Store

Mr. Wm. Madill is to be congratulated on having secured a demonstration of the Branston Violet Ray High Frequency Generator.

Many people are calling at the store and receiving free trial treatments and in every instance those treated are amazed at the almost instant relief from pain. A man from the Examiner was an interested witness of several such cases yesterday. It is a recognised medical treatment and the fact that the demand exceeds the supply is proof of its popularity. It is entirely Canadian Made.

The present demonstration will be continued for a few days longer. The Charles A. Branston Company, Toronto, manufacturers of this wonderful appliance, have an expert demonstrator in charge who will be pleased to give a free treatment to any one suffering from rheumatism, neuralgia, insomnia, catarrh, headache, or any disorder of the nervous or circulatory system.

Everyone should see this electrical wonder and obtain a free copy of their book, Health and Beauty.

"Armies Will Cleave Road To Victory During Year 1917"

Lloyd George Was Given a Tremendous Ovation as He Outlined the Empire's Position in Regard to the Recent Peace Terms Which He Characterized as "A Trap Baited With Fine Words"---Prime Minister Addressed An Enthusiastic Gathering in the Guild Hall This Afternoon.

TERMS OF THE NEW WAR LOAN

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Britain and her Allies have told the President of the United States they desire peace, but it must be a real peace. War is preferable to Prussian domination of Europe.

Prime Minister Lloyd-George told a Guild Hall meeting this afternoon that this position of the Entente Powers had been "made clear in the reply to Germany's peace proffer, but clearer still in reply to the American note."

It was a vociferously enthusiastic crowd that greeted the Premier as he delivered his first speech since his opening address in the House of Commons, voicing Britain's refusal of Germany's peace terms and outlining the aims and purposes of his new Ministry.

The meeting was called to energize the gathering of subscriptions to "win the war loan," and Lloyd-George took the opportunity to emphatically reiterate Britain's determination to win the war.

Did Not Reject Peace Terms.

"We did not reject the peace terms," the Premier said. "None were offered. It was only a trap, baited with fine words."

The British Premier said he had been impressed at the air of confidence over the "increasing extent to which Allied peoples were looking toward England."

"I am more than confident," he continued, "that Britain will not fail in the trust thus imposed on her. Our navy has strangled enemy commerce, and will continue this despite piratical devices."

Defeat Was Impossible.

Referring to the counsels of the Entente nations recently, the Prime Minister said:

"All the Allies felt that if victory was difficult a defeat was impossible. Arrangements were made there to deal with the whole situation."

Referring to the loan, for which the meeting was called, Lloyd-George said:

"A successful loan will help shorten the war, will save lives and will save the British Empire, and Europe's civilization. With proper support, our gallant armies will cleave the road to victory during 1917."

Lloyd-George was given a tremendous ovation, and there were prolonged cheers for both the Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law and former Chancellor Reginald McKenna, who explained the terms of the loan.

The loan will be at five per cent., issued at 95, for a term of thirty years. There will also be an optioned loan at four per cent., par, and free from tax.

QUAKER OATS CO. TAKE OVER MILLS

Two or Three Year Lease of the Premises have been Secured by the Company, With Option of Purchase at End of Term

Definite announcement is made that the Quaker Oats Company will take over the plant of the Sudbury Four Mills, at Sudbury, Ont. Officials of the Sudbury Flour Mill have been formally notified to this effect, and expect officials of the Quaker Oats Company, will shortly arrive to undertake such re-arrangement of the plant as may be necessary to meet their needs, and to commence immediate operation thereafter. The negotiations have been conducted at Ottawa and Chicago, and the exact nature of the deal is not known, but it is believed that a two or three year lease of the premises have been secured by the Quaker Oats Company with the option of purchase at the end of the term.

Following the recent disastrous fire which destroyed the huge plant of the Quaker Oats Company at Peterborough, Ont., officials of the company visited Sudbury and expressed themselves as well satisfied with the arrangement of the local milling plant for their purposes and more than impressed with Sudbury as a commercial centre.—Journal of Commerce.

A Fine Programme At The Empire

In Addition to the Regular Programme To-morrow the Empire Will Show Mutt and Jeff

Donald Brian, the popular stage favourite, returns to the screen under auspicious as well as thoroughly amusing circumstances in the Famous Players Film Company's comedy production, "The Smugglers." The laughable series of comic tragedies which results from the attempt of John Battleby Watts, who has made millions by converting hay into breakfast food, to recover his wife's $30,000 pearls which he has carelessly lost, and for which he has substituted bogus pearls, is presented with much humour and many thrills. The culmination of Watts' trials occurs at the Customs House, when he attempts to smuggle in the bogus pearls in order to avoid the exposure which would result from his declaring them at their supposed $30,000 valuation. In spite of his efforts, however, the indignant Mrs. Watts learns of the substitution of her pearls. In the following scene Watts learns that the belief that "pearls are made of tears" is composed of more truth than imagination.

Also a good comedy and Mutt and Jeff, on Friday and Saturday Special at the Empire Theatre.

Be sure to wash the face with hot water and soap before retiring this will do a great deal toward a clear complexion.

LARGE DEPUTATION DEMAND THE TOTAL ABOLITION OF LIQUOR

Gathering which Waited upon Premier Borden To-day was Representative of all the Temperance Organizations Throughout the Country

THREE MONTHS GRACE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Jan. 11. — Demanding the prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of liquor as a war measure, two delegations waited upon Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues to-day.

One deputation which say the Government at noon was representative of practically all the Dominion and Provincial temperance organizations throughout the country.

The second deputation included a large number of members of the National Council of Women, of Montreal, who came to the Capital in special cars, and who saw the Prime Minister at one o'clock.

The larger deputation at which Hon. Justice LaFontaine, of Montreal, was the principal speaker, asked for the immediate enactment of a war measure of temperance, the question of its continuance in force to be determined by a referendum to be taken three years after the war or as an alternative that a referendum be taken before June, and the result to become effective within three months.

Premier Borden, replying, practically put it up to the individual provinces. He said that the moment a province prohibited liquor to the full extent of its constitutional powers, then the Dominion law stepped in and prohibited importation.

He promised full consideration of all the deputation's arguments.

Probe Comes To An Abrupt End

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The investigation of the leak to Wall Street of advance information on President Wilson's note to the belligerents came to an abrupt end to-day. The House Rules Committee defeated the second Wood resolution providing for a probe of Thomas W Lawson's charge.

PETERBOROUGH BOY IS IMPROVING

Sergeant Alexander C. Gillespie, whose home is at 198 Hunter street, and who was recently reported wounded, is improving. A second message has been received from Ottawa stating that Sergeant Gillespie's condition has improved.

CONDUCTED LOTTERY, GUILTY, BUT LET GO

Regina Women Plead They Were Aiding Soldiers.

Regina, Jan. 11.—Mrs. Charles Hickey and Miss Christine McIvor were found guilty in the Supreme Court of conducting a lottery, with a strong recommendation to to mercy and were allowed to go on suspended sentence.

With the assurance they were aiding the returned soldiers' fund, the women started to sell tickets for a lottery at one dollar each and to raffle an automobile, which they proposed to purchase when they had realised sufficient funds from the sale of the tickets.

Peterboro's Response to National Service Almost Unanimous—Only 37 Refusals—568 From the Rural Districts.

NOT YET FORWARDED

The total number of National Service Cards received at the Post Office has reached 4,865. This number is comprised of 4,297 from the city and 568 from the rural routes practically all of which have been received. In the city there have been exactly 37 refusals to sign the cards, and these names will be forwarded to the government.

The local cards have not yet been forwarded for the reason that they must first be listed. The fact that there have been so small a number of refusals in Peterborough is generally regarded with complete satisfaction. In fact the response from the city has practically been unanimous.

APPLICATIONS FOR RETURN OF CHILDREN

Children's Aid Society has arranged to be Represented when Cases come up

At the regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society it was decided to have the secretary secure further information concerning a couple of applications that have been made for the return of children now in care of the Society. The original parents are applying for the return of their children, but the Society is inclined to the opinion that to return the children would be unfair to the foster parents who are now caring for them. In one particular case, application has been made to a High Court judge. The Society has arranged to be represented when the cases are heard, and in the meantime more information concerning the children involved, will be secured.

A committee was appointed to nominate the standing committees for the year, consisting of the purchasing committee, the finance committee, the house committee, etc. A meeting respecting this matter will be called by Mr. E. A. Peck, President of the Society some time this week.

A number of accounts were passed. Those present were: Messrs. Pennefather, H. Beal, Dr. Fortune, Fire Chief Howard, E. A. Peck, J. Wearing, Rev. Father Phelan. The ladies present were: Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Birdsall, Mrs. Sanderson and Mrs. Montgomery.

PETERBORO BOY ON NAVAL TRANSPORT SHIP

Mr. Vincent J. Corkery, who is training for the navy at Portsmouth, England, recently wrote to his mother outlining the schedule of the day's work. From the studies and practical work at the naval barracks he has advanced to the duties on the training ship "Argonaut," which makes daily trips to sea with the recruits for the naval reserve. Swabbing the deck at a quarter to six every morning is one of the necessary items of the routine of a "tar" for which Mr. Corkery is qualifying.

WOMEN, WAR AND WORK.

When the ladies of the Peterborough Curling Club saw the seductive glister of the curling ice at the rink, there must have been a sharp tussle between desire and duty, before they decided to abandon the pleasures of curling for the season, and devote their membership fees and embodied energies to Red Cross Work. This action is not surprising. The women of Peterborough, in common with many of the women of Canada, have shown a magnificent spirit of devotion and sacrifice in order to do a splendid lot of work for Red Cross and other interests associated with the war. It is to their work that the soldiers in camp and trench and hospital, owe much of the continuous supply of comforts they would not have had, but for the tireless, knitting, sewing and sacrifice of home comforts and social pleasures by the Girls they Left Behind Them.

If the gallant lads in the strenuous or relaxed moments of war life could know what interest, what enthusiasm, the women at home unite in their work; what womanly tenderness, sympathy and prayers they stitch and knit into the socks and garments for the soldiers, they would be cheered without measure, and feel that the Red Cross at home make it greatly worth while, to risk the wooden cross, to win the Victoria or other cross, in the defense of the women at home, we stand for the best they are fighting for in this war of high ideals.

But they can't know, and won't know, when we in the city, next door to our petticoated home paladins don't know and can't realize, what they have done, and are doing. We do not know the extent of Red Cross work in Peterborough, for the workers are too busy to trumpet their activities from the house top; they stick to their knitting and sewing, and the invoice of their shipments, of completed comforts alone constitute one record. From casual inquiry it is found that there are at least five hundred women busily at work on Red Cross work, several hours a day together or separably at home; plying hundreds of needles, guiding the whirr of fifty or more sewing machines, keeping busy countless clicking quartelles of knitting steels. Every church has its Auxiliary to the central body, with headquarters at the Public Library, and there are many subsidiary societies each doing its splendid best in the great industry that keeps the battalion of Red Cross patriots at work.

Accidental information shows something of what is being done. At the T. A. S. rooms seventy workers are busy and ten sewing machines are kept at work—a type, no doubt, of similar activity in several other centres. Two men are kept busy in the packing department, a not surprising thing when the total of one week's shipment—comprising hundreds of made articles—representing, individually, perhaps little money value, but much hard work—amounts to $548.40 From the Public Library centre 240 pairs of soldiers' socks per month are sent out—enough to warm the feet of half a battalion.

No doubt, the activities of Peterborough women in Red Cross work is repeated all over Canada every day; and the universality and spirit of enthusiasm of women's work in the war, are at once a magnificent reproach and a splendid example to the manhood of the country. If one-tenth of the men of Canada eligible to fight or do other work, were as busy as the women of the country, there would be no necessity of the Government breaking its neck to get the manhood of the country wakened to the fact and duty of national service. The women of Canada in their surrender to the spirit of voluntary sacrifice, are a practical demonstration of the proverb—"Woman's work is never done," but always in the doing. Our women are worthy of the glory, laud and honour we give them.

FIND A WAY OR MAKE IT.

Coroner Dr. Greer was commendably considerate in pointing out the indesirability of indiscreet assumption, in attributing poisoning, in cases where no other cause is known, to ptomaine. Such cases are in fact extremely rare and, and alarmist guesses unwarrantably increasing the number are to be deprecated. Ptomaine, or ptomaine products consist of the virulent form or forms of alkaloid or organic bases, the effects or results of putrescent degeneration of animal and, sometimes, vegetable substances, and sometimes found in tinned foods. But these occurrences are comparatively rare, perhaps one in a million of tins. The chances of ptomaine poisoning—that is the real thing, not hasty assumption ,is practically negligible, not one perhaps, in a million. It is not probable that one tin among the many millions of packages of tinned foods used in Canada, there can be found many, if one or two instances the materials of ptomaine poisoning.

But if we can fortunately give the canners a fairly clean bill of health for their products, we cannot unfortunately extend our absolution to the prices which which we are told the canners in combination are responsible for. If there were any any other than infinitesimal risk from using possibly affected tinned goods, the damage is greatly lessened by the difficulty of getting such goods over the barrier of high prices. Newspapers which may glibly talk ptomaine poisoning are known to be defenders of a policy that permits a far greater and more present evil— combiantions to advance or with the effect of advancing, prices. Such "combines are alleged, and a coroner's or government's inquest to investigate them is much more indicated than inquiry into extremely problematical cases of ptomaine poisoning.

But if we can't get the government to take off its gloves and handle the combines—miners and others — we fortunately have the means of largely circumventing them. In the matter of fruits housewives, if they are alive and not too lazy, can do their own fruit supplies. In the summer time, all fruits, small and great, are plentiful and cheap, and and every housewife can and should put down a supply of home-treated fruit—enough to make the family independent, and indifferent to whatever price outrages combines may perpetrate. The work is easily done, the most that is needed is the fruit, the sugar and the will to imitate even the firvolous squirrel that in spite of all the seductions of pleasure or play, lays up a store for the winter.

This war time forces a good many things upon us—the most insistent being the necessity of economy and self-help. It is claimed that bread can be baked at home more cheaply than it can be got from the bakers, and there are many ways in which the home larder can be helped, by doing a little more home work. New laid eggs are from the financial point of view, a forbidden fruit, and much harder to get at than Mother Eve found the apple. A correspondent in yesterday's Examiner pointed out how easy it is to keep a few hens, which means a few eggs, that won't cost a king's ransom per dozen.

To widen the field of possibility—there are hundreds of vacant lots that would grow most of the vegetables a family needs, and would be better growing food than weeds. This war times teaches as many things; has taught us that we can do many and great things when the necessity is forced upon us. There are many women in the city who before the war couldn't knit a doll's garter, now knitting well shaped socks for the soldiers; and in a hundred ways, hundreds of people have shown that the back can be broadened to the burden—than we can do almost impossibilities when the necessity is brought home to us. The war and its perplexities have made us all more resourceful. It has taught us that we can do more than we should have believed possible three years ago; has taught us that we can save to an extent that would have meant pauperistic expendient a year or two ago, and even incompatible with respectability. If we want to do things, we can't either find a way or make it.

DEUTSCHLAND HAD CASH.

How Bernstorff Received his Salary From Germany.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The German cargo submarine Deutschland was the German embassy's "purse" on its last trip to New London, Conn., it was learned yesterday.

The Deutschland brought over several good sized fortunes in German treasury notes which were not negotiable until signed by German Ambassador Von Bernstorff. These notes will be used to pay the embassy salaries and expenses, the salarie of sailors on interned German merchantmen and auxiliary cruisers, the upkeep of these vessels, and any other expenses which the embassy may have to disperse here, Bernstorf said to-day.

What We Are Fighting Against And What We Must Overcome

"The most highly significant evidence of the German mind, and, by the same token, never intended for publicity outside Germany, is to be found in a recent article in The Berliner Lokal Anzeiger, over the signature of Walter Rathenau, the individual who for a number of years before war had complete charge of official Organization among war-need industrial establishments in the German Empire, and who has been deputized to continue this particular work in the supreme effort the Teutonic nation is about to put forth.

"This article, which is before my eyes as I write, says in full, copied verbatim:

"'We began the war a year too soon. When we have secured a German peace we must begin at once a reorganization upon a broader and firmer basis than ever before. Establishments that produce raw materials essential to the army must not only continue their work, but enter into it upon lines of increased energy, forming thus the kernel of economic Germany in preparing, in the economic sense, for the next war. We must carefully calculate in advance, in view of lessons learned in this war, what our country lacks in raw material or essentials of raw materials, and secure immense reserves to remain unused until a day in the future. We must organize as genuine an industrial mobilization as we had a military mobilization. Every technician or semi-technician, enrolled or not in the list of mobilized, must be empowered through official credentials to take charge and direction of a given establishment upon the second day following a new declaration of war. Every establishment manufacturing for commercial purposes must be mobilized also, and understand officially that upon the third day after declaration of war their entire abilities are to be devoted to serving the army upon demand.

"'It must also be determined in advance just what qualities and sort of essentials such establishment can furnish the army in a given time. Each establishment also should be required to furnish a detailed list of workmen who can be dispensed with, these only to be mobilized in the military sense.

"'We must finally establish some definite commercial understanding with nations outside Europe that will offer them advantages, to be duly specified in detail, whereby these nations as neutrals will find it to their direct disadvantage commercially to trade or sell munitions during war to either ourselves or our enemies. We can afford to offer such conditions ourselves. And finally, when the next war comes, it must not be a year too soon.'

"Here in a nutshell, or 'kernel,' to quote frank M. Rathenau, is what Allied Europe has long understood, and what has not been truly understood in the United States, save by a relative few.

"It is the reason why the war would be continued for ten years, if necessary, by France, England, and their allies. It is the reason why nothing short of the 'knockout' will serve. It is the reason why any talk or effort for peace would be ill received, even if backed by the best of motives and official sanction from the greatest of neutrals, or the smallest, or all the neutrals collectively.

"The war cloud that hung over Europe for thirty years prior to August, 1914, must be dispersed finally and for ever. The intolerable conditions prevailing must be finally made impossible of repetition. The horrors and miseries, the suffering and privation, the whole gamut of evil that no single individual can understand through reading the writing of another, that must be seen, felt, experienced through the sense to be grasped even in outer circles, must never again be a worldly portion.

"This will only be possible through making war against war until a human peace is the reward. It would be as impossible under a German peace as would a railway journey to Mars.

"Germany realizes all I have here written in a sincerity beyond mere words for the telling. She feels her setting sun. She is reaching out at the two extreme extremes of the compass in vain effort to remedy that beginning the war a year too soon."

"One is her present huge peace propaganda in the United States. The other is her last supreme effort in the levee en masse, the deportation of the Belgian populace, the 'Kingdom' of Poland, and all the rest of it.

"Neither scheme, neither plan, will avail. She feels it, and sense but a desperate postponement of the inevitable. The mills of the gods are grinding.

"The article from the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger is but reiterative proof of an open stupendous fact patent to individual or nation who will judicially examine the evidence at this 860th day of hostilities.

"The fact is the issue is no longer between the Allied and Central Powers. They but represent two ideas! One champions justice, humanity, civilization, the right of people, respect for moral law, and understanding as to definition of the word honour. The other has deliberately as aim the ultimate domination of the globe by a Prussianized Germany."—New York Tribune.

BLUE-BLOOD HEROES.

Part Played by Sons of England's Noble Houses in the War.

When the full story of the war is written it will have no more inspiring chapter than that which describes the magnificent part the sons of our noble houses have played in it—their devotion, their heroism, their splendid deaths for the land they love.

Already, although the war has barely reached its turning point, the list of these heirs to coronets they will never wear is appallingly large. Since the Master of Burleigh, eldest son of Lord Balfour of Burleigh, as gallant a soldier as ever bore the historic name of Bruce, perished in the first month of the war, nearly fifty peers have lost the sons who ought to have succeeded to their honors.

These Heroes have come from all grades of our peerage. One of them was heir to a dukdom, who, if he had lived, would have been premier duke, marquis, and earl of Ireland. Four were sons of marquises, five had earls for the fathers, seven were heirs to viscounties, and twenty-nine were successors to baronies. Six of them were the last heirs to the family honors, and the peerages which should have been theirs are now extinct.

The Marquis of Lincolnshire, Lords Knaresborough, Playfair, Ribblesdale, Rosmead, and Stanford have now no heirs to follow them; though their sacrifice has not been so great as that of Lord Desborough, who has lost two successive heirs in the war within nine weeks of each other.

In this roll of honor, so far, there are comparatively few names that have won fame in old-time battles, such as Stanley, Percy, Clifford, and Cholmondeley—names that recall long dead generations of warriors. There is little, if any, martial strain in the blood of a Gascheu and a Mills, a Playfair and a Robinson; but the bearers of these and many other historic names have fought as gallantly and died as heroically as any armored knight of the age of chivalry.

Young Lord Weymouth, a boy of twenty, who died so bravely a few weeks ago, had plenty of fighting blood in his veins, and proved himself a worthy descendant of his ancestor, Sir John Thynne, who won his knighthly spurs so valiantly on the field of Musselburgh more than three centuries and a half ago. Lord Bridport's heir, who gave up his brave life one June day last year, had in his veins the blood of England's hero, Lord Nelson, and also of that grand old sea-dog, Sir Samuel Hood, Admiral of the Blue.

Lord Spencer Douglas Compton, son of the Marquis of Northampton, who died a year ago, could look back to a long array of fighting ancestors.

Generation after generation, the Comptons were among the doughtiest warriors of England. There was a Compton in every battle in the Civil War, including the third earl, who, with his father and all his brothers, fought so bravely for their King at Edgehill and Banbury and in many another battle.

Lord Arthur Hay, heir to his brother, the Marquis of Tweeddale, who died in the second month of the war, had one ancestor who fell on Flodden Field, and another who commanded a regiment at Marston Moor and Preston; and Viscount Templetown's heir, who died on May 9th, 1915, had many a warrior among his forefathers, including that Upton who covered himself with glory at the Siege of Limerick, under the standard of our third William.

England's First Scientist.

The first great English scientist was Roger Bacon, who died 621 years ago. The exact date of his birth is unknown, but it is believed that this year marks the 700th anniversary. He was persecuted and condemned and much of his work destroyed so that the extent of his discoveries cannot be definitely known. It is certain that he was centuries ahead of his ignorant and credulous times in chemistry, mathematics and mechanics. Branded as a magician, he was thrown into prison. From 1277 until a short time before his death Bacon was immured in a filthy cell. He is said to have invented the camera obscura, the air pump and the diving bell, and he was acquainted with the uses of optical lenses and the nature of gunpowder, although the projective power of gunpowder appears not to have been discovered until the following century. It is said that during a war Bacon set fire to the oldest buildings in a town by using burning lenses.—Chicago Journal.

A Mixed Diet Important.

That a mixed diet is imperative is emphasized by the recently discovered fact that habits of digestion may be formed. For instance, if a child eats no fatty food the power of producing those secretions necessary to digest fat is greatly lessened and may be lost entirely. He would then be unable to eat fatty food for the rest of his life and would therefore suffer from impaired nutrition.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Peterborough juniors left for Oshawa on the 11.40 G.T.R. train today and will clash with manager Bradley's outfit to-night. The certainty of fast ice was welcomed by the youngsters and they will try their best for a win to-night as a victory would give them a decided edge for the district honours. McFee was unable to get away and will be replaced by Frost of last year's pennants. The line-up will be as follows:

Goal—Murray.
Right Defence—McIntyre.
Left Defence—Montgomery.
Rover—Graham.
Centre—Cherrett.
Right Wing—Frost.
Left Wing—Bartley.

The Lindsay 247th postponed game will not be played to-night and so far no date has been set for this fixture, which has already been postponed twice. The soldiers were anxious to get the game played this week in order to clear th slate for an exhibition game next week. They play the return game in Cobourg to-morrow night and should earn the decision by a comfortable margin especially as the ice conditions will be fast.

COUGHLIN WITH PROS.

Jerry Coughlin appeared with the Torontos last night in their game with Wanderers of Montreal. The Mail refers to his appearance as follows:

Corbett Denneny, who is suffering from the grippe and talks in only a whisper, was not used after the first period, while the crowd saw two new players perform for the Torontos, in Speck of Haileybury, and Jerry Coughlin of Peterborough who played for Houghton last year. Jerry created a favourable impression, but Speck seemed to lack speed. He may get this later on, as he is only eighteen.

OSHAWA 12, BOWMANVILLE 3.

Bowmanville, Jan. 10.—In the intermediate game played here this evening between Bowmanville and Oshawa Oshawa defeated the home team by a score of 12 to 3. Oshawa led by 8 to 0 at the end of the first period by 6 to 3.

Bowmanville—Goal, Edger; right defence, F. Williams; left defence, Christie; rover, R. Williams, centre, R. Hooper; left wing, H. Hooper; right wing, Thompson.

Oshawa—Goal, Childs; right defence Hamblyn; left defence, Kemp; rover Fair; centre Hall; left wing, Jacques; right wing, Rowden.

Referee—J. Moxon.

PORT HOPE 3, WHITBY 2

Port Hope, Jan. 10.—In the first home game of the season Port Hope defeated Whitby intermediates last night by a score of 3 to 2. Both teams were very evenly matched and the result was in doubt until the final sound of the gong. The teams were:—

Port Hope—Goal, Micks; right defence, Hamly; left defence, Jex; rover, Chalk; centre, Hilb; right wing, Sculthorp; left wing, King.

Whitby—Goal, O'Connor; right defence, C. Rice; left defence, Smith; rover, A. Blanchard; centre, F. Rice; right wing, Watson; left wing C. Blanchard.

Referee—H. Sproule.

CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

The Executive Committee of the Knox church hockey team will meet to-night in the Y.M.C.A. at eight o'clock.

CURLING

To-night's scheduled games are as follows:

Matthews vs. Waddell.
Campbell vs. Taylor.
McDirmid vs. Giroux.
Brightman vs. Best.
Lang vs. J. H. Ferguson.

The members of the various rinks are reminded that they should be on the ice ready to play at eight o'clock sharp.

Police Dogs Guard The Phipps Children in Palm Beach Surf

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan 11.—When the children of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Phipps strolled down the beach toward the surf for their swim they were flanked by two large police dogs. The children entered the water and swam about, the dogs swimming with them as guardians. The dogs have been trained as life guards, and amazed the spectators by the skill and fidelity with which they tended their small charges. The youngsters, who are good swimmers, played at being in distress, and at all times the remarkable animals responded. Whichever way the children would swim the dogs were right alongside. Mr. Phipps had them trained to swim close to a child in difficulty, offering their sturdy backs as a support.

There were many pleased comments on this exhibition of canine intelligence, and Dr. H. C. Russel said:—"It should become a custom to train dogs in this fashion and have them at beaches for duty as helpers to the life saving corps."

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Lt.-Col. Ackerman, of the 247th Battalion, is addressing the following letter to eligible young men in the surrounding district:

Peterborough, Ont., 1917.

From the Officer Commanding,
247th Battalion, C.E.F.

To———

Dear Sir:—

Your name has been given to me as the name of a man apparently eligible for active service. If you are not eligible and know yourself that you are not, then this letter will not apply to you.

I have been entrusted with the work of recruiting a Battalion, and the only way in which this can be done successfully is by securing the names of every available man and then personally pointing out to each individual, reasons why he should enlist. The Prime Minister has given us his word that unless the remaining 190,000 men volunteer, conscription will have to be resorted to; so that if you are eligible you will be affected anyway.

You should understand how serious the situation is at the present time, and must realize how you would feel if you were compelled to enlist as a Conscript. I ask you, as man to man, to think this over very seriously, realizing that the eyes of every person in Canada are upon you. If you feel that you are Medically Unfit, for service, go before the Medical Officer for examination, and if he finds you to be unfit for service, you will receive a rejected button.

In closing I again appeal to you to enlist and take up your share of the responsibility in putting down a ruthless enemy of all mankind. I can give you my personal assurance that military life is both mentally and physically the greatest game in the world, and you have an opportunity of serving under officers who have served in France, been wounded, and are going back again.

Trusting you will treat this letter as a personal matter and favour me with a reply. I remain,

Yours truly,
C. H. ACKERMAN,
Lieut.-Col.
O. C. 247th Battalion, C. E. F.

Pte. Fred Todd, of Centreville, was added to the strength of the 247th Battalion this morning.

The 247th Battalion will hold big recruiting meetings in Norwood and Millbrook next week—in the former place on Monday, and in Millbrook on Tuesday. The band will be in attendance at both places.

The reference in Lieut. Ketchum's letter in The Examiner last evening to the reported capture of Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp, former machine gun officer of the 93rd Battalion, has caused considerable anxiety among many of his friends who did not know that Lieut. Crisp has not yet left England, where he is in training for the Royal Flying Corps. It is evident that Lieut. Ketchum must have mistaken the name of some other officer in the casualty list for that of the 93rd officer, who the citizens of Peterborough will be glad to learn is still free and well.

Corp. V. G. Mulligan, of the Army Medical Corps, London, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mulligan, 804 George street. Corporal Mulligan leaves for overseas on Monday, January 15th.

Among the holiday greetings received by the Examiner was a pretty card from Lieut. D. J. More of Peterborough who is in France with the 21st Battalion. Lieut. More enlisted here as a private with the 57th regiment's quota to the 2nd division, won his Sergeant's stripes at Kingston and his commission in the field.

Private Arthur Frost of the 93rd Battalion writing to his mother, Mrs. John Frost, Albert street, sent a warm acknowledgment of a Christmas parcel from the pupils of the King Edward School.

DIED TO SAVE A RETREAT

French Colonel Bravely Awaited Death—Set Fine Example.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—Allowing himself to be killed resting on his cannon to give an example and prevent a precipitate retreat, reads the order of the day, recording the death of Lt.-Col. Patrice Mahon.

It was at the pass of St. Marie Aux Mines, in the Vosges. Twice before this he had tried to save the pass, the second time leading a victorious counter-attack. A hot enemy attack the third time forced the French to retire. Mahon, dismounting from his horse, crossed his arms and stood in front of one of the French guns, facing the enemy until he was killed.

The body still lies between the French and German lines, although a number of officers have tried to recover it.

Grand Trunk Commissary Car.

When the full account is written of Canada's participation in the war there will be no more interesting chapter than that dealing with the methods employed in transporting this great army of men from the training areas to the seaboard, over distances, in many instances, of thousands of miles, and thence from our Atlantic ports to the English camps and the trenches of Flanders and France. One side of this work which stands out most clearly is the use of the Military dining cars which have been specially created in Canada to provide our soldiers with meals while on their long railway journeys. No country in the world ever faced the problem of carrying over so great a distance by rail so many men and to meet the situation something new in railroad equipment had to be provided to attend to the cooking and serving of meals. The ordinary dining car, as compact as a watch in its arrangement, can feed thirty people at one sitting, but how to cope hundreds of men at one time was the problem. That it has been mastered in splendid fashion is a compliment to the dining car experts of Canada, and particularly to Mr. E. W. Smith, Superintendent of dining and parlor car service, Grand Trunk Railway System. So successful have been the methods adopted on the Grand Trunk that they have attracted the attention of authorities in all parts of the world and were recently inquired into by the United States Government.

The Grand Trunk Commissary Car shown in the illustration is the largest travelling kitchen ever devised. It is eighty feet long, has a full-sized hotel range ten feet in length, steam-cooking apparatus and sixty-foot refrigerator space and store-room capacity for many tons of provisions. Eight cooks work in it without confusion, while a passageway running the whole length of the car allows the military waiters to pass on their way to and from the coaches. In the movement of a battalion two of these cars are used, the military special being run, as a rule, in two sections. The commissary car is placed in the centre of the train in order that it is easy of access from all the coaches. When a battalion entrains the Commissary Department is always the subject of keen interest among the men in khaki. The military cooks are for the time being out of action. The comfort of the men, so far as diet is concerned, depends upon the railway's crew, in charge of a specially chosen steward. The system of service is explained to the soldiers by the steward at the first meal on the train. The non-commissioned officer in each coach appoints his own waiters. Punctually as the minute hand of the watch reaches the meal hour the waiters from the first car on the train and the last car walk through to the commissary. The cooks have been preparing for hours and everything is ready and piping hot. Along the great counter is spread the various portions of the meal. It is breakfast time and the morning menu calls for oatmeal porridge, meats, potatoes, bread and butter, jam and coffee. Two men take the big trays of meats and potatoes, another the bread, already sliced and buttered, another the porridge, another the coffee and so to the end. As soon as the first two coaches have been supplied two more squads of waiters arrive until all are served. Within fifteen minutes every man on the train is busy with his meal. Serving over twelve hundred men in fifteen minutes without fuss or furore means organization and that is the secret of this railway's method of handling the problem. The rule is that every man shall be amply supplied and nothing delights the cook more than to see boys relish some favorite dish so well that they come back for "more." Three fine meals a day make happy interludes on the long rail journeys. The appreciation of the officers and men for the service given makes the hard work necessary in carrying out the task a pleasure to the men concerned.

FRENCHMEN ARE CALLED.

Consul Here Will Supply Necessary Documents.

Orders have been received by the Consul-General for France to invite all Frenchmen born in 1898, and those omitted from preceding classes, to ask for their inscription on the lists of the class of 1918, in which they are to be incorporated.

The documents necessary for this inscription will be supplied to them upon request by the French Consul in Toronto, or in whose district they happen to be located, which documents must be returned to the Consul's office before the 15th day of February, 1915, in order that they may be presented in France on the 15th day of March, 1917.

Those who consider themselves entitled to exemption must furnish a medical certificate, stating in what state of health they are, with full details and precision as to fitness or unfitness for military service. Mention must also be made as to size, weight and power of eye sight.

Those suspended from previous classes are also subject to the same obligations, and exemption of which should be attended to without delay in order to regularize their military situation.

70 P.C. WOUNDED RECOVER.

Claim That Is Made by the German Government.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Of the total number of officers and men in the German army who were wounded during the second year of the war, seventy per cent. fully recovered and went back to the trenches, according to official figures published to-day by the German Government. Only 6.4 per cent. of the wounded were completely unfit for military service, and the other men wounded were able to do military duty at home. Twelve hundred and fifty soldiers went blind during the war.

WAR SAVING CERTIFICATES.

Finance Department to Aid Campaign.

Ottawa, January 11—On the payment of $21.60, a certificate to the face value of $25 payable at the end of three years, will be issued, under the plan of the Finance Department, for war savings certificates in connection with the campaign of national saving.

These certificates will be issued soon, and the yield on the investment will be 5.6 per cent. The plan is especially designed to promote saving on the part of the people who have only small incomes.

ROUMANIAN PICTURES

A Talk With the Queen of Roumania

(By Hamilton Fyfe, British Correspondent.)

"The Queen will see you between ten and eleven" wrote the lady in waiting, "at the Palace Hospital." Only the day before this the Palace Hospital had been opened. All the ground floor, where the state rooms are, had been turned into wards for wounded, into bathrooms, bandaging rooms, operation rooms. Under the archway they were carrying in wounded on stretchers when I arrived.

In the hall of the palace was a working party, stretching hard at bed shirts, dressing gowns, and so on. Nurses in white, with their headdress arranged like that which one sees in France, passed frequently through. After a few minutes two of them came quickly toward me. One was the lady-in-waiting, whom I knew, the other was the Queen. She held her hand out 'How do you do?" she said. "Let us sit down here." "Here" was the long table in the hall littered with needlework, books for the soldiers, packages of cigarettes. The Queen drew a chair up to it. The lady-in-waiting retired. "Sit down please," said the Queen. You must excuse our being in rather a muddle. You see we have only just started work.

There was nothing to distinguish her from the other nurses, except that across her forehead she wore an ermine bandeau instead of linen. Yet without that even I should have recognised her at once for her portrait is to be seen in almost every house. It is customary to say of Queens that they are beautiful. But the beauty of Princess Marie of Edinburg, niece of King Edward, cousin of King George, was admired and spoken about long before she was Queen. Fair haired, with deep blue-grey eyes which suggest the image of deep pools, now tranquil and smiling, now dimmed by passing clouds, now flashing and piercing like the shafts of vivid light, with clearly cut slightly aquiline profile, tender in repose, she has been from her girlhood, valued not only by these charms of feature but for that subtle, far less common quality, distinction. And thus her mind and soul have developed, so that gift of distinction has become more and more noticeable. At forty she is still a beautiful woman, and many say "more beautiful than ever," for the spirit that shines through the flesh has been tried in the fires of pain and of joy, has sounded the depths of life and drawn from them knowledge and sympathy and strength.

It is her understanding of life, her disregard of the mere trappings and suits of her great position, her quick intelligence and warm humanity that have won her the affection of the Rumanian people.

I could see at once from her manner to be a strange, why she was loved. To begin with she is entirely free from any stiffness or self-consciousness, defects from which royalty too often suffer. She has the happy knack of putting everyone immediately at ease. She shows the real woman in herself and draws out the reality from others.

We talked first about the hospital. "I wanted to give them the whole place," she said but there would have been the difficulties about carrying stretchers up the staircase and then, she added with a little laugh "I suppose we must live somewhere, some have kept our own private rooms."

I asked whether the women of Buchrest had come forward readily to help in the Red Cross work. "Splendidly" the Queen answered. They do not mind how hard the work is.

"Here in the Palace" she went on, "I have no difficulty about getting anybody or anything I want. You can understand that. But it isn't so in all hospitals and our needs will increase as time slips on. We have got a wonderfully good medical service and Red Cross organisation, when you consider what a little country this is, only 8 million people. But we do want to be guaranteed against any shortage in the future. We want surgeons, we want trained nurses and we want all kinds of hospital stores." We were walking through the hospital. Every now and then the Queen stopped to make some poor fellow more comfortable. They are such fine people, our peasants," she said. "So patient and uncomplaining." We had one man very badly wounded in another hospital where I visit. As soon as he was settled in bed I asked him how he felt. "Not very grand, your Majesty," he told me, but I don't care so long as you become Empress of all the Rumanians. Of course you know how they all feel about their brothers in Transylvania. I feel with them, for I have become thoroughly Rumanian.

The process of becoming thoroughly Rumanian, cannot have been altogether pleasant for the young Princess. What sustained her all through the years of storm and stress? Chiefly her abundant vitality. Let her answer for herself. We were speaking of the field hospitals at the front, "I want so much to go and see them," she said, I think they would like it." But I know for the present, at any event, visitors are not wanted. Later on I hope, for I feel that perhaps I might be able to stimulate them, as I did the workers in the cholera camps a few years ago. You see I am always in good spirits and that helps to cheer the people up. I dare say it is the result of having such good health. I wasn't in the least afraid of cholera. I never am afraid of anything in that way. I suppose I must be a fatalist." Those who have read any of the Queen's books, know that there runs through her nature a strong vein of mysticism. Nearly all the chapters have lines from "Lionn Macleod" on Rabindranath Tagore to introduce them. How many Queens are familiar with these authors, I wonder? But her mysticism, her fatalism, have nothing in common with Oriental fatalism. They are bound up with a notable practicality. She was eminently practical when she visited the cholera district. She is showing the same valuable, and I like to think the same British quality now. She is practical in her view of the war and Rumania's share in it. Bloodshed and the hideous maiming of men, the tears of women, and the cry of orphaned babies, move her to detestation, as they must every woman's heart. But she sees that there is no road to peace, save the one which the allied nations are now pursuing. I have been told that since Rumania came into line the Queen had seemed relieved of a burden. We can easily understand this. King Ferdinand is a Hohenzollern. She was an English Princess. Each of them has become "thoroughly Rumanian," and, thinking only of Rumania's good; never a shadow of antagonism came between them. But one can imagine the strain which each had to endure. —J. E. H. SPRINGVILLE PERSONALS

Springville, January 11. — Miss Hazel Hunter of Galt is visiting with friends here.

Mr. J. Grandy of Oxbow, Sask., is visiting at the home of his brother-in-law here.

A meeting of the Girls' Mission Band was held at the home of Miss K. E. Cathcart on Monday afternoon at two o'clock. A very enjoyable time was reported.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Ball and Miss Thelma, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. J. Cathcart.

Miss Marion Armstrong is visiting Mrs. A. Laing.

POINTED REVOLVER AT OMEMEE YOUTHS

LINDSAY, Jan. 11.—A well-known lady of Omemee, who is now in the county jail on a week's remand dating from last Saturday, is the only inmate of the prison. The woman in question is charged with pointing a revolver at some of the village youths, whom, it is reported, has been a source of annoyance to her and had by their continued taunts worked her into a state of frenzy. She is the mother of three children, her husband being at the front fighting in defence of Canada and the Empire. It is probable that her case will be dealt with by the magistrate before Saturday.

AIDING GERMANY'S INVALIDS

Work and Not "False Sympathy" Is Burden of Appeal.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—The War Ministry has made public an appeal on behalf of war invalids asking especially that they be given work whenever possible and never "false sympathy which is likely to be exemplified more and more by the purchase of postal cards and knick-knacks from invalids who have taken to hawking and who are deliberately playing upon sentimental sympathies."

The appeal says: "Even with the most favourable peace there will be no prospect for a long time of sufficient wealth to enable the state wholly, or even in large part, to support its invalids. Therefore, charity will not suffice. Work alone uplifts and ennobles; even the poorest work creates and sustains health." The appeal warns against noticing or commenting on invalids' wounds.

FOOD SWINDLE IN BERLIN.

Suburban Municipality Was Willing to Buy Supposed Military Food.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—Neukoelin, a suburb of Greater Berlin, has been the victim of a clever food swindle and is mourning the loss of 210,000 marks which it paid three crooks for non-existing carloads of sausage and bacon. The swindlers informed the suburban officials that the food, supposedly military property, was at Aix-La-Chapelle, but could be procured quietly for the mentioned sum.

HIGH COST OF LIVING IS FELT BY THE MINISTERS

The Situation is Discussed by the Ministerial Association of Millbrook and Cavan---Resolution is Passed Commending the Matter to the Consideration of the "Respective Congregation.

The regular monthly meeting of the association was held in the Board Room of the Methodist Church, Millbrook on Monday, January 8th, 1917.

The meeting was largely attended and the office bearers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—Rev. G. I. Craw, Springville.

Vice President—Rev. W. H. Higgs, Millbrook.

Secretary Treasurer — Rev. W. Wickett, Fraserville.

Among the matters discussed was the question of ministerial support, in view of the great increased cost of living.

After full consideration of the subject the following resolution was unanimously passed:

That whereas the cost of living has enormously increased during the last two years, so that the purchasing power of the dollar only amounts now to about 67c, and whereas the people generally are enjoying unusual prosperity, good crops and better prices than ever before known, the Association considering all these circumstances, feel that for the efficient discharge of the duties of the ministry and for the providing of recruits for the ministry in the future, some consideration is due them, so that they may continue to give their whole time to the ministry of the word and the book of the church.

Therefore they desire to commend this important matter to the prayerful consideration of the respective congregation.

Signed on behalf of the Association,
G. I. Craw, President.
W. T. Wickett, Secretary.

Lloyd George May Reveal Conference Details

Monster Meeting is Being Held Today in the Guild Hall, London

Special to The Examiner.

(By-Ed. L. Keen, London.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Britain is hoping Premier Lloyd George will reveal some of the proceedings of the recent allied conference at Rome, when he speaks late to-day at the Guild Hall. The meeting, unique in that it will bring on the same platform as speakers in favor of England's 'victory loan' three men who have held the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer, will be Lloyd George's first public appearance since his address in the House of Commons.

The great interest has been manifested in the Rome conference but little information beyond an expression of satisfaction at the cordial spirit of co-operation developed there between all nations of the Entente has been made public, save that the conference was a momentous one. It would be characterstic of Lloyd George if he seized upon to-day's occasion to kindle enthusiasm for "win the war loan' by revealing some details of the conference. It is unprecendented that three such diverse elements at Lloyd George, Andrew Bonar Law and Reginald Mackenna all Chancellors of Exchequer at one time, should be united as they will be this afternoon in the advocacy of a measure. Mackenna was Chancellor in the days of the Asquith regime, having succeeded Lloyd George in that post. Bonar Law is the present Chancellor.

Fifteen hundred tickets have been given out for this afternoon's meeting. The demand for seats far exceeded the supply and there were suggestions of several overflow meetings.

FORGIVES GIRL WHO SHOT SON

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—A pathetic little group of relatives and friends gathered yesterday in the house at 16 River street, Verdun, where the funeral service was held at two o'clock over the body of the late Albert Haynes, who was shot to death by Eva Boyle early Monday morning. This is the place where the boy lived with his mother, and although it was her only son who was laid to rest this afternoon the broken-hearted woman bears no malice for the girl who was responsible for bringing such a sorrow into her life. She has entirely forgiven the girl at whose hands her son met his death, and expressed the hope that it would be the act of a benign Providence if the girl did not recover from her self-inflicted wounds and so be prevented from standing trial for murder.

MANY EXPRESS SYMPATHY

A continual stream of friends called at the house during the morning to express their sympathy with the mother of the boy who was popular among his associates. His body was lying in the front room of the house, and numbers of floral tributes were laid around it as they had been received from his comrades.

Although bearing the bereavement very bravely, the mother is concealing her broken heart, for, as she said this morning, "I can scarcely realise that my boy is gone." He was an only son, and the mother thought the world of him. "He was a good boy," she said "and was never away from me twenty four hours. He had friends everywhere, and although he only worked at the Allis-Chalmers-Bullock plant for seven weeks, the foreman said he was one of the straightest and steadiest boys he ever had under him. If he had been a bad boy, I could have understood it better; but he was not. He was my only comfort."

PITY FOR THE GIRL.

The forgiving nature of the mother was very evident, as she showed no vindictive spirit against Eva Boyle, and expressed regret when told this morning that the girl had passed a quiet night at the hospital, and was slightly better this morning.

"I do not know the girl," she said "but it would be better for her if she were to die. Although she took my darling boy from me I would not like to see the poor girl tried for murder."

The esteem in which Albert Haynes was held by his comrades is evidence by the fact that the night gang, with whom he had worked for only a few weeks, called on his mother last night and left her a purse of $25 as a mark of their esteem and expression of their sympathy. They also attended the funeral in a body to-day.

DAUGHTER SHARED VIEWS.

The only other child left Mrs. Haynes is a daughter, and she shares the same feeling in regard to Eva Boyle as her mother. She could not understand why her brother should be shot, but she is not bitter against the perpetrator of the deed.

"I only wish they would let me see her," said the daughter. "I went to the hospital just to ask her why she killed my brother, but they would not let me see her. I hope she will not get better."

And so resigned to their fate, mother and daughter are left to their mourning with nothing but forgiveness in their hearts for the unfortunate girl who is held responsible for the deed.

The funeral arrangements were very simple and entirely in keeping with the family's wishes. The father of the boy came to the house for the funeral service, and even here there seemed to be a family reunion. Th service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Bruce, of St. Jude's church, and a pathetic little sertege left the house for Mount Royal cemetery, where the remains were deposited.

And so ended on of the chapters in a tragedy that has left a mother's heart empty and that has cut off a life of twenty-five years.

Preparing For "Victory Loan"

LONDON, Jan. 10. — Although the formal terms of the new British war loan will not be made public until Friday, a nation-wide campaign for subscriptions will formally be launched at a mass meeting in the London Guildhall to-morrow. Premier Lloyd George and Andrew Bonar Law and Reginald McKenna, the present and former Chancellor of the Exchequer, will be the chief speakers.

From this meeting as a starting point will begin a sweeping canvass carefully organized with the aim of getting all available pence, shillings and pounds from every nook and corner of Great Britain and Ireland.

Mass Meetings Everywhere.

Mass meetings will be held in every important town with speakers of various degrees of prominence. These meetings will be followed by an elaborate programme, including even house to house visits by experts who will explain in detail the necessity of the national effort and the means whereby everyone can get the largest possible amount of the new "victory loan."

Millions of Leaflets.

The war savings committee which has been in existence for more than a year with its 900 sub-committees and 17,000 local associations, will be the principal agency to appeal to the small investors. Millions of leaflets and posters and thousands of columns of newspaper space will be used to explain the appeal in simple language. Information bureaus are to be opened at every centre of population, and every post office will have counters specially devoted to the business of the war loan.

Soldiers To Be Asked.

Even soldiers at the front and in training will be asked to subscribe, and it is believed the amount realized from this source alone will run into millions of pounds.

The terms of the "victory loan" as they have become known in a general way in the financial district, contain nothing financially sensational. The bonds will yield a shade over five per cent. or four per cent. free of income tax.

Easy Payments.

Payments of subscriptions will be stretched in easy instalments over a period of several months while the banks have agreed to lend practically to the par value of the new securities during the period of the war.

The amount of the loan will be unlimited, and the total subscription no doubt will be the greatest in history.

One reason for the certainty of an enormous total, even at the comparatively moderate interest rate is the amount of outstanding Government paper having the right of conversion. This conversion right will be enjoyed by the holders of the £800,000,000 old war loan, and the £1,600,000,000 short term obligations. In addition to this sweeping up of old paper, it is hoped enough money will be realized to carry the Government well through the year.

EXPERIMENTS MADE IN WAR ON WEEDS

GUELPH, Dec. 10.—The quantity weeds found in the seed each year has been steadily increasing and to control the situation, co-operative experiments have been conducted for the last five years. According to a report presented to the Ontario Experimental Union by Prof. J. E. Howitt, of the Ontario Agricultural College.

The object of this is to have carried on by the men on their own farms experiments in the eradication of weeds. The results of which will furnish data from which definite statements may be made regarding the best methods of controlling the various injurious weeds. Each year early in the spring, circulars are sent out, inviting men who have any of the weeds included in the list of experiments on their farms to co-operate in the work. Those who sign the application forms for any of the weed experiments are furnished with detailed information concerning the carrying out of the work, and late in the fall they are supplied with blank forms on which to report the results.

SEVEN EXPERIMENTS MADE

Seven experiments in all have been tried, viz.: The use of rape in the destruction of perennial sow thistle. A system of intensive cropping and cultivation for the eradication of perennial sow thistle. The use of rape in eradication of twitch grass. A method of cultivation and cropping for the destruction of twitch grass.. Spraying with cereal crops. A method of cultivation for the destruction of the ox eye daisy.

During the past five years some sixty farmers co-operated in this work.

These experiments have been carried on for five successive years in many parts of the Province, on various types of soil and under different climatic conditions. The results therefore, should be a safe index for the whole Province. They may be briefly summarized as follows:

First, that good cultivation followed by rape sown in drills provides a means of eradicating both perennial sow thistle and twitch grass; second, that rape is a more satisfactory crop to use in the destruction of twitch grass than suckwheat; third, that rape gives much better results in the eradication of twitch grass and perennial sow thistle when sown in drills and cultivated than it does when sown broadcast; fourth that thorough deep cultivation in fall and spring followed by a well cared for hoed crop will destroy bladder campion; fifth, that mustard may be prevented from seeding in oats, wheat and barley by spraying with a twenty per cent. solution of iron sulphate without any serious injury to the standing crop or to fresh seedings of clover.

DESTRUCTION OF MUSTARD

Points of interest brought out by the experiments in spraying with iron sulphate to destroy mustard were:

(1) The necessity of spraying early, just when the plants are coming into bloom. If the spraying is left too late, the older plants will not be destroyed by the solution, and will form seed, and hence the experiment will not be entirely satisfactory.

(2) To spray thoroughly, and with a good pressure. In order to spray thoroughly with an ordinary broadcast attachment, it is necessary to keep the horses walking very slowly. If an attempt is made to cover the ground quickly some of the plants will be missed and the results will not be entirely satisfactory.

(3) In regard to the cost of spraying with iron sulphate it was found that the cost of material per acre varied from $1 to $2.40. Iron sulphate has advanced in price from $1 to $2 per cwt. so that it now costs from $2.80 to $3.80 per acre for material to spray mustard.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

ALLIES DISCUSS ITALY'S CLAIMS

Washington Hears Officially of Subject of Conference.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—One of the chief reasons for the allied conference at Rome was to discuss Italy's claim to territory on the eastern shore of the Adriatic Sea, according to official reports to this Government yesterday.

PLEBISCITE ON SUFFRAGE

Women of Kingston to Secure Opinion of the Citizens.

KINGSTON, Jan. 10.—Before the end of the month the men and women of this city are to have an opportunity of expressing their opinion as to whether women should have a vote at elections. This was decided upon at a largely attended meeting of women held at Queen's University. The ladies will cover the city with cards to be signed by citizens, stating whether or not they are in favour of giving she vote to women. The result will be forwarded to the headquarters of the Equal Franchise Association, Toronto, and later on to be presented to Premier Hearst when a deputation of women from all over Canada will wait on the Premier.

A MESSAGE YOU WILL DO WELL TO HEED

When in this store glance at the heavily stocked shelves of the Dress Goods Department; compare it with other dress goods sections, that come to your notice, then judge who can submit the best prices and fabrics. Large Spring Shipments have already arrived.

Do not ridicule the idea of buying Spring Dress Goods now—as months go by stocks will diminish and such a stringency in the woollen market has never before been experienced. You will find during later months that it will be well-nigh impossible to secure materials that contain a reasonable percentage of wool, yet you will pay dearly for these cotton mixtures.

One year ago we placed immense orders for dress goods and suitings and have forestalled the dirth of material so far as the Cressman Store is concerned. If the wool market had adjusted itself we would have found ourselves with an array of woollens much larger than necessary. But our judgement has been vindicated and you will find no other concern so well situated to supply your needs, as our Dress Goods Section.

CALL CONFERENCE ON BARN FIRES

Means Must Be Found to Prevent Spontaneous Combustion.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—In order to work out a solution of the problem raised by the great epidemic of barn fires in Ontario during the late summer and fall, a conference of representatives of all the Mutual Fire Insurance Companies in Ontario will be held in Toronto on March 1.

Preparations for the conference have been under way for some time, and the selection of the date fits in with the two-day convention of the Mutuals, which will be held on February 27 and 28.

Mr. E. P. Heaton, Provincial Fire Marshal, will address the convention on barn fires and spontaneous combustion, and at the conference following will lay before the representatives of the co-operative insurance companies the mass of information on barn fires gathered during the past few months. If methods can be devised to prevent spontaneous combustion in stored hay and grain the remedy lies in the hands of the companies in their right to refuse insurance unless the farmer takes the precautions required.

Press Comment On Peace League Talk

"Neutrality fails to Protect."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Our neutrality has failed to protect us precisely because we are not isolated and cannot be. The president himself has said that our position is 'intolerable.'"

"Should make very Sure."

Springfield (Mass.) Republican: — "Before we joined such a league we should want to make very sure as a people that we should 'play up,' or, in our American phrase, that we had not started something that we could not and might not wish to finish."

"Proposes to Mix."

Hartford (Conn.) Courant: "Now, all of a sudden the president proposes to mix in with the greatest war that ever sorrowed the world. What if peace prevailed abroad and Germany called on us to stop the trouble in Mexico!"

"Interesting to watch Fate."

Washington Post: "It would be interesting to watch the fate of any treaty proposing to make the United States a party to European affairs, with the inevitable provision that Europe should become a party to pan-American affairs."

"Must Remain Inviolable."

Baltimore American: "The Monroe Doctrine is apart from the world peace programme, and must remain inviolable."

"Idea is Catching."

Baltimore News: "The idea of a league to enforce peace is catching. But there is a vast difference between its public agitation by private individuals and the commitment of this country to it by the Government."

"Ensuing State Would be Bad."

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: "The ensuing state would be as bad as, if not worse than, that which brought on this war. The United States must remain out of any political alliance of that kind. To join it would be to put our neck in a noose."

"Subject to Review."

Charlestown News and Courier: "Any move that the president might make to commit the nation to such a change would be subject to review, and perhaps to rejection by Congress and the people."

CARDS BY THE THOUSAND

They Are Being Returned, Filled in, to National Service Headquarters

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The ten days in which National Service cards are supposed to be filled in are up, and the response is remarkable. Men occupying the highest positions, nationally, politically, commercially, and professionally, have volunteered the information sought and answered "Yes" to the query as to whether they would be willing to undertake other work of a character essential to the successful prosecution of the war. Sir Robert Borden set the example.

The big bulk of the replies which are coming by tens of thousands are from the towns and rural parts and from the west. From the cities of the east they will come later. A staff of several hundred is engaged in tabulating the cards as to occupation, ages and other particulars. About three or four months will be required for this work.

ONE FAMILY'S SACRIFICE

Four Sons and a Daughter Killed on Active Service.

LONDON, Jan. 10. — A Scottish Canadian family's tragic sacrifice in the war became known on departure from Granville Canadian Hospital at Ramsgate of Nurse Murray and her brother, Corporal Murray, who wore three gold stripes on his sleeve. They are the only surviving children of Colonel Murray, Toronto, formerly of the Black Watch. Two of Col. Murray's sons were killed at Ypres, two fell on the Somme and a younger daughter was killed by a shell whilst nurse at a Belgian clearing station.

SEVEN PASTORS EVICTED FROM THEIR CHURCHES

TORONTO, Jan. 11. — "I have here the names of seven preachers in this Presbytery who have been practically evicted from their congregations in the past year. Have we enquired into the reason for such a state of affairs? Have we got to the bottom of the matter? I believe that we ministers have lost our mooring. Instead of preaching the gospel, we have fixed our considerations on other things such as the collection and the crowd."

Rev. Dr. Murray, of St. Paul's church, startled the ministers at the meeting of the Presbytery held at St. Jame's Square Presbyterian church, when he uttered the above statement in submitting the report of Rev. Dr. McTavish on church evangelism in connection with the Home Missions of the Presbyterian church. Although those who were present laughed heartily at Dr. Murray's remarks concerning his fellow ministers, there were some who whispered that his remarks would have a bad effect, particularly in view of the fact that Dr. Andrew Robertson's resignation was to be accepted.

Dr. Robertson, whose resignation as minister of St. James Square church was to be brought before the Presbytery, occupied the chair as moderator. As soon as Dr. Murray had concluded his remarks, he stopped the debate on the motion for the adoption of Dr. McTavish's report, and proceeded with the business of the day, which was his own resignation.

He resigned the chair in favour of Rev. Dr. John Neill. Mr. Wallace Anderson, on behalf of the session of St. James' Square church declared that he was placed in a unique position. It was he who had gone to the Presbytery at Halifax, Nova Scotia, seven years ago to ask that Rev. Dr. Robertson be released from his church at St. John's, Newfoundland, and allowed to come to Toronto. "At the meeting of the congregation last Wednesday it was unfortunate that undue publicity was given, which we would be glad to blot out to-day, declared the speaker.

NO PEACE SIGN IN NEW ORDERS

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—There is no evidence of an early peace at the offices of the Imperial Munitions Board in Ottawa. On the contrary, all the preparations are for a protracted struggle. Since the elevation of David Lloyd George to the premiership, the War Office plans as interpreted from orders received by the Ottawa Munitions Board, have redoubled in vigor. The expenditure in Canada of scores of millions of dollars on munitions plants of many kinds has been recently authorised. In some cases the new plants cannot possibly be ready for months. When they are completed the National Service Commission will be strained to provide labour for their operation.

The policy of the new British War Council is evidently to deal some smashing blows at the enemy as soon as possible, and to continue these blows to a "block-out," to use Lloyd George's own words, no matter how long it takes.

The staff of the Imperial Munitions Board in Ottawa has grown enormously. It is housed in one temporary building and several smaller ones. Yet more room is required.

An idea of the extent of the Canadian board's work may be gathered from the statement that it has been purchasing steel at the rate of 90,000 tons a month for manufacture into shells, and that this amount is likely to be increased.

The Idling Life Of A Reporter

Those Columbia School of Journalism students who went on strike recently because they considered an essay of Journaliam in Philadelphia too arduous an assignment, will probably seek a new profession after reading in the Herald recently of the quarter hour's work of a Herald reporter.

The reporter, who earlier in the night had reported a dozen individual New York histories without threatening to strike, discovered a fire, turned in an alarm, blew a police whistle ran to the burning residence, alarmed the sleeping family, carried a fainting servant from the fourth floor to the street, assisted the police in rescuing five other persons and then telephoned a detailed account of all these happenings to the Herald office—all in fifteen minutes.

This incident is cited not to indicate that this Herald reporter is more dextrous than other men in the profession but to give to the School of Journalism students an idea of the work a real reporter can perform when he has nothing else to do.—New York Herald.

Buffalo Bill Had A Stirring Career

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 14.—Wm. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) is dead. The noted plainsman and scout breathed his last yesterday.

The most romantic figure left over from the thrilling days of Indian fights and clashes with white renegades, a figure at once the ideal and despair of every red-blooded boy in America, remnant of an organization that once roamed the plains of the fast-vanishing wild west, disappeared with the death of Buffalo Bill.

Hero of hundreds of cheaply-bound paper books designed to catch the youthful eye, and foremost figure in book after book of Morocco bound, treasured adventure tales, he was the ideal of boys, old and young, the country over.

He killed his first Indian when he was only 12 years old, while he was with a troop of U. S. soldiers on their way from Lawrence, Kansas, to Utah.

Young Cody was only ten when he left Iowa and went with his father and mother and seven sisters and brothers to Kansas. Isaac Cody, his father, was forced to leave when he became too ardent as a champion of anti-slavery.

Cody served in the civil war, first as a horse buyer for the Government, then as a guide to Col. Clarke, commanding the 9th Kansas Volunteers.

He gained his nickname in 1867, when he killed 4,280 buffaloes while under a contract to supply a Kansas Pacific Railroad gang with buffalo meat.

He quit as a buffalo hunter to become a scout, serving under Generals Forsyth, Hazen, Custer, and other famous men. General Sheridan and Serman obtained for Cody the rank of chief scout in the United States army in 1872. He led in 1876, as a scout, General Terry's punitive expedition against the Sioux Indians after the Custer massacre.

Cody appeared on the stage in a play written by Ned Buntline, "The Scout of the Plains," playing the lead. He returned to the stage at the close of the Indian wars. His famous Wild West show was organized in 1883, touring Europe and the United States. Cody was president of the Cody Military College and International Academy for Rough Riders. Besides an autobiography Cody was author of "The Great Salt Lake Trail."

Sale of Graniteware

There can be no better time during the entire year when a sale of good kitchen graniteware should be well patronized than at present. Such a sale is announced in another column of to-day's issue by Messrs. Campbell & Best, next to the post office, to take place on Saturday. It will be of special interest to housekeepers to make themselves familiar with the particulars of this sale. Surprisingly low prices characterize this sale. About 1,000 pieces of gray graniteware are offered, and the little bits of prices constitute their noteworthy bargain offerings. No matter how low the prices may seem for such goods, the quality may be depended upon as being as represented. See the special display in the east window. Read the advertisement and see the granite Saturday morning.

Dried fruits are sometimes made palatable by the addition of a fresh flavour. Orange juice improves prunes; ginger root, pears and so on. In papering a room remember that large patterns and dark colors make a room seem small, and a plain, light paper makes it larger.

PRACTICAL TALK BY MR. G. O. CAMERON

Evolution of the Telephone Revealed to the Boys of the Y. M. C. A.

An interesting programme has been drawn up for the Standard Efficiency groups which meets every Wednesday night in the Y.M.C.A.

The following practical talks have been arranged: The Evolution of the Telephone; How to Classify Birds; Sex Education; Books and Reading; Craftsmanship; Collection Night — when the boys exhibit articles which they have collected and made; History of Religion; Music; Art; Sculpture; and Architecture; Nature; 1st Aid to the Injured; and the Growth of Altruism in the Individual.

Last night Mr. G. O. Cameron of the Bell Telephone Co., delighted the boys with an address on the Evolution of the Telephone. Mr. Cameron held the attention of his audience from start to finish, which places him in the class of experts in talking to boys.

At the close of the address James Pogue moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cameron for his kindness in coming to the Y and giving the boys such a fine and interesting talk.

Harold Copp seconded the motion, which met with the hearty approval of the boys.

Next Wednesday night Mr. Elcome will give an address on "How to Classify Birds."

The Junior Employed Boys had a large turn out to their Gymnasium and Bible Class last night. Tonight the Junior Employed Boys' Club will hold a social for their club in the "Y."

Programme To-night.

To-night the Senior Employed Boys' Life Problem Club will meet at 7.30.

Saturday morning the Junior Collegiate and the Senior School Boys' Bible study group, will meet for study. All boys will find a welcome to any of the study groups.

Mr. Bruce Hamilton has a fine group of employed boys which meet for Bible study every Wednesday night.

The Boys' Skating Rink is in fine condition now, and every day sees a large number of boys playing hockey and enjoying themselves.

SHE GAINED 10 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Bostwick, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak watery blood and dizziness, bad nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact a complete invalid. Doctors told me my heart had kidneys were diseased and gave me up hope by going to home of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have taken several boxes of this old complaint and gained 10 pounds in weight."

It was decided to invest the surplus in Canadian war bonds.

SEES MENACE IN LOVELESS MATING

Chief Magistrate McAdoo also Assails "Lop-Sided, Fishy-Eyed Young Men."

New York, Jan. 11. — Temporarily deserting the bench for the pulpit, Chief Magistrate William McAdoo addressed the Men's Bible Class of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church on the necessity for love in marriage, and on the menace facing this city in its army of "lop- sided, fishy eyed and round shouldered young men with nicotine stained fingers, who are starting from anywhere, going nowhere." The magistrate urged the necessity for certificates of physical and moral fitness for all men about to be married, and he predicted that such a law would be passed.

"A man cannot have a good or noble character," the magistrate said "unless he has the capacity to see the good in God. We don't see God through the intellect. Scientists have tried to find God with the intellect and have failed. It is only through the windows of the heart that we can find Him, and unless the windows are clean of the dust and the grime of selfishness, greed, tradition and lust, He cannot be found."

Paying his respects to the army of the "fishy-eyed," the magistrate declared that they were a dangerous menace to the community.

"Talk about universal training," said the chief magistrate, "I would like to be a sergeant with about eight stripes on my arm and have about two hundred of them down on Long Island for drill. I'd get something out of them or make life miserable for them."

The happy marriage he added, was the marriage of love, "and nothing else."

"Marriage of convenience is nothing but a bargain and sale," he added. "I don't mean by love just a maudlin, silly sentiment. Becoming enamoured of a pretty girl is not real love. I do not advocate hasty marriages. It is the hasty marriage that is leading us to the divorce courts."

In the audience were John D. Rockefellar, Jr., and Mrs. McAdoo.

One Egg in 19 Days For Berlin Citizens

LONDON, Thursday, Jan 11.—The Berlin municipality says Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, has announced that, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions of production, it will be possible for every citizen in Berlin to have one egg between January 19 and January 31, but that nothing at present can be said regarding the supply of eggs after this time.

Miss M. Little, 481 Gilmour street is in Toronto for a few days.

Mr. Mervin Knox returned yesterday from a weeks' visit in Toronto.

The Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. will hold their bi-weekly tea on Saturday, January 13th at the Empress. The hostesses, Mrs. Widdifield and Miss Davidson will be assisted by Mrs. John Birnie, the Misses Kathleen Powel, Jessie Spence, Marian Grigve, Amy Clementi, Georgie Stevenson, Flossie Mitchell, Madge Graham, Ola Cavanagh and Florence Scott.

Miss Bemington, Miss Brown, Miss Davidson who have been visiting Miss Vera Knox, Gilmour street, for the past week have returned home.

The Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E., will hold a sock shower at the residence of Mrs. Harry Thompson, Hunter street on Saturday, January 20th in aid of the "Secours Nationale". A stirring appeal has been received by the society from France where socks are scarce and wool almost impossible to procure. A hearty response is hoped for, and the society hopes all will send socks and come. Tea will be served.

Miss Nora Smythe, Cobourg, is the guest of Judge and Mrs. Huycke, Englehurne, East City.

Mr. W. H. Hill returned yesterday from a business trip to Toronto.

Miss Helen Davidson who has been the guest of Mrs. Yoris Ryerson, Toronto, returned home yesterday.

Miss Elsie Anderson, Gilmour street is spending a few days in Toronto.

Miss Annie Halliday, Fenelon Falls, is visiting Mrs. Knox, Gilmour street.

Miss Lucille Doris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Doris, Sophia street, East City, met with a very serious and painful accident on Monday last when she fell and broke her ankle. She will be confined to her home for sometime, and her many friends will be pleased to learn that she is doing as well as can be expected.

The friends of Mrs. E. McKinlay will be pleased to learn that she has been removed from Nicholls Hospital to her home, 498 Aylmer street, but still confined to bed, Mrs. E. McKinlay wishes to thank Mrs. Major Medd for the beautiful flowers and the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club for their plant; also kind friends for the sympathy during her stay in Hospital.

Dr. J. C. Wray and Mrs. Wray, who have been visiting the former's aunt, Mrs. Patterson, 675 Water st., left this week for their home in Redcliff, Alberta.

Miss Catharine Moher has returned to Toronto after spending a few days in the city with her parents, Patterson street.

Mrs. E. Plouffe and little daughter, has returned to Ottawa after spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Moher, Patterson street.

MEETING HELD IN HAVELOCK

A very successful meeting on benalf of the Children's Aid Society was held in the Town Hall Havelock last night when Mr. Spence gave an illustrated lantern lecture on the work of the Society. In the unavoidable absence of Reeve Matheson, the chair was taken by the Rev. Mr. Skene. At the close of the lecture it was decided to form a County Committee in accordance with the Children's Protection Act of Ontario and the following ladies and gentlemen were elected:

Mrs. Alex. Anderson, Mrs. H. Andrews, Mrs. Ghent, Mrs. A. C. Peake, Mrs. W. Vance; the Revs. Skene, Patterson, Adams, Messrs. F. L. Squire, J. P., C. A. Ghent and H. Andrews. The following officers were subsequently elected. President Rev. Mr. Skene; Vice President, Mrs. W. Vance, Secretary Treasurer, Mr. C. A. Ghent.

The success which Mr. Spence is meeting with in his publicity campaign is very encouraging and beneficial results to the Children's Aid Society are bound to accrue.

Next Wednesday Mr. Spence repeats his lecture in the Town Hall at Norwood when Reeve Squire will preside.

PETERBORO BOYS IN THE TRENCHES ARE BADLY IN NEED OF SOCKS

The Kitchener League, through the President, Mrs. Jos. Knox, Gilmour street has received an urgent appeal for sox and supplies sent by the League through letters received from the boys of Peterborough who have already benefitted by the wonderful work done by the Society. Since the outbreak of war five thousand pairs of sox have been sent, 500 scarfs and 825 different useful gifts. In part the letters run: Lieut. W. F. Hamilton—Many thanks for the scarf and socks your league has sent. The scarf is most useful in this English climate.

Pte. F. G. Quigley—A dry pair of socks is a luxury and much appreciated.

Pte. Charles Cove—Fully appreciate the value of a good pair of socks, army socks are useful we never take them if it is possible to get home-knit ones. Corp. Cove had received his issue of socks from Lieut. Martin Dunsford.

Pte. Chas Veenman, 93rd Battalion Received the socks just in right time as it was just our turn to go into the trenches and with the mud and frost a good dry pair of socks is fully appreciated.

Willie Holeroft, who is with Dr. Young of this city; thanks for the cigarettes. The ones we get here are extremely poor and the boys enjoy good ones in the trenches.

Wm. True—Everyone who gets a pair of your league's socks will be happy. My feet had been wet for days and I had only the one pair left so you may judge how warmly they were received. The best we get are from the Peterborough people.

With these few extracts of warm encouragement the League hopes the people will redouble their already splendid endeavour to keep the boys who are fighting for us as comfortable as possible.

MAJOR CARRUTHERS IN NEW POSITION

In a letter to a friend in Peterborough Major Carruthers states that he has resigned from the 39th Battalion and has been transferred to the Canadian Army Medical Corps and detailed as Quartermaster of the Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, Kent, in the hope that as soon as possible he will be sent to France.

MAYOR DUFFUS IS OUT OF THE CITY

First trip of the Year for the Mayor and Ald. Dobbin promises to be a good one

His Worship Mayor Duffus and Ald. F. H. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, are still out of the city. They have been away since Monday and are not expected home before the end of the week. They took in the trip of the Bonne Entente to Niagara Falls and other points, and on the return to Peterborough will endeavour to visit a number of places for the express purpose of inspecting motor driven fire apparatus. It is hardly likely they will find anything more antiquated so far as rolling stock is concerned than the horse and buggy fire department which they left behind. Even Lindsay is a lap ahead of Peterborough in this regard.

A MISSIONARY TO ONTARIO.

Western Man Tells What Has Been Done by Grain-Growers.

"The subjects which proved most interesting to our audiences were direct legislation and sane methods of taxation," said Mr. John Kennedy, Vice-President of the Grain Growers' Grain Company, Winnipeg.

The audiences referred to by Mr. Kennedy were those that assembled at Palmerston, Woodstock, Petrolea, Forest, Brechin, Belleville, Chesterville, Stouffville, Orillia, and Beaverton, under the auspices of the United Farmers of Ontario, to hear Mr. Kennedy and other speakers deal with subjects of special interest to farmers.

"Despite the fact that farmers were in the midst of haying from 100 to 300 turned out at each meeting," Mr. Kennedy continued.

By way of introduction, Mr. Kennedy usually began by telling of the work accomplished by the organized farmers of the western Provinces. And it was a wonderful story he had to tell. "To begin with," he said, "it was the farmers' organizations of the prairies that made the west dry. It was the resolution adopted at our local and Provincial conventions which crystallized the sentiment that banished the bar from the western limits of Ontario to the foothills of the Rockies. It was our organization that secured the enfranchisements of women in Manitoba and obtained the pledge of the same for Saskatchewan and Alberta. In Manitoba, again as the result of our efforts, a direct legislation act has been passed that is to be brought into force by proclamation, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta an incomplete system of direct legislation has been provided for, with an assurance of completion of the work at the next session of the Legislatures of those Provinces. The principle of direct legislation has already been applied in Manitoba, Provincial prohibition having been brought about by a popular vote, the reform being carried by three to one.

"In a business way the organized farmers of the west have created the largest grain commission business on the continent, and what is said to be the largest grain exporting business in America. Through our commission business we will handle 40,000,000 bushels of western grain for the year ending with August. Through our export organization we will handle 60,000,000 bushels, largely American grain. We are financing the elevator system of Alberta, where there are seventy-five elevators, and handling the grass passing through these elevators. We operate the two C. P. R. elevators at the head of the lakes. By means of our activity in the grain business we have created real competition in the western grain business, and so have added literally millions of dollars to the returns of western farmers. We have handled five million pounds of the binder twine purchased by the prairie farmers. That is not over 10 to 20 per cent. of the requirements of the west, but by our activity in this line we have created real competition here, too, and by so doing have saved our people 2 to 2½ cents per pound on their twine purchases. We have bought farm machinery and vehicles in wholesale lots and for cash, and have thus saved our people 30 per cent. in the cost of the same. By all this we have made all the differences between tolerable and intolerable conditions for the western farmer."

Having told what western farmers have done, Mr. Kennedy drove the lesson home to his Ontario audiences. "Who accomplished all this?" he asked. "Men who went from Ontario and settled in the west. You have thousands of farmers still in Ontario who are just as intelligent as those who have gone to the prairies. What western farmers have accomplished in the way of improving their conditions, Ontario farmers can do in improving conditions here.

Escaped From Germany.

Privates Lovell and V. Adick of the 3rd Battalion, Toronto, arrived in London after an exciting escape from a German prison, says a despatch to The Toronto Telegram from its special correspondent in London. They were captured on the 24th of April, 1915, at Langemarck, and taken, with other Canadians, into Germany. At first the treatment was harsh, but later it grew better, and there were not many complaints.

These Toronto men had been working some time to escape. At the farm where they worked they were paid 30 pfennings daily, equal to about six and a half cents in Canadian money. Eventually they were able to make a dash by night across the frontier, slipping past the sentries.

They were treated with the greatest kindness and sympathy by the Dutch people. The British Consul sent them at once to England.

Extra Judge Was Called From Lindsay For Poultry Show

The 1400 birds exhibited at the poultry show in the market hall, proved too big a task for the judges Mr. George Robertson of Ottawa, and Mr. James Baptie of Springville. The work had to be completed to-day, and in order that it would be completed in time the directors this morning phoned to Lindsay, and secured Mr. D. C. Trew, who arrived at noon and is helping finish the judging this afternoon.

This feature of the 1917 show illustrates the development of the Peterboro show. Mr. Robertson commenced the judging this afternoon for the 150 Special Prizes.

The public is reminded that the exhibit will be open this evening and that the distribution of the silver cups and other specials will take place. This is always an interesting event and there should be a large attendance. Thus far the show has been marked by big crowds.

A bird placed in the sales class yesterday by Mr. Everson at a price of $3, the limit, was sold to a man named Webster, who immediately resold it for $15 before it was judged. It was a white Wyandotte cock.

Province Has Wonderful Opportunity to Be of Vital Service to the Empire—War Conditions Have Stimulated the Export Trade of Dairy Products and the Scarcity Throughout the World Has Resulted in Prices Never Before Realized.

ADDRESS BY MR. N. W. ROWELL

Woodstock, January 12. — Dairymen from all over the district are here for the fiftieth annual convention of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association, which opened on Thursday. The exhibits in all classes were never so numerous or of such a high quality.

President James Bristow in his address referred to the important part Woodstock and Ingersoll and all of Oxford county have had in the dairy industry.

The first cheese factory was started in 1864 at Norwich, and the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario was organized at Ingersoll in 1867. Tremendous progress has been made and dairying adopted in all parts of Canada as the keystone in the arch of Canadian agriculture.

Every country in the world laying claim to progressive legislation had adapted to a greater or less extent the fundamental principle of dairying in some form as a basis for maintaining soil fertility and thus assisting productive agricultural operations.

Prices Stay High.

The indications were that never again would there be a surplus on the world's markets of dairy products sufficient to cause a return to the low prices of fifteen or twenty years ago. War conditions had stimulated the export trade of dairy products and the scarcity throughout the entire world had resulted in prices never before realized. The question of labor would be one of the chief factors in future production.

The president deplored the fact that milk condensers, milk powder factories and milk supply plants, were branching out and securing control of the cheese factories in certain localities, and that some of the best cheesemakers were leaving the business for various reasons.

The directors' report called attention to the fact that the season just closed was not so favorable to the production of milk as that of 1915, owing to the weather conditions. It was pointed out however that the unprecedented high prices resulting from the war conditions would to some extent make up for under-production. There had been practically no export of cream during the year due to the high price of butter in Canada and the heavy shipments of butter abroad.

Buying up Cream.

The increase in the number of cream buying stations was referred to and doubt expressed as to the wisdom of this on account of possible deterioration resulting from intense competition. Satisfaction was expressed that Canada had been able to supply the mother country with such large quantities of dairy products. The prices had been high, and should stimulate production for some time to come. The prospects for 1917 were encouraging.

The directors expressed the hope that although prices might decline temporarily after the war, milk producers would continue to make dairying a prominent feature of their operations, as past experience had shown that there was no other line of agriculture which paid better than dairy farming in a period of years.

A passing reference was made to the dairy standards act passed at the last session of the Legislature, and the opinion was given that, with the co-operation of all dairymen, it would eventually prove a strong force in the improvement of dairy conditions.

Regret Deaths.

An expression of sincere regret was uttered at the death of Hon. James F. Duff, Ontario minister of Agriculture; Dr. C. C. James, agricultural commissioner for Canada, and Hon. D. Derbyshire, for many years president of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

The financial statement showed receipts for the year totalling $6,220.79, and expenditures, $5,790.95, leaving a balance on hand of $469.84.

An interesting feature in connection with the convention, and one which is attracting a great deal of attention is an exhibit of butter and cheese which is described by dairymen as by far the best in the history of the association. The prize list is considerably larger than in previous years and the exhibits are so uniformerly excellent in quality that the judges had considerable difficulty in making the awards.

Mr. Rowell Speaks.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, M.P.P., in the course of a splendid address on the food supply and the war, expressed the opinion that the Dairymen's Association was doing a very real service to the country by encouraging the production of larger quantities and better quality of one of the most important articles of food.

Especially at the present time, Mr. Rowell continued, was such a service valuable. He referred to the food restrictions in England and said: "We here in Canada can hardly realize what such conditions mean. The question of food supply is even more important in France than in England, and still more important in Germany and Austria.

"Nothing has done so much as the present war to emphasize the importance of agriculture. No country can prosper unless its stock breeders and agriculturists are producing an adequate supply of foodstuffs. It has only been possible for Germany to continue the war up to the present time by radical measures to increase the agricultural output. It was stated in connection with the agitation for conservation in England that had Germany been able to produce only as much food products per acre as was produced in England, she would have collapsed in the first year of war."

Short of Fertilizers.

Mr. Rowell went on to say that in spite of the blockade by the Allies, Germany might still be self-supporting but for the fact that she is unable to get in the necessary fertilizers. The year 1917 would be one of the most critical in Britain's history, as well as in that of the other belligerents, because of the fact that the production of wheat all over the world had fallen off 25 per cent. in 1916.

Mr. Rowell referred to the fact that Great Britain had been financing her allies to a very large extent, with the result that by August 1 next, if the war lasted that long, the British national debt would have become so huge that the annual interest charged at five per cent. would amount to £250,000,000. If the time should come when Britain could not pay in gold or could not get credit for supplies in neutral countries, she could not make the purchases and could not carry on the war unless she could produce enough to supply all her demands, either within her own borders or in her dominions. There would be a greater demand this year than ever before for supplies of both food and munitions, supplies absolutely essential to her life.

Wonderful Opportunity.

"Produce, produce, produce every ounce of food that can be raised," urged the leader of the opposition. "We have a wonderful opportunity in Ontario to give much needed assistance to the mother country. The man who leaves idle land which could be cultivated is diminishing to that extent the ability of Britain to carry on the war."

In this connection, he spoke of the wonderful work of the women of France in doing the agricultural work of the country, while the men were away fighting. It was owing to the self-sacrifice of the women of France that France was able to be fed and live. The people of Canada had not begun to feel the burden of the war and he asked, "While men pass through the Gethsemane of sorrow, sweating great drops of blood, is it possible that any in this Empire can sleep on. It is time we awakened. This is Canada's war, and we must be prepared to see it through."

Won Silver Cup.

The De Laval Dairy Supply Company, Peterborough, Ont., special, a silver cup to highest score on butter made during the month of October from collected cream Class IV, section 1, was won by W. R. Pollock, Kerwood.

President Wilson's Next Move in The Peace Game

Constantinople and the Turks in Europe May Turn Out to Be the Chief Bone of Contention in Any Peace Manoeuvre

Special to The Examiner.

(By Robert J. Bender.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—President Wilson's next move in the international peace game depends upon what confidential information he has or will receive from Germany as to the terms upon which she would consider peace.

Officials here to-day believe the Entente reply leaves practically no loophole for further advances by the President now.

Germany must furnish Wilson grounds for the next move.

It is understood, the President has information indicating Germany would agree to the following concessions:

Evacuation and indemnifying of Belgium, evacuation of France, Poland, Serbia and Roumania.

Germany would demand return of her colonies, a point not touched upon in the Entente reply.

Constantinople and the Turks in Europe may turn out to be the chief bone of contention in any peace manoeuvre.

Germany is willing to indemnify Belgium because she admits violation of a treaty 'through military necessity.'

Ultra secrecy is promised now until the President has decided on his next step.

THE ALLIES' REPLY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.— The Allies' reply to the President's note is a clear, positive and historical document. It demands restoration, reparation, restitution, eviction of the Turks from Europe and peace guarantees for the future.

A NEW NOTE.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.— The German Government has addressed a new peace note to the neutrals, disclaiming fault for starting the war.

DOOR IS OPEN.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The peace door is still open, but no tangible results are to be expected in the near future.

This was the British view as reflected in the press and on the streets today as to the effect of the Allies' reply to President Wilson's peace suggestions.

One Thousand People Homeless In New Jersey

Half Million Three Inch Shells For the Russian Government Destroyed in Big Explosion Which Rocked New Jersey Yesterday

LOSS WILL BE HEAVY

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Five million dollars damage, half million three inch shells for Russian government destroyed and one thousand people homeless as a result of the Canadian Car Company's explosion in New Jersey. Intermittent explosions caused by bursting of stray shells could still be heard early to-day in the wreckage of the Canadian Car and Foundry Co. destroyed late yesterday with a loss estimated at from six to twelve millions.

Stored in two concrete buildings, as yet undamaged, were tons of trinitrotoluol, the most powerful of explosives, used in making high power shells. Danger of this powerful explosive being reached by fire and exploded is now believed to be past.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"Ham"—it had been a long time since he had used that abbreviated name! Perhaps he, too, had slipped back into the past—"Ham will get well—and work more miracles, mother—he won't surrender even to death. His spirit and his star will bring him through."

"I almost wish," her words were faint, "he had never had a star. I wish that we were all back there—close to the strength of the hills and the graves of our dead."

During these days Paul was very constantly with his mother and by a thousand little attentions made himself indispensable to her.

It was a small thing but costly to his feelings since for every one of these moments redolent of suffering and sadness, his own soul fiber, delicate and thin as a silk thread, must afterwards pay in the reaction of a deep depression. To him echoes meant more than a positive sound, and the tears in his mother's voice, the unshed tears in her eyes, brought him a suffering so intense and genuine that when he went out the thought of returning to either of the stricken houses when she needed him was like returning to a jail. Then, too, there was the unexpressed fear which gnawed incessantly at his heart, that in spite of his belief in Hamilton, business disaster might lie ahead. He wrote often and with more effort to Loraine Haswell—and thought longingly of Marcia Terroll, who had forbidden him to see her.

* * *

Such a pregnant item of news as Hamilton Burton's accident could not long be kept from the street, and the public. On the morning following the occurrence it burst into print, and for a time the chorus of invective was silenced.

But the hands that had been raised to pull him down could not be stayed. He himself had never halted when the Gods of Chance had tossed in his lap a mighty advantage. At the first announcement that "Ursus Major" lay ill, perhaps mortally hurt, the trampled prices of securities began to revive like dusty blossoms under a shower. Day long came extras from the press heralding a bull day almost as wild and swift in its price recovery as yesterday's bear day had been terrific in its avalanche.

From post to post the deep voice of Len Haswell and other Burton lieutenants thundered in an effort to stem the altered tide—but they were generals of brigades without their field marshal, guessing blindly at a plan which had not been revealed by the master tactician. Into the eyes of Jack Staples stole a glitter of premonitory triumph as he met them, and beat them back. Burton's millions were melting like hailstones falling on hot metal and when the session ended Len Haswell turned away with an empty face. For two days he had almost forgotten in his battle lust his own heartache. Now it was over and because he had followed Hamilton Burton with his own small fortunes as a camp follower trails an army corps, he knew that he was wiped out and ruined. Hamilton might lose many millions, and "come back," but he and many like him were irretrievably done for.

One day when Hamilton had been ill for a week and had not yet emerged from the distorted land of delirium Tom Burton strolled, as immaculate and well groomed as ever, into the National Union Club, and looked about for a bridge quorum of his cronies. The doctors held out hope and the father sought relaxation from anxiety. His face was flushed, for old Thomas Burton too had felt sorely the strain of these days, and had sought his own means of dulling apprehension's edge. His brain was not versatile in such matters.

General Penfrit occupied his customary chair by a Fifth avenue window and the newcomer smiled with pleasure to find him there. General Penfrit shared many interests with him and was willing to share as many more so long as Thomas Burton's bridge game continued to be of the contributory type.

Burton strolled over swinging his stick and nodded with a bland smile, but to his dismay the general glanced up and acknowledged the greeting without warmth. Perhaps his old friend was not feeling well.

"I was wondering," suggested Burton, "whether we couldn't arrange a little rubber." He caught the eye of a waiter at the same moment and beckoned. "What will be yours, general?" he genially inquired.

"I don't believe that I care to play." The voice was chilling at the start and became more icy with each added syllable, "and I won't have anything to drink!"

Tom Burton stood looking down a little blankly.

"Nothing to drink?" he repeated in a perfectly warrantable astonishment. His ears must have tricked him.

The general rose stiffly. "With you—no," he spoke curtly, and took himself away with a waddle of studied dignity. For a full minute Hamilton Burton's father gazed vacantly out at the avenue, then he turned on his heel. Henry O'Horrisey was just entering the door and with him were two other members of a little group which had launched and chatted, played bridge inseparably for several years. Each knew all the other's anecdotes and could laugh at the proper moments. They formed one of those small cliques of intimates into which this club resolved itself, and Tom Burton was of their valued brotherhood.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," accosted Burton. "How are you all today?"

With three silent nods the trio at the door turned and drifted aimlessly across to the billiard room.

Tom Burton went and sat alonesby a window. Slowly a brick like flush spread and deepened on his full face—this club life had been very important to him, even indispensable. There was nothing with which to replace it. He wheeled his chair so that he might be plainly seen from the door and as man after man came in with whom he had spent his time and his son's money, men who had been pleased to court the father of the great Hamilton Montagu Burton, he genially accosted them, and one after another they returned their greetings of frigid formality.

Then he turned his chair with its back to the room and looked out and the stubborn pride died in his eyes, and his face grew old and pathetic. There was no further room for doubt. He was tasting ostracism and being included in this wave of hatred for his son which he had regarded as newspaper rubbish. He leaned forward with his gloved hands on his cane and once or twice under his fastidiously trimmed beard his lips twitched painfully. Finally he rose ordering his next cocktail over a hotel bar, and though the stubbornness of pride forced him back on the morrow to lunch at his accustomed club table, he lunched alone, and was grateful for the solicitous courtesy of the negro who served him.

* * *

One afternoon Paul made his way down Fifth avenue on foot.

The sky was unbelievably blue and a flashing brilliancy sparkled in all the splinters of color that embroidered themselves along the parquetry of the street. The avenue has at times a magic of its own and to-day it was a flowing stream of brilliancy and life and laughter. But this was a mood to which Paul Burton found no response. His heart was attuned to echoes of a more somber tone—and he was bound on a mission which was for him a bold one.

He was disobeying orders which till now he had not ventured to disobey. Marcia Terroll had banished him from her presence. Since that day in her apartments he had seen less of her than before and for many weeks now nothing at all. Marcia unlike Loraine Haswell, recognized that they could not meet without dangerous drifting and that such drifting could end only in disaster, so at last she had forbidden his visiting her even occasionally and to all his arguments she had steadfastly shaken her head with gentle obduracy.

For a time they had met as they might have met had the interview in her apartment on the grisly afternoon never occurred. She had torn that page out of her chronicles of acquaintanceship, and assumed that it had never been included. Her wit had sparkled for him and her individual charm had blossomed as though her life had never known a season other than spring and blossom-time. Sometimes he found himself wondering if that afternoon had been actual.

He discovered himself using quaint phrases of her invention as part of his own conversational equipment, and often he found himself applauded for some flash of repartee which he knew was only a quotation from her. But also he found himself incapable of that continuous self-restraint which she required of him under their agreement of a future basis. He had his moments when he could no more avoid feeling and acting and declaring himself her lover than he could avoid later regretting them, and for this inability he had been exiled.

"To you," she told him, "it means a minor thing—but it's not minor to me. I have had unhappiness enough without risking more. We must not see or write to each other." Paul knew nothing of what this decision cost her nor of the many letters she had written to him—and destroyed unmailed.

Now he was utterly miserable and his heart was aching for companionship outside the two houses where the mildew of misery tainted even the sunshine that came through the windows. He craved cheer and strength of a heart braver than his own and in defiance of her orders he was going to see the woman in whose presence he would find these things; the woman whom he had not seen for months

A CANADIAN SOLDIER SAYS

"... if they want to help ... to use Zam-Buk. The boys here say it is very good, and it is much in demand." This is an extract from a letter received from Pte. J. R. Smith of "The Princess Pats" in France.

There is certainly nothing so good as Zam-Buk for the accidents and ailments incidental to a soldier's life. It is splendid for all kinds of sores, blisters, burns and cuts, and it is equally good for frost bites, chilblains, cold cracks and chapped hands. Nothing ends pain and heals so quickly, and being antiseptic, an application of Zam-Buk to a wound as soon as sustained, will prevent all danger of blood-poisoning.

If you want to send your soldier friend something he is sure to appreciate—put a box or two of Zam-Buk in your next parcel.

All druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

ZAM-BUK

OIL IMPORTS.

Canada in a Year Uses Two Hundred and Fifty Million Gallons.

General indications are that the higher price of oil in Canada has not appreciably diminished the use of the automobile. Roads are as alive with them to-day as they have ever been, and the licenses being taken out in Canada are on the increase, as they are in the United States. The motor car has come to be regarded as the chief agent in the consumption of oil, and rightly so, but there are other purposes to which it is put that are at the present time making great demands upon the supply. By-products of oil are very numerous, and have become articles of very general use. One of them, paraffin wax, is the principal constituent of some of the most generally used chewing gums, and much of it is used in the making of matches. One oil company delivers about forty thousand pounds monthly to one Canadian match factory, and another delivers, according to information furnished by The Toronto Globe some time ago, one million pounds a year to an explosive company. These figures will suffice to show that the by-products of the oil industries of the Dominion are of some consequence.

The total imports of coal oil, petroleum products, gasoline, crude oil, and lubricating oil in 1916 was 238,151,648 gallons, valued at $9,563,588.

If we add to the foregoing figures the quantities of vegetable and animal oils consumed in Canada, the aggregate will not be very much less than 250,000,000 gallons.

Very few realize that, per capita, Canadians consume annually about thirty-five gallons. This does not include vegetable oils brought into the country; only mineral oils are taken into account.

The different uses to which the products of crude petroleum are being put multiply almost every year. Many years ago the ardent promoters told the public that eventually the engines which drew freight from the Atlantic to the Pacific would be propelled by oil. Scientists confirmed these statements with the conditions as to supply attached to their findings. Some of the prognostications made have come true, but many were made as to profits from the exploitation of oil wells that very properly led the over-sanguine to jail. It is true now that oil is used for hauling big trains over our mountains and for a hundred other purposes that were not thought of in the years which do not seem to be long past. Many thought that the old-fashioned paraffin lamp was doomed to pass away, but the oil companies to-day tell us that as much is being used as ever. The farmers not within reach of the gas and the electric current utilities are still very numerous and they are better off than they used to be. Moreover appliances for the use of oil have vastly improved. For illuminating purposes oil has been adapted to produce results that would astonish the age of fifty years ago. To-day far more cooking is being done by oil stoves and the accidents resulting therefrom are less numerous and the general results are very much better. Advances of this character have served to maintain the demand for oil and which fully explains the development within the Dominion of a very large and successful industry.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Elys Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

This Ointment Possesses Power To Heal The Skin

Two Cases Which Prove the Extraordinary Healing Power of Dr. Chase's Ointment

The use of Dr. Chase's Ointment is wonderfully satisfactory because you can actually see the results accomplished. It is surprising what change can be brought about in a single night by this great healing ointment.

Mr. George Beavis, 119 James street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "As a healing ointment, I consider Dr. Chase's the best obtainable. I had a large running sore on my leg, and although I had tried all the prescriptions of two doctors I was unable to get any relief from the pain or to get the sore healed. One day my druggist handed me a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I used it with such good results that I decided to give the ointment a fair trial. Altogether I used four boxes, and am glad to be able to say that the sore on my leg is entirely healed up. Since this experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment I have recommended it to many people."

Mrs. W. W. Oliver, Port George, Annapolis Co., N. S., writes: "I am going to tell you my experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment. There was a spot came on my face something like a mole, but it kept getting worse, and several doctors whom I consulted said it was skin cancer, and that it would have to be cut or burned out. I intended having this done, but changed my mind when my brother recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment. Before I had finished one box of the ointment this skin trouble had gone, and has not bothered me since. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment too much, and you are at liberty to publish this letter."

If you have never used Dr. Chase's Ointment send a two-cent stamp for a sample box, and mention this paper. Price sixty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TIM DONNAN'S LUCK

By D. H. TALMADGE

There are people who scoff at the theory of luck, but Tim Donnan is not one of them.

Tim was a brakeman on the P. and T. railway six months ago, and a freight brakeman at that, with a pretty slim prospect ahead of him. He despaired whenever he thought of a certain girl who was so practical that she refused to marry him until his salary was adequate for an establishment. The fact that she called it an "establishment" showed plainly that her emotions were under control of her intellect. A sentimental, impulsive creature who loved a man as this girl loved Tim would have called it a little home.

Tim isn't a brakeman on the P. and T. now. He is a conductor on the F. and L., and he and the girl have their "establishment" and are deliriously happy.

Luck did it, Tim says, and he proves it by telling the story.

"Mebby you know and mebby you don't," he begins in a subtle brogue, "that the windows of heaven were opened over a small spot in the northern part of Missouri one night last June. Mebby, again, you know and mebby you don't that the P. and T. road runs parallel with the F. and L. for about six miles after leavin' St. James. They cross the Blue river each on its own nice little bridge within two miles of each other, the P. and T. bridge bein' up stream from the bridge of the F. and L.

"'Twas lucky for me they fixed it so. I was sittin' on the back platform of the caboose the night when the cloud busted. My work was finished for the minute, and I was restin' and nursin' a bad fit of melancholy. My hopes were blacker than the night just then, and the night was blacker than the inside of a brunette cat. I saw nothin' to look forward to, and that's a worse state to be in than Arkansaw. I was sayin' to myself that I believed I'd commit suicide and end the agony when all of a quick sudden the train stopped.

"Mebby you never experienced the sensation of bein' on a freight train when it stops suddenly. 'Tis like a ton of coal droppin' into a man's throat.

"For a minute I forgot my troubles. I grabbed my lantern and went up ahead to see what was wrong. 'Twas easy to see. By the gleamin' of the headlight on the engine I saw a roarin', howlin' flood of water. Blue river was full and runnin' over—way over. The track on the bridge was all but covered. 'Shall we try it or not?' says the engineer to the conductor. 'Wait till we look at the bridge,' says the conductor. 'Come, Donnan, we'll go and see if 'tis safe.' And we went.

"'Twas a fool thing to do what I did then, but I was in a desperate mood, and the rushin' of the flood affected my brain, I'm thinkin'. I told the conductor I'd go across and take a peep at the anchorage on the other side. And I started, the conductor offering no objections visible to the naked ear, and got half way across mebby when—big!—a tree that made ordinary sawlogs look like matches struck the bridge and brushed me off with its branches as easy as a whiskbroom disposes of a crumb.

BRUSHED ME OFF WITH ITS BRANCHES.

"Ar-r-rah, the swim that followed!

"I don't know the words that describe it. But luck was with me. I got my hands on to a regular Pullman of a railroad tie, and I clung to it as the ivy clings to the molderin' wall. 'Twas nothin' resemblin' suicide the way I stuck to that tie. And every once or twice in awhile a chicken coop or a woodshed or a cord of wood bumped into me, knockin' out prayers like sparks from an anvil.

"'Tis my humble opinion that the current was runnin' at a rate of 410 miles to the hour. Mebby 'twas more, and mebby 'twas less. I didn't stop to measure it. Anyway, 'twas but a short time till I brought up against the F. and L. bridge with such force that six of my teeth took refuge in my stomach and a constellation of stars danced before my eyes, furnishin' sufficient light to enable me to crawl on to the bridge.

"The bridge was about ready to break loose. I crawliest off of it rapidly. I'd had all the trip by water that I wanted. I crawled off at the first end I come to, and that was luck again.

"There was a station a ways up the track, and after I'd found my hind legs again I hustled along till I got to it.

"The night operator was surprised to see me. Bein' a young chap, he reached nervously for his gun.

"'Put it away,' says I to him, 'put it away, Willy, and get a wringer.'

"'Heavens!' says he, 'is it rainin' again? You're soppin' wet.'

"'Am I?' says I. 'Sure 'tis the true nose for news you've got. You should be in newspaper work. But tell me,' says I, 'how soon the train's due.' I knew a train was about due, else he'd been snoozin'.

"'The flier goin' south,' says he, lookin' at his watch, 'will be along in three minutes.'

"'Does she stop at this station?' says I.

"'No,' says he.

"'Then,' says I, 'you'd better get out your red lamp, for the bridge is all but gone.' And he did it.

"With the flier came more luck for me. The general manager's car was on and the general manager himself, artistically arrayed in a suit of pink pajamas, was up and rubberin' around almost before I'd told the conductor about the bridge. 'Tis the way of general managers. They're mostly built so.

"He looked me over with his sharp eyes, all the time spittin' out questions as a rapid fire gun spits lead, and I answered him as intelligently as was possible without my teeth. He seemed impressed. 'You'd better go and get dry. I'll look you up and remember you,' says he. 'Thank you, sir,' says I.

"'Twas about a week after that I got an invitation to the general offices of the F. and L. at St. Jim. The doctor said I might go if I'd be careful. Another touch of pneumonia, he said, might prove disastrous. So I went, and they didn't do a thing after I got there but put me through an examination and give me one of the best runs on their system, though why they did it I'll be blessed if I can understand.

"Luck? Well, say!"

Pride Had a Fall.

"Yes, it is a pretty good cigar," said Brown, as he held it up and looked at it critically. "Jones bought it, but if he thinks he bought my silence with it he is mistaken, as the story is too good to keep. Jones, as you know, considers himself a great ladies' man, although he is old enough to know better. I was walking with him this afternoon, and he could talk of nothing but his 'latest.' Suddenly he exclaimed:

"'By Jove! There she is now, across the street. Isn't she a peach?'

"Off came his hat with a flourish, exposing his bald pate, and an idiotic grin spread over his features.

"Much to my surprise, for she did not look like a girl who would indulge in a street flirtation, she waved her hand, hesitated a moment and then started to cross the street where we were.

"'They can't resist me,' said the beaming Jones. 'Excuse me, old man; see you later; ta, ta!'

"Hat in hand and grinning like a monkey, Jones approached the young lady, who suddenly stopped, looked startled for a moment and then gasped:

"'Goodness! I mistook you for my grandfather!'"—Detroit Free Press.

HATCHING BASS FRY

ONTARIO'S RESTOCKING WORK IS FULL OF DIFFICULTIES.

Artificial Methods Pursued With Most Fish Will Not Work With the King Fighter—Culture of Black Bass is a Science Which Has Only Been Recently Developed—Male Fish Guards the Eggs.

TO the expert the reports from the Ontario hinterland that "the bass ain't bitin' so awful good this season" mean only one thing, namely, that such-and-such lake or river is getting fished out. Luckily our wealth in bass-ground is so considerable and the number of anglers who exploit them so small, comparatively, that the depletion of a lake or two is no crying matter, says Thomas Millsburgh in The Toronto Star Weekly. Yet the Government will very shortly find itself obliged to go into the distribution of bass fry on a scale to which their present operations are negligible. They do it in Michigan. Thirty years ago Muskoka's three picturesque lakes were a fisherman's paradise. Then the summer tourist started coming, and, yearly, the supply has dwindled while the demand increased. Think what additional popularity Lake Joseph or Rosseau would acquire if the bass were always "bitin' good this year!" It will come to that; for every extra fisherman who hies northward accounts for so much money taken out of hoarding and put into circulation, where it does most good.

Black bass culture (small-mouth) is a science which has only very recently been successfully elaborated. The small-mouth black bass is a nest-builder. It makes its nest by cleaning up a circular patch of gravel two to three feet in diameter, in shallow water, and the female lays her eggs thereupon. But experience has shown that if artificial nests are provided in suitably sheltered places the male fish, which attend to the business of nest building, will occupy them on their own account. It took an immense amount of experimenting to arrive at the best style of nest, but it was worth it all to solve the problem of propagating artificially, "inch for inch and pound for pound, the gamiest fish that swims."

In a state of nature the male black bass picks out a place for his nest where there is coarse gravel, in shallow water. Standing upright, with a sweeping movement of his tail he brushes away all the sediment from an area two or three feet across. Then, standing on his head, he roots over the gravel, and alternately he roots and sweeps until all the sand and smaller stones are swept to the edge of the saucer-shaped nest, so left perfectly clean. When the nest is thus prepared the male stands guard, but makes frequent circles into deeper water in search of a female bass, fetching her home with him, and remaining at hand until she has deposited her eggs on the clean gravel. If she attempts to run away she is pursued and brought back, but directly the spawning is completed he no longer detains her, and he may even drive her away.

It now devolves upon the male bass to care for the eggs and "fry." As for the female, she takes no part in the subsequent proceedings. He remains over the nest, guarding it until the eggs are hatched and the young fry are ready to leave the nest. Swimming slowly back and forth, he fans the eggs with his pectoral fins and tail to keep them free from sediment. At frequent intervals he leaves them and circles about the nest to assure himself no enemies are nigh. If another fish approaches it is attacked. When the eggs are hatched the young bass remain for some days hovering over the nest, and then leave it, accompanied and guarded by the male. Usually they seek very shallow water along shore, and the parent swims back and forth in a half circle outside his "school" of young hopefuls. This care is taken until the fry are an inch to an inch and a quarter long; then they scatter.

Unless cared for thus, comparatively few of the bass would live to grow up. Both eggs and young fish have numerous enemies — various kinds of minnows, sunfish and young bass of larger growth—which are ready to attack during even a brief absence of the parent. The same description would apply to the large-mouth bass throughout, except that their eggs usually are laid on the fibrous roots of water plants, dead leaves, or other such materials on the bottom.

To accommodate all these vagaries then was the endeavor of the artificial propagator. It was soon found that methods employed with other fish would not work; one male bass must by no means be able to see another; it always disturbed him, he generally wanted to fight. With other fish they "strip" the females of their eggs, let the males fertilize the eggs, and place them in a continually flowing current of water in trays or glass jars to hatch. It cost thousands before it was found this would not work with black bass.

It Wasn't Catching.

At a local cricket match the fielding of the home team was very poor, catch after catch being dropped in aggravating persistence. Geordie, who bowled mainly for catches, was riled to see catch after catch dropped from his bowling, and when one of the offenders, failing to hold the ball, muttered something about an "epidemic," Geordie angrily retorted:

"Hepedemic be blowed! It canna be a hepedemic, cos it's not catchin'."

ECZEMA ON FACE

WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

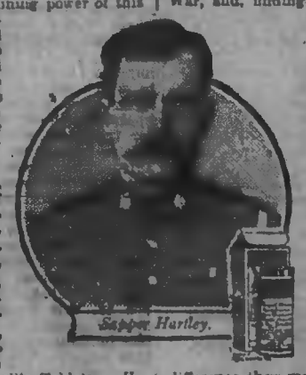
Kept Fit Through Two Wars

Ontario Sapper Praises Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

That a soldier should use and praise Dr. Cassell's Tablets is clear proof of the wonderful sustaining power of this great strength-giving medicine. And thousands of service men on land and sea are trusting to Dr. Cassell's Tablets to sustain them through all the hardships of relentless war.



Sapper Hartley.

SAPPER A. HARTLEY, OF THE A. COMPANY, CANADIAN ENGINEERS, whose home address is 806, TRAFALGAR STREET, LONDON, ONTARIO, is one of many who have written in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. He says:—"As a constant user of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I would like to add my testimony to their value. I used them when I was in the South African War, and, finding the benefit of them there, have taken them since whenever I felt run-down. I always recommend them, for I know they do all that is claimed for them. In my opinion they are the best tonic anyone can take for loss of appetite, poorness of the blood, or general weakness of the system. We have had a lot of hard training here, and some time ago I began to feel the strain, but I got some Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and the boys are surprised at what a difference they made in me. I mean to have some with me always on active service."

Dr. Cassell's Tablets put new life and vigour into weak, overstrained people. They nourish the nerves, enrich the blood, strengthen the general system, and create that snap and fitness which make life a joy. Take a course of them, and health and vital energy will soon be yours.

A Matter of Gloves.

"Did you never notice how much better men's gloves look than women's?" said the man. "Go into any public conveyance and look at the gloves of the passengers and you will be impressed by the superior condition of those worn by men. Two-thirds of the women you meet cover their hands with suedes and dogskins that are shockingly soiled and worn. It is not only women of generally shabby appearance who are guilty of wornout finger tips and ragged seams; many who are otherwise well groomed and who could afford to put on a fresh pair of gloves every day are equally culpable. Men would be ashamed to go on the street wearing such disreputable things, but women flaunt them unblushingly."

"That sweeping condemnation is unfair," protested the woman. "The condition is easily explained. Women wear their gloves much more than men, and besides it is awfully destructive to finger tips to dig around in purses for change and samples and to handle candy, to turn over books and to examine dry goods."

"Now you have jumped the subject," said the man. "I am not talking about cause. I am talking about effect. The majority of men certainly do wear better gloves than the majority of women. You cannot deny that."

"That is true," the woman admitted. "I cannot deny it; they can better afford it also."—Philadelphia Times.

The Cue Could Wait.

An American traveler in China, making his way out of the province of Shensi over the mountains, after five days of rough riding overtook his servant, who had been sent on ahead with the baggage. He reports the conversation which followed:

As a soldier half lifted me from the saddle Wang, the servant, handed me my razors. "For five days," he said, "the beard of my master is growing. I think maybe he like to cut it off."

I thanked him for his thoughtfulness, but I added, "You are in a great deal worse shape than I am. You needn't trouble about me. Have your cue braided, and then lie down on your pooka and take a nap."

He smiled with the faraway, rather sad smile of his race. "It would not be right for me to sleep, sir," he said, "before I see that you are resting. The cue is Chinese. It can wait patiently. But the beard is European. It cannot wait. It must go quickly."

Painfully Frank.

Hostess (to departing guest)—Must you go so early, Mr. Blank? Blank—I'm very sorry that I must leave, Mrs. Park. The fact is, not expecting to have such a pleasant time this evening, I made another engagement."—Boston Transcript.

Worse Still.

"Did Mr. Jobbleis pay his bill?"

"Yes, sir," answered the collector, "but he made a lot of fuss about it."

"Um! Don't let that trouble you, son. It's the fellow who bellows and doesn't pay that we should worry about."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Hint That Failed.

Visitor (waiting an invitation to lunch)—Two o'clock! I fear I'm keeping you from your dinner. Hostess—No, but I fear we are keeping you from yours.—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musty and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

N.P. SOAP

Is there any good reason why you should not even TRY N.P. Soap when so many have found it not only the best household soap, but the most economical?

LUNG TROUBLE

Was never cured by dosing the stomach. The two organs are not connected. If they were, food swallowed would choke you. For lung and bronchial troubles you must breathe the cure: and you can't breathe cough syrups, tonics and syrupy compounds! Peps provide the rational treatment for coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung troubles. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes —not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing.

On the face of it, now, does this not sound more reasonable than drugging the stomach? Try one box of Peps. A trial will cost you only 50c., and the good you will reap—well, health cannot be expressed in money terms. Be sure of the article when ordering from druggist or store. Just four letters

Peterboro' Man Struck By Train

Limbs Broken and Loses Part of Hand —Struck by Train.

TIMMINS, Ont., Jan. 12.—W. J. Thompson, member of the Legislature for Peterborough was struck last evening near Monteith by the northbound National train. Believing the train to be No. 47 he attempted to flag it, and the speeding express struck his lift hand and hurled him in against the side of the train. He was rushed to Iroquois Falls hospital and will recover, but half of his right hand was amputated and his right arm and left leg broken. Mr. Thompson is manager of the Monteith Pulp Company.

GERMAN BREAD LINES PLAN FOR REBELLION

Ominous Upheavals in Germany Cleverly Hidden From Britain—Neutral Correspondents Gagged

D. Thomas Curtin, the United States writer, who spent ten months in Germany in 1916 for British papers, wrote as follows: The feeling of German women of the lower classes seems to rise and fall in curves, changing apparently about every three months. There was a great curve of rebellious talk, food talk and peace talk, in July, of 1916. Immediately following the Somme offensive, the losses in which were not known for some weeks, but which trickled through gradually, there began the agitation for the great munition strike which was to have taken place on August 1, 1916. The dimensions of this proposed rising seem to have been effectually concealed by the German censorship. I found very little about it in the English newspapers which reached Berlin, but what I did read were isolated fragments, such as the Kaiser's appeal to the people on August 1, 1916, which, if it be referred to, will be found to include a special appeal to the workers. No one in England seems to know about this important movement.

Machine Guns Very Busy

What happened was that there was a significant movement of machine guns to all points of danger, such as the Moabit district of Berlin and Spandau, together with countless warnings against so-called "Anarchists." The German Government went through a period of anxiety, and the story, if I had space here to tell it, is one of intense dramatic interest. Casual visitors to Berlin hotels knew nothing of the subject. The interned American and other neutral correspondents dare not say a word about it, and this great suppressed upheaval has passed away for a time with other incidents of the war that have been so effectively gagged.

In the Bread Line

The notices summoning semi-revolutionary meetings are whispered from mouth to mouth by the women standing in the food lines, waiting for their potatoes, morning bread, half-pound of meat weekly, and the other ticketed supplies, for the war has produced among the lower third of the population of women a distinctly revolutionary feeling. These women do not pay the attention they formerly did to the bell ringings and flag displays which were ordered by the Government on every possible occasion, such as the safe arrival of the submarine Deutschland at Baltimore, its return to Bremen, and the first success against Roumania.

BRONCHITIS SUFFERER

Chatham, Ont., Woman Cured by a Simple Remedy.

Chatham, Ontario. "My mother came to visit us last spring and was suffering with what doctors called bronchitis, or a bronchial asthmatic cough. She coughed dreadfully, had difficulty in breathing and tightness all through her chest. She had tried Emulsions of Cod Liver Oil and other remedies without help. We had her try Vinol and the result was it soon loosened the cough and helped her to breathe easier and now she is all right." Henry Schmidt.

Vinol, you know, contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates. It enriches and revitalizes the blood and conveys to the system the vital elements necessary to strengthen the body and throw off the disease. That is the reason it was so successful in Mrs. Schmidt's case.

Anyone in Peterborough who has bronchitis, a chronic cough, or needs building up, may try a bottle of Vinol, with the understanding that his money will be returned if he is not satisfied.

THE GREAT DEPARTED

Joffre Trained Nivelle to Take up the Burden

Of Joffre at his retirement, the Paris Matin said: "But General Joffre cannot be everywhere. The French General Staff cannot always be made up of the same men. The war has been terribly fatiguing for those upon whose shoulders lay the responsibility of conducting it, and the conditions under which this war has been fought have become modified to a considerable degree by the immobility into which it has fallen. It was perfectly natural, therefore, that the burden of active command of the armies at the front should be taken from the shoulders of General Joffre and placed on younger shoulders and that the profound wisdom, vast experience, and genius for command of the victor of the Marne and liberator of France should be put to other uses. It was also just as natural that no change should be made in the organization of the General Staff, which he created, which had proved of incomparable excellence, but only in the men upon whom devolves the maintenance and direction of this organization.

General Nivelle, who becomes Commander-in-Chief of the troops at the front, was one of the favorite pupils, one of the most faithful friends, one of the discoveries of General Joffre. It is to Joffre, therefore, that France owes her new Commander-in-Chief—one more debt of gratitude. The new officers who take up their duties in the General Staff feel respect and devotion for the achievements of those who preceded them. They admire the marvelous mechanism placed in their hands. Their only contributions are new strength and new zeal for making the instrument in their hands yeld its maximum of results.

PROFIT FROM AGONY

Scottish Ironmaster Was Willing to Pay Extra Taxes

"To my mind there is something absolutely revolting in the idea of anybody making profits out of the nation's agony," said Mr. W. Lorimer, LL.D., in delivering the Chairman's address at the meeting of the Steel Company of Scotland. He said: "This war, God knows, will bring untold sufferings in more than one form to millions who have no war profits to collect and no war bonds to receive, and therefore I have felt in my own mind, long before this proposal was made, that in that direction the Government would be entirely justified in asking those who have made profits to assist those who are less fortunate. It may be, indeed, that before the war is ended the Government may find it necessary to take not 50 but 100 per cent. of those extra profits, and if they do, I hope that none of us will complain."

A considerable number of munition workers left Australia for England.

Two thousand French soldiers in Switzerland signed an album thanking the Pope for his intervention on their behalf.

For failing to produce his registration card to the police, who were visiting him on another matter, a man was fined $100 at the Marylebone Court.

TOWNSHEND—"WHAT A MAN TO FOLLOW"

Private's Tribute to Heroic British General Who Defended Kut—Tragic Incidents

Little by little the heroic epic of the British defence of Kut under the great Townshend comes to light. A despatch rider, Private Lutener of the Seventh Hussars, since returned to England, has added incidents to the general store of knowledge. One evening Lutener was lying in his bed in Kut hospital chatting to two comrades, a sergeant and a private. Suddenly there was a great rending explosion; the hospital had been struck by a bomb from above.

"I was not touched," Lutener says, "but both the men at my bedside were killed; and for three days I was conscious of nothing but the terrible shock I had sustained. I kept feeling my head and my remaining leg; it was the only way by which I could convince myself they were still there." Thirty-one men were injured by that one bomb and eighteen of them died of their injuries.

Lutener himself is a pretty tough specimen of the British soldier or he could never have survived the deprivations of that long siege. Among the Kut wounded upon whom it was necessary to perform amputation he is the sole survivor. He had wasted to a very shadow when the end of the siege came, and the doctor attributed his existence in such circumstances to the clean life he must have led. One day, when he was slowly struggling back from the shock of the amputation the general came to see him.

"I know this man," he exclaimed at the first glance. "Private Lutener, sir, of the Signal Company; carried despatches." "And how are you getting on, laddie?" I told him I was all right, and he patted me on the back, saying: "Keep on smiling, laddie. And always think that when you get home there will be thousands like you, worse luck."

When the doctor came back he said to me: "Lutener, you are a lucky man. I've been instructed that you are to have a bottle of port wine all to yourself. It is the General's last bottle, and you must take care of it." I hardly liked to take it, but I think if I had not I should never have been here to-day. But what a man to follow!

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

BRITISH COOLNESS

Changed Shirts During Charge—Much Hun Booty

An Englishman writes: Splendid work, even in the capture of prisoners, was done by the signallers, many of whom went forward with the first wave. One of them found himself all alone and wounded at the mouth of a crowded German dug-out. By way of occupation he told the men they were his prisoners, and then, using the telephone strapped round his body, called for assistance and guides for the prisoners.

The whole battle—this soldier's battle—was marked by unnumbered episodes of individual personal acts of dash and coolness. Some men were too cool. They stopped to light German cigars, to taste the excellent food or don the enemy's helmets—which they wore hilariously for the rest of the day. One man, who discovered an ordnance store, deliberately changed his damp and muddy shirt for a clean German garment from the packets.

I have never heard higher praise of our artillery, and the signs of its excellence are written on the soil. Everywhere in the near neighborhood of a trench the ground is like a Gruyere cheese. Beaumont-Hamel itself was pounded to the highest pitch of powerful precision. Some of the nests, apart from their human occupants, were worth robbing. One food dump contained excellent butter, white bread, tinned hams, soda water, and other luxuries. Cigars were "frequant and free," and the ordnance stores seem to have been of good quality. One brigade took 54 machine guns and 1 heavy mortar.

ZEPPS. IN MIDLANDS

Wonderful Escapes of Villages From Heavy Bombing

A Zeppelin which visited districts in the North Midlands about 1.30 a.m. dropped at least a dozen bombs in a small area, which, however, escaped serious damage. In one locality where a number of bombs fell there were no casualties. One missile, probably an incendiary bomb, fell in a brick yard in the midst of rows of houses, and the buildings were badly splashed with molten metal, but no fire occured.

One Zeppelin was over this area for about half an hour. The inhabitants were first warned by a rapid succession of violent explosions. They retired to their cellars until the danger was passed, after which the whole population ran into the streets.

Sunday School Lesson Questions

John the Baptist and Jesus. John 1:19-34.

Golden Text: Behold, the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. John 1.29.

1. Verses 19, 20—Why did some think that John the Baptist was the Messiah, while they rejected Jesus Christ the true Messiah?

2. How did John know that Jesus was the Messiah?

3. What are the advantages of being content to be our true selves, and to do our own work with joy and not to wish we were some great person?

4. Verses 21, 22. Would it be desirable, or easy, or hard, for you to answer truthfully, Who are you? What are you doing? What is your supreme aim in life?

5. Verses 21, 22. Why has the community a right to ask of every man, Who are you? What are you doing? What are you worth?

6. Verses 23, 24. What is the substance of John's answer to the priests and the Levites?

7. What should be done with the man who cannot give a proper account of himself?

8. Verses 25. Why did John baptise, and what did his baptism signify?

9. Verse 26. What does water baptism stand for to-day, and how much better off are the members of churches that practice baptism, than the Quakers for example who do not?

10. Verse 27. If John was the godly and brave man the Gospels picture, why did he say he was worthy to untie Christ's shoe strings?

11. Verse 27, 28. We ought to be humble is it true humanity to speak of ourselves in a more disparaging way than the facts warrant?

12. Verse 29. What did John mean by calling Jesus, "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world?"

13. Has Jesus taken away your sin, and if not, why not?

14. What reason if any is there to believe that the day will come when Jesus shall literally have taken away the sin of the world?

15 Verse 30. Was Jesus as a man superior to John, and every other man, on account of his divinity, or on account of the fact, that he had been more faithful as a man?

16. Does the fact that a man has a very superior ancestry, great ability, and is highly educated, give him any favor with God over a man of plebian birth, and ordinary ability, who is equally faithful to his Maker?

17. Verse 31. God had clearly appointed John to be the forerunner of Jesus but would you say, or not, and why, that God has a specific work for every man to do?

18. Verse 32. Did John see with his outward eyes, the spirit, in the form of a dove, resting upon Jesus or was it a mental picture? Why?

19. Verses 33, 34. If God could give John such specific instructions that he could infallibly recognise Jesus by certain signs, why cannot he give similar, clear instructions to-day, to the faithful soul?

20. How may we recognise Jesus now when he comes to us?

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn of constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomachs, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' AND SMALL WOMEN'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Individuality, simplicity and grace are perfectly expressed in this one-piece frock, designed especially for misses and small women.

Successful style treatment is shown with a panel, full length at back and front. The waist has the becoming open neck outlined with contrasting goods; the sleeves extending to neck edge give added interest to the model—they are cuffed neatly with a turn back of the same material that contributes the collar.

At normal waistline a belt fastening in front with a fancy buckle arranges the fulness and marks a skirt section that flares fascinatingly at the lower edge. While the combination idea is most effectively carried out, all one material may be employed with satisfactory result.

In the wool materials, serge, gabardine, striped and checked goods will be smart looking in this style. Navy blue serge with cream cadet broadcloth for collar and cuffs is another choice; all wool poplin trimmed with black satin is also suitable. Then if you really want to set yourself up, there is velveteen to develop this model in. There is almost no work at all to the making of it.

The dress pattern, No. 8,019, cuts in sizes 14 to 20 years. To make in size 16 requires 4 yards of 44 inch goods, with 1⅝ yards for front panel, collar and cuffs. In all one material 5 yards of 44 inch goods will do.

To obtain the pattern send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

CANADA HAS SPENT 170 MILLIONS ON THE WAR IN THE LAST NINE MONTHS

Expenditures During December Alone Amounted to $22,702,217---Revenue Shows An Increase of 44 Millions---British Conduct Successful Local Operations on the Western Front--Paris Reports Everything Quiet.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, January 12. — Canada's total revenue for the first nine months of the fiscal year ending December amounted to 166 millions, which is an increase of forty-four millions as compared with the corresponding period in the preceding year. The expenditures exclusive of the war for the first nine months totalled one hundred million.

Should the average not be exceeded for the remaining three months there will be a surplus of revenue over the ordinary and a capital expenditure of about sixty millions to be applied for war purposes.

Of the increase in revenue, customs is responsible for about twenty-eight million dollars, excise for about two million dollars, and the post office for a million and a half. At the end of December the net debt stood at 722 millions, an increase of over two hundred millions as compared with December, 1915.

Canada has spent for war purposes during the nine months 170 millions, which is just about exactly the amount expended for the same purpose during the first nine months of the preceding fiscal year.

The total war expenditures during December were $22,702,217.

PARIS (French Official Communique), January 12.—A calm night on the whole front was reported to-day.

British Pull Off Successful Attack

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, January 11.—The British official communication issued to-night says:—

"A number of minor enterprises were undertaken last night, with excellent results. South of the Ancre we entered the enemy trenches at two places in the neighbourhood of Grandcourt and took prisoners.

"Early this morning a local operation on a large scale northeast of Beaumont-Hamel was completely successful. Our troops carried an enemy trench on a front of three-quarters of a mile and established our position. An enemy counter-attack this afternoon was caught in the open by our artillery and broken up. One hundred and seventy-six prisoners, including four officers, were taken in the course of the operations in this area.

"Enemy trenches also were raided last night east of Armentieres and northeast of Ypres. Many casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

"The artillery activity has been marked in the area north of Bouchavesnes and in the neighbourhood of Lesars, Beaucourt and Forguevillers."

Greece Must Return More Definite Answer

Examiner Special:

LONDON, January 12.—Greece must return a more definite answer to the Allies' ultimatum. An authoritative report today was that such a demand had been cabled.

Higher Temperature Is In Prospect

The lowest temperature during the night was seventeen degrees below zero. This was one degree lower than the previous night when a temperature of sixteen degrees below zero was recorded. This morning the mercury in the thermometer had travelled back to fourteen degrees so with the exception of the policemen on night duty and a few transients the minimum temperature was only fully appreciated by a small number of citizens. In the opinion of the weather man the back of the cold spell has been broken and a higher temperature is in prospect.

90 PER CENT. OF CARDS HAVE BEEN FILLED IN

TORONTO, January 12.—That approximately ninety per cent. of the National Registration cards distributed in Ontario cities filled in and collected by letter carriers, is summary of returns to-day from Ontario cities. Many of those outstanding are accountable to the fact that men are away from home. Men in smaller places and rural districts are mailing direct to Ottawa, but country post offices report the general response good.

THOUSANDS OF A.R. MEN NOW HAVE A CHANCE TO ENLIST

Standard of Fitness Has Been Lowered For the Newly Authorized Construction Battalion--Age Limit is 48 Years--News of the 247th Battalion and To-day's General Military News.

Toronto, January 12. — So great is the demand for men to build railways behind the firing line that Canada has been called on to recruit and equip ten railway construction battalions for service in France. Several of these battalions have already been organized, and the 257th Batt., which will be in command of Lt.-Col. L. T. Martin, an able, experienced railway contractor of Renfrew, Ont., started recruiting yesterday. It is also announced that the 238th (New Ontario) Battalion, which is spending the winter in Toronto, has been turned into a construction battalion, as most of the men have special qualifications for railway construction, bridge building, and other branches of railway engineering work. Now that the 238th unit has been changed from an infantry to a construction battalion, it is believed that it will not be long before orders are received for the regiment to proceed to France.

Lowering of Standard.

In connection with the call for construction men announcement is made of a lowering of the standard for physical fitness for men for the newly authorized construction battalions. According to the details received yesterday by Col. F. W. Marlow, Asst. Director of Medical Services for the Toronto Military District, men with only one eye and moderately flat feet and men who have lost one or two toes, will be accepted for service. This means that many of the "A.R." men (those who have already applied and been rejected) will be eligible for service in the new battalions.

A. R. Men Eligibe.

The communication makes it clear that thousands of men who could not pass for the infantry, cavalry, engineers or artillery will be accepted for service in the Forestry, Construction and Skilled Railway Employees Battalions. The minimum height is educed to four feet eleven inches, while the age limit for these units is raised to 48 years. Men over 41 must be carefully examined as to the condition of their arteries and care must be taken that boys under the age of 18 are not enlisted. It is considered at the Toronto headquarters that the railway construction battalions will never be turned into infantry battalions, having regard to the lower standard physically of its members. Men deaf in one ear or minus a finger or two will be recruited for these very necessary regiments and the authorities point out that men joining these regiments will be "doing their bit" in the fight against the Hun just as effectively as the boys who are in the front trenches. Men whose feet are bad will be tested by a five mile route march.

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—Lost in a Toronto church while its owner was packing Christmas parcels for soldiers at the front, a costly diamond ring, the property of Mrs. R. H. Mitchell, 17 Summerhill Gardens, has been found in a front line trench in France by Lieut. Howard Webster, son of Mr. A. F. Webster, the steamship ticket agent, and is now on its way back across the ocean.

The remarkable journey of the ring commenced last November when, together with the other ladies of Bloor Street Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Mitchell was assisting in packing parcels for the members of the church at the front. Unknown to her the ring slipped from her finger into a box, and before the loss was discovered the boxes had been sealed and shipped. Immediately letters were sent to the men to whom the boxes were addressed asking them to be on the lookout for the ring.

The friends of Charlie Manners will be pleased to hear of his promotion as full Corporal, as well as winning the Military Medal, and is at present engaged carrying the food to the firing line for the signallers, to which unit he belongs. This is the third year of war for him, and he is still in the best of health, and is going to fight till the finish. He is well liked among his chums.

The Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, wishing to do honour to the returned soldiers, are giving a banquet in the Recreation-Room of the Armouries on Monday evening, January 15th, at six o'clock. They sincerely hope that every returned soldier in Peterborough will come. Personal invitations are being sent out, but it is difficult to get all the names, so if any returned man does not get one, the Chapter trusts he will accept this invitation. You are included in this invitation if you have enlisted and have been discharged, no matter whether you have seen overseas service or not.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 12.—Major A. T. Le Fevre, of this place, who went overseas with the C.P.R. Construction Corps, has been given the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, according to word received here, and appointed Assistant Director of Light Railways with the 4th Division in France.

Vote Will Be Close in West Simcoe Election

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

Creemore, Ont., Jan. 12. — Three days from the polling it is impossible for a neutral to pick the winner in the West Simcoe bye election. The vote will be close (possibly very close) with the probability that the winning candidate will have less than 100 of a majority. Who he will be, those who have followed the campaigners on both sides from start of the fight profess inability to judge.

The forecasts made by the Conservatives and the Liberal organizations differ greatly of course. The Conservatives say that T. W. Allan will win by 400 while the Liberals claim a majority of 200 for Isaac Scott.

If it could be determined with exactness how far Hon. Mr. Lucas' appeals to the race and religious passions on bilingualism have succeeded, the result of the election could be forecasted with certainty. Mr. Lucas has never deviated from using the bilingual issue to win votes since he opened his speech making tour here last Monday night.

The Orange vote in the riding is very heavy.

The Liberals point out that the Conservatives are not claiming the heavy majority they did a week ago. Undoubtedly the farmer vote will go practically to Mr. Scott.

From Collingwood the Liberals expect a majority of 200 which would be a big turn over.

Certainly the Liberals are now concentrating their forces to win Collingwood. They expect much from the great mass meeting to be held there to-morrow night, closing the campaign, to be addressed by Hartley Dewart, Sam Carter, and J. C. Elliott, three of the best platform speakers among the Liberal members of the Legislature, but more particularly upon the earnest and loyal labors of an enthusiastic corps of workers whose confidence in victory in Collingwood it is difficult to shake

TELEPHONE HEROINE

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. — A fire which broke out in the munition plant of the Canadian Car & Foundry Works near Kingsland, New Jersey, yesterday afternoon completely destroyed the factory, with a loss estimated all the way from $4,000,000 up to $10,000,000, forced the evacuation of a large part of the town of Kingsland, making 1,000 people homeless for the time, and furnished a spectacle which was more magnificent than the munitions fire on Black Tom Island last September, more splendid even, in the opinion of some observers, than such a conflagration as the Baltimore fire of 1904.

For the space of more than five hours northern New Jersey, New York city and the western end of Long Island listened to bombardment that approximated the sound of a great battle, a bombardment in which more than half a million three-inch high-explosive shells were discharged. Yet so far as the police and hospitals of all that section have been able to learn not a single life was lost, and no one was injured. Comparatively few windows were broken in the surrounding districts, and, indeed, the material loss outside the plant itself and the telephone lines running near it was very slight. The reason for this is chiefly that the shells, which were being loaded for the Russian Government, were not to be equipped with detonating fuses until they reached Russia. As fast as they were filled with trinitoluol they were set aside, point upward, in cases, like bottles of beer.

Police Prevent Casualties.

Consequently, as the flames reached each case of shells, and exploded the charges, the projectile shot high into the air — often several hundred feet. But as it descended without the fuse, which alone could explode the charge, its fall was only that of so much metal. Even so, the fact that not one of the thousands of people in the neighbourhood was hurt, so far as could be learned, was due principally to the prompt police measures in clearing out the houses in the endangered districts near by.

The muntion plant lies in the Jersey Meadows, seven miles west of the Hudson, and about a mile east of the edge of the hill on which lie the twin towns of Kingsland and Lyndhurst. The company was just finishing an $83,000,000 contract for the Russian Government, which had kept the plant busy for the past two years. Thirty-eight one and two storey buildings had been erected in the meadow, and three shifts of 1,400 workmen each, mostly negroes, were employed in filling the explosives purchased from powder companies into the shell cases, some of which were brought from the Bethlehem Steel Company and others made by the Canadian Car & Foundry Co. elsewhere. The contract was within two weeks of completion, and one of the shifts was laid off Tuesday night.

Fourteen Hundred Men Employed.

At work in the plant when the fire broke out were the 1,400 men, a considerable number of office employees and two or three hundred guards in uniform, who have been patrolling the factory ever since its erection. It was 3.40 when the blaze broke out in building No. 30, when ten or twelve men were at work cleaning the brass cases of the shells with denatured alcohol. Somehow, from somewhere, a spark fell into a tub of the alcohol and set it ablaze. One theory is that an electric drop light hung above the tub had become short-circuited, and that the spark was a piece of burning insulation.

There was another story that the spark fell from the carbon of an arc light high above. However it began, the tub of alcohol was ablaze in a moment, and the workmen in the building turned and fled without delay.

N. D. MacArthur, Chief of the factory's fire department, blew the fire whistle, and got out his volunteer workers at once, but before they could get a single stream of water to bear on the fire all of the building was ablaze. At first, too, the men were handicapped by the lack of water, many of the hydrants about the plant

TEMPERANCE FORCES WILL INAUGURATE A BIG CAMPAIGN

The "Consideration" Promised by Premier Borden Does Not Satisfy the Temperance Deputation That Invaded Ottawa Yesterday

A BIGGER DEPUTATION

Examiner Special:

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Not satisfied with the reply of Sir Robert Borden to the request for Dominion wide prohibition of the manufacture and importation of liquor, the temperance deputation which waited on the Premier yesterday, has decided to inaugurate big campaign, covering the whole of Canada, with a view to forcing the government's hand.

The organization is placed entirely in the hands of George A. Warburton, chairman of the Ontario Committee of One Hundred, who organized the campaign that resulted in prohibition in Ontario.

Petitions for Dominion prohibition will be circulated in every province, and a monster deputation will invade the capital during the coming session and wait on the Premier, and the Government.

"NEW DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE"

(New York "Herald")

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Prominent United States papers to-day as a rule commend the definiteness and tone of the Allies' reply to President Wilson's peace note. The "New York Herald" says it is a new declaration of independence on behalf of civilization. The "Times" asks if Germany and the Central Powers will have the effrontery to say that every one of the Allies' peace terms are not just. The "Philadelphia Enquirer" thinks the note leaves no hope of early peace.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. — The Entente reply to President Wilson's note to the belligerents was the basis of a general advance in munition stocks on the Exchange to-day.

Cold Weather Did Not Daunt St. Peter's Patriotic Workers

In spite of the severe cold yesterday a good crowd was present at the work-room at St. Alphonsus Lyceum and a great deal of work was done. Mrs. Jos. White and Mrs. W. J. O'Brien, the hostesses, were assisted by Mrs. M. Tooley, who poured tea, and the young ladies who served the different tables were the Misses Annie Simons, Veronica O'Brien, Bernice Giroux, Marie O'Dette, Madalyn Hickey, and Genevieve Carson.

POLITICAL FRIGHTFULNESS.

The Ontario Government has two by-elections on its hands, evidently two more than is agreeable or hopeful. In Northwest Toronto, Hon. W. J. MacPherson is seeking re-election consequent on Provincial Secretary in the stead of Hon. Mr. Hanna. In West Simcoe, the Government is trying to elect a lawyer to take the place of the Hon. Mr. Duff, who represented the riding as Minister of Agriculture. The Government is not contesting of electing both, or either, of its candidates, a significant condition of mind when we remember the difficulty of getting a Grit at the head of the poll in Tory Toronto, though the election of Mr. Lowell, the Liberal candidate in Southeast Toronto, rather broke the charm, and showed that the Government had achieved a reputation to neutralize the magic potency of the party label. In West Simcoe, the Government candidate has the prestige and precedent of a majority of 1085, piled up for its candidate only two short years ago. The Government is mentally afraid of losing the riding and is overrunning West Simcoe with its heaviest oratorical batteries.

There is a striking similarity between the Germans and the Government. When the Germans feel that they are getting licked they redouble their practice of frightfulness. Under the influence of a similar feeling the Hearst Government in the West Simcoe by-election are pursuing a campaign of frightfulness—personal abuse, and resort to every outlawed political trick and expedient. On the Government side discussion of issues have been dropped and "cries" have taken their place. Billingsgatism, which is not an issue between parties in Ontario, is resurrected in the hope of influencing a strong partisan element in the riding to cast yellow when it comes to marking the ballot. The Liberals are charged with being in alliance with the liquor interests, with strange forgetfulness of the fact that in 1914, the combination of the liquor interests and the Conservative party supporting the Government, beat Rowell, the Liberal leader, out of his boots on the temperance—his banish-the-bar policy. Beaten in debate on public issues, the Government orators have degenerated into common scolds, abusing Liberal platform speakers, and resorting to frantic appeals to prejudice and bigotry. Mr. Bowman, the Liberal whip, is denounced as a German sympathiser, because an alderman of German origin, who was elected in Kitchener, is named Bowman. Mr. Bowman is a Canadian of three generations, his forefathers having come to Canada as United Empire Loyalists—to be under the British flag—over a hundred years ago. But that does not matter; if appeal to prejudice and bigotry can hold a wavering vote it is held to be good policy. German frightfulness in the eyes of the Hun is a good policy, but it wins no victories; it only solidifies the enemy. The Government policy of frightfulness in West Simcoe—personal abuse and slander—may help the Government candidate to win—a majority of 1085 is hard to overcome, especially when the elector does not see his duty through the clear eyes of convinced judgment, but is hustled to the polling booth drunk with prejudice and blinded by the comrade of bigotry.

SAVE TO SERVE.

Among the most important of the many duties that demand our attention during this war is that of saving and thrift. The war is creating a monstrous waste in all things—manhood, money, materials, and one potent way we can neutralize this waste—and it—is to cease waste at home, to save to the uttermost, that we may help provide means for strengthening our share in the struggle to end the ghastly work of war in Europe. In this the appeal of Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister of Canada, especially appeals:

"The people of Canada should practice economy, which results in greater national saving. Every man over twenty-one understands how to economize, and every man may carry it out if he wants to carry it out. I believe the people of Canada will rise to this as to all other occasions, and that the men at the front will not suffer for lac kof shells, so far as the industrial facilities of Canada are able to provide them. Let us economize. Let us make out savings serve the purposes of war. Let the people of the Dominion, by thrift and economy, make their dollars fight the Hun."

At no time in the history of this country has ready money, resulting from abundant and well-paid employment been more plentiful or more generally distributed; but at the same time never in the history of the country or the world has there ever been more need in Canada of devoting every dollar possible to the purpose of promoting our share of the war. Especially at this time, the money we have is not our own to do as we like with; it is part of a great national trust fund to be devoted to the saving of our country and its liberties.

This war is a war of endurance; the side that holds out the longest in the availability of resources—especially money resources—is bound to win in the end. Great Britain is the financial backbone of the entente organization; and she is practising the greatest thrift; saving to the utmost. We must do the same in Canada. We can do this without much sacrifice, except in the matter of living conditions, by saving on all the items of our daily living, by practising economies, by forgoing the use and enjoyment of many things we have heretofore considered indispensable, but which, in face of the conditions of the time, have become luxuries.

The money we save can be well invested, profitably to the saver and profitably to the state. There are offered by the Dominion government bonds of debenture stock in low denominations. These bonds bear interest at 5 per cent. and are repayable in 1919. They, with accrued interest, will be accepted as equivalent to cash in payment for any future war loan that may be decided upon.

Great Britain is calling upon the people—the wage earners, the people of moderate means and small savings, to contribute to the British "loan of victory," which was launched in London yesterday. The chief points upon which Premier Lloyd George and two former Chancellors of the Exchequer, insisted at a great Guild Hall gathering, was the necessity of economy. This is the slogan by which Canada's finance minister appeals to the people.

It is to be hoped that the people of Canada will take the injunction to heart. The lesson we most need is the wisdom of economy; of forming saving habits. There is no doubt that if we could get reliable information of the amount of waste in all the homes of Canada, we should find that much more is wasted in money and money's worth in house hold operations, in waste of food and fuel, in careless care of clothing and house furnishings, and upon frivolous pleasures and objects, than is profitably and usefully employed. In the matter of waste our governments show a bad example. It is a safe venture to hazard the statement that, in the administration of the affairs of government, as much if not more money is wasted, devoted to extravagance, with inadequate value for the expenditure made, than would suffice for proper, economical, business-like and effective administration of public affairs. The government, through its Finance Minister, appeals for popular economy. Its very proper appeal would be better met if the government, if all governments, civic, provincial and national, would set the example of hewing to the line, in the matter of economical use of the public money. The public will be more ready to subscribe to war loans if they have the assurance that the expenditure of this and other public money, is to be made upon the same principle of economy, which the people are urged to practice in order to lend to the government.

THE FUNCTION AND DUTY OF A PARLIAMENTARY OPPOSITION

When Parliament meets next week at Ottawa the opportunity will immediately be availed of by Government supporters to decry all criticism in war time. War has brought many sacrifices of liberty, but neither in Great Britain nor in any of the British Dominions have the legitimate and necessary rights of the Parliamentary Opposition been surrendered. During the war the Opposition in the Canadian Parliament has scrupulously refrained from any action that might tend to embarrass or impede the Government in the vigorous prosecution of the war. But it has been found necessary to oppose the Government and some of its agents because of reckless extravagance and corruption in the expenditure of war funds and in the allocation of war contracts, and other acts calculated to destroy the efficiency and impair the military strength of the nation, so essential to the success of Allied arms. With the experience of the past two years before it, his Majesty's loyal Opposition will best consult the interests of the country and the interests of Canada's allies in this war by declining to betray its high trust through the abrogation of its constitutional functions.

Every important attempt made to eliminate criticism of the Government in past days came to naught, from the days of William III. down to the present. The war against Louis XIV. was, like the struggle with Napoleon and the present gigantic conflict, a war for individual and national freedom. But this did not deter the Tories from opposing the war and concluding a dishonourable peace. The Tories engineered the famous Bed-chamber plot, Queen Anne dissolved Parliament and called the Tories to power. The Peace of Utrecht followed. The nearest approach to a national Government in England was during the Seven Years' War, 1756-63, when Canada was the scene of British victory. The House of Commons rarely met and never debated. Then followed the intrigues against Pitt, the Peace of Paris, and the revolt of the American colonies. Waged with great bitterness for ten years by the Tories, the war with the Colonies was fiercely opposed by the Whigs in Parliament. Some of the greatest speeches in the English tongue were made during this period in both Houses by Burke and Chatham.

Between the Napoleonic wars that deluged Europe in blood a century ago and the war now raging are many points of resemblance. Then, as now, the battle was for the rights and liberties of individual nations. But this did not save the Government and Wellington from fierce attacks. The Whig opposition was carried to such extremes that Wellington was charged with exaggerating his victories, and a demand was made for his recall and for peace. The Aberdeen coalition in later years found opposition in Disraeli, who attacked the Government on the ground that it did not prosecute the war with Russia with sufficient vigor. Opposition also came from the Bright-Cobden peace party. Yet his admirers claim that Disraeli was the first to enunciate the doctrine that the duty of an Opposition in time of war is to support the Government. In the South African war Mr. Lloyd George kept up a guerrilla warfare with Chamberlain and the Government, and became so unpopular that he was forced to escape from a public meeting in Birmingham disguised in the uniform of a policeman. The Liberal party under Campbell-Bannerman never surrendered its rights as an Opposition, but criticized freely the Government of the day.

Now, when the British nation is confronted with the gravest crisis in its history, a coalition on the broadest non-party lines does not long exist without an Opposition. There is nothing in the experience of the past to justify the suggestion that the conduct of a war may be more successfully prosecuted by the elimination of a Parliamentary Opposition. The notion seems to have originated in the minds of those who are apprehensive of entrusting to democracy the conduct of a great war. Neither in the actual achievements of the soldiers nor in the temper of the people at home has it been shown that the healthy exercise of the functions of an Opposition in the Parliament of Canada is a handicap in the prosecution of the present war.—The Globe.

Alleged She Left Child on Step of Door in Hastings

The local police this morning effected the arrest of Alice Townsend, who is charged with child desertion in Hastings. Provincial Inspector Miller, of Toronto, was working on this case when he stumbled across that of a somewhat similar nature for which Andrew Magee was let go on suspended sentence and Dolly Taylor narrowly escaped conviction. Miss Townsend was arrested at a house on McDonnel Street. It is understood that the charge she will probably face is that of having deserted a child in Hastings, having left it on a doorstep.

IMPORTANT CHANGES

While there have been no trains removed from the local lines of the G.T.R. there are a number of important changes the public should notice. The early morning 8:10 train for Toronto is set back to 8:55 and is due to arrive in Toronto at 12:25. The 8:25 train to Belleville will leave at the usual time, but there will be no west close connection at Belleville. The 11:40 a.m. train to Port Hope will also leave at the usual time, but in its case there will be no close connection as heretofore at Port Hope. The west bound express with which this train usually connected has been advanced two hours and a half. These last two changes affecting the connections with the main line are the results of the alterations to the schedule on that line. But the only new feature concerning Peterborough directly is the 8:10 changed to 8:55 to Toronto.
